The Philadelphia Press recently complained because the new iron ore pool had increased the price of ore by 38 per cent. without increasing the wages of the mine workmen. This enthusiastic supporter of Mr. McKinley and Mr. Hanna was pointing out that the tariff duties on iron and steel products were in danger because of the number and the exactions of the combinations recently formed in the iron and steel industry. "The various iron and steel trades," said our McKinley contemporary, "which are raising prices by combination may find themselves stripped of all protection." We quote also the following:

> "The iron ore combination has advanced prices and not wages. It is unjustifiable. The steel billet combination, like that in ore, by raising prices, has affected all branches of steel manufacture. It has added to the cost of the farmer's steel wire. The prices of a long list of articles to the consumer will be advanced by its action."

But the Press must know that Mr. Hanna, who organized the iron ore pool, needed money for the expenses of Mr. McKinley's canvass. Mr. Hanna is the president of the Chapin Iron company, which owns the great Chapin mine. This mine stands second on the list of ore producers, and its output last year was 625,000 tons. The pool advanced prices on the basis of an increase from $2.90 to $4 per ton for Bessemer ore. The Chapin mine had its allotted share of this increase, and Mr. Hanna is interested in other iron mines.

It is plain that the increase of about one dollar per ton has very preceptibly enlarged Mr. Hanna's income. As we have said, he wanted money for McKinley's canvass. He said a few days ago that the canvass had cost him $100,000 and that only $38,000 had been contributed by other friends of his candidate. Well, the additional profits of his investment in the Chapin mine and other iron mines and associated interests, procured by means of the pool's increase of price, have at least been equal, we presume, to his expenditures on McKinley's account.

If it is true, as the Philadelphia Press asserts, (and the Press is his friend and McKinley's friend,) that he and his pool associates did not increase wages, why should the Press complain? Was not the money, or a part of it, spent in procuring the nomination of "the advance agent of prosperity?" Would it have been so expended if it had been paid to the mine workmen in additional wages?—N. Y. Times.

ME AND MARK.

HOBART'S TARIFF TALK.

The Tail of the Republican Ticket Has Been Taught How to Wag.

People who took the trouble to read Mr. Hobart's speech of acceptance were doubtless struck with the remarkable logic of his utterances on the tariff question.

The tail of the republican ticket has been taught how to wag, and, therefore, his eulogy of McKinleyism might have been spoken by the syndicate candidate himself. Regardless of the fact that McKinleyism dissipated a surplus of $100,000,000, brought the gold reserve down to the danger line and reduced the revenues to a deficiency of over $5,000,000 a month, while filling the pockets of the favored few, Mr. Hobart exalted the McKinley tariff as a great revenue-raising and burden-reducing act.

But the excessive singularity of Mr. Hobart's argument lies in his attack on the effort to reduce the tariff to a revenue basis—which all economists admit is the basis to secure the greatest revenue at least cost to the people and with least injury to trade—as a burden-increasing and trade-destroying project. In the extraordinary clarity of his mind Mr. Hobart can even see that a lower tariff "closes foreign markets against our products," unmindful of the fact that the reciprocity scheme which his platform indorses proposes to open foreign markets by agreement with other countries to take off all tariffs and engage in free trade. Mr. Hobart has forgotten how Mr. Blaine smashed his hat and denounced the McKinley bill for not opening a market for a bushel of American grain or a barrel of American pork, and that reciprocity was a device to cover this weakness.

The logic of the McKinley campaign is "one of those things," as Dundreary used to remark, "that nobody can't know anything about."—St. Louis Republic.

——Mr. McKinley's satisfaction at a visit from a Foraker club the other day is entirely natural. A Foraker club is an improvement over the Foraker knife, which has been seeking soft spots in the McKinleyan anatomy for some years past.—Chicago Chronicle.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

Varying Views of Democratic Journals on the Free Silver Ticket.

Its free silver plank is a child stolen from the republican household. In other respects it challenges law, order, decency, honesty, good government.—Utica Observer.

Bryan has been unanimously chosen champion of the silver hosts and will lead them on to victory. Around him the entire army of bimetallists will rally, for in him they all have confidence.—Columbia (S. C.) Register.

In nominating William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, for the presidency the democratic national convention at Chicago has decided wisely and well. A better man for the position could not have been selected. His name will be a tower of strength in the west and south.—Roanoke (Va.) Times.

Altgeld, Tillman and the other sages of the sixteen to one philosophy have solemnly resolved that the very fact that gold and silver have certain market values relatively to each other in other countries is a good reason in itself why this is "anti-American," and, therefore, to be ignored and resisted for the sake of our "indomitable spirit and love of liberty." This is not democracy, but midsummer madness.—Baltimore Sun.

It will take more than the dictum of a convention, chosen and managed as this has been, to make free silver, leading to immediate silver monometallism, a principle of the democratic faith. The democratic party is greater than any man within it, and has survived more than one mistake. It will outlive this one and triumph in spite of it, because it ministers to the eternal needs of the republic and stands as the only representative and bulwark of the rights of a free people.—St. Paul Globe.

By declaring for a debasement of our currency and the semirepudiation of public and private debts the convention made this the only real issue of the campaign. Nothing else will be seriously considered. It will dominate the canvass. It will decide the election. It is a blunder that would be inconceivable if it had not actually been made. It pushes democracy out and brings populism to the front. It will render support of the ticket impossible by hundreds of thousands of democrats.—N. Y. World.

In its menaces of bankruptcy, repudiation and anarchy the platform exceeds the worst that was conceived of the brazen and reckless demagogues who have temporarily usurped control of the democratic party. No sound-money democrat can stand upon the platform. No patriotic citizen can consult his self-respect and vote for a man willing to commit himself to such a destructive and dishonorable purpose by accepting a nomination for the presidency at the hands of the silver-populist gathering in Chicago.—Philadelphia Record.

The Chicago platform should be openly and formally repudiated, and independent democratic candidates, representing honest money, the maintenance of the gold standard and of the public credit, should be nominated and supported by an electoral ticket. Thereby not only the state democratic organization, but also the future of the national organization will be protected. When the cause of silver monometallism shall have collapsed, the honest-money organization will become the nucleus of a rejuvenated national democracy.—Buffalo Courier.

Heretofore democracy has declared universally against paternalism and centralization; heretofore democracy has stood for the people, the rights of the people to attend to their own affairs, has opposed making the treasury department under acts of congress the general and only bank of issue and the supervisor and the dictator of the affairs of the people. But in this democratic platform the new democracy has most certainly departed from the old paths and has taken to the worship of strange gods, those of paternalism and centralization.—Nashville American.

Dominated by men who are strangers to the democracy and by ideas even more grotesque in their novelty, the Chicago convention has named a leader who is not a democrat and adopted a platform which is not democratic. By its revolutionary and sectional fury, by its shameful indorsement of the republican and populistic heresies of cheap silver and greenbackism; by its cowardly abandonment of tariff reform and by its amazing demand for the resoration of the barbarous spoils system, no less than by the nomination of a man wholly unfit, the Chicago convention absolves all democrats from allegiance to its candidates and its principles.—Chicago Chronicle.

Mr. Bryan is respected as an individual and is admired for his oratory, but that he is a democrat or stands for democratic principles cannot be seriously contended by anybody. If the candidate is not democratic, much less so is the platform. It is not alone because it is for free silver; it is because it is populistic as well. The situation is grave in the extreme, if not as critical as it was in 1860, and we counsel patience and wisdom on the part of thinking men in this emergency. Those who feel that the very life of the nation is at stake should act with kindly moderation until a united course of action is decided upon, when all the earnestness and zeal of patriots to country and party will be needed.—Milwaukee Journal.

The triumph of silverism and populism won by the politicians at Chicago is but the beginning of the battle. The campaign for national honesty, honor and safety has yet to be taken up by the people and waged to a finish in November. The people are both honest and patriotic. They have only to be awakened to the new danger that menaces the country to arise in its defense as they did in '61.—N. Y. Herald.

A bad platform has been adopted in the face of the profound protest of the democracy of New York and the east, and populism is riding rampantly in the democratic saddle.—Troy Press.

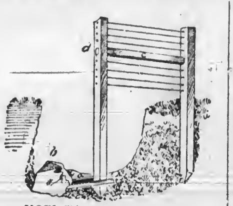
AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

BRACING END POSTS.

How to Do It So That They Will Not Give the Least Bit.

In fence building, one can very easily spend plenty of money, and if not careful in selecting the kind of fence, and building it, one will be disappointed in a year or two, to find his fence all sagged and out of shape. For cheapness, durability and neatness, there is nothing better than either the smooth wire fence, or woven picket. The end posts are the secret of sucess. These must be solid, as the strain all comes on them.

I will try to illustrate my way of bracing an end post, that holds them perfectly solid. The plan is original with me, and I am glad to say that there is no patent on it. The end post should not be less than six inches square, and eight feet long, four feet in the ground. About six inches from the end that goes into the ground, cut two notches, two by four inches, on opposite sides of the post; spike into these notches two two by four pieces, about six or seven feet long, and let about six inches project past on one side, the remainder on the other side. Dig the hole four feet deep, and long enough (parallel with the fence) to admit of the scantling, with the long ends of the scantings from the fence. Get a large bowlder, the larger the better, and place on these scantlings, fill up with dirt, and tamp well. I also put in a brace parallel from the first to the second post.



HOW TO BRACE A FENCE.

The cut will show what I mean: a designates the scantling, b the bowlder, c the brace, d the ratchets on the post to hold the wires. End posts braced in this manner cannot give the least bit.—Rural New Yorker.

INTELLIGENT EFFORT.

Upon It Depends the Success of Every Farmer in America.

A farmer's success surely depends upon effort, but in reckoning the value of his effort, the quality is of greater importance than the other amount. A little intelligent effort goes much farther than a great deal of misdirected effort. There are here and there rugged sons of toil who, having wrested wealth from the forest and field by the might of their brawny arms, are inclined to belittle other methods than those which they employed, and to pooh-pooh at what they call "new-fangled notions," but times and conditions change, and we must change with them. The lawyer, the doctor, the preacher, the mechanic in every line, if he would achieve the greatest success, studies constantly and never fails to adopt every good new thing he finds; would the farmer belittle his vocation by saying it is so purely the work of drudgery that there can be no improvement? Certainly not; in hardly any other occupation of man is there such a broad field for the application of scientific knowledge, such great opportunities for constant and important improvements, and it is upon his ability to make these improvements his own, that the farmer's success depends.—Farm News.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Sheep kept in a thrifty condition grow the most wool.

To a very considerable extent people make for themselves the conditions of life.

Even with the most carefully prepared food the greater portion digested goes to supply heat and energy.

Because poor sheep have light fleeces is not proof that fat sheep have heavy ones.

Good stock, crops, fertility and industry are essential items in good farming.

When animals are allowed to run down there is a weakening of vitality, and especially of the digestive organs.

As an animal grows fat it consumes less in proportion to size, digests less that is consumed and gives a less return.

Confining any farm animal in dark quarters is injurious to it and, therefore, more or less damaging to the owner.

One of the reasons why many fail to make farming as profitable as they might is because of lack of attention to details.

In nearly all cases it is unwise to discard all of the old sows at one time and supply their places with young untried ones.

The cow which will profitably convert the largest amount of food into rich milk or cream is the most profitable to keep.—Farmers' Union.

Buckwheat as a Catch Crop.

Buckwheat is not raised extensively in many sections. It can, however, be successfully grown as a catch crop. Sow in June or July at the rate of two to five pecks per acre broadcast. It will grow on very poor soil. If wheat ripens early this year, which is probable, buckwheat can be sown on the wheat field. It is cut with a self binder and shocked and thrashed like other small grains. If bees are kept, the buckwheat blossoms furnish excellent honey, and by sowing at several different dates quite an extended honey period is obtained. During seasons when clovers, etc., are not abundant, buckwheat as a bee pasture is important.—New England Homestead.

TWO SWINE DISEASES.

How to Treat Animals Suffering from Thumps or Scours.

In his address before a Wisconsin institute, S. H. Todd gave the following remedies and treatments for two common troubles in swine:

Thumps.—You ask what to do for it? I say feed your brood sow differently. If you don't you are sure to have that disease which has carried off so many thousand pigs. If you have the disease sometimes it is good to apply coal oil on the stomach of the pig, bathing him thoroughly, and perhaps giving him a little; another good thing is to give the pigs exercise, and if they won't take it themselves, go in with a little switch and drive them out. But the best thing is to prevent it, and very often it is wisest to take a club and give them one more thump and get out of it in that way. If they wear the disease out the pigs will never amount to much. We are justified in keeping only the kind of pigs that will return to us the greatest profit, according to the present market price of pork.

Scours.—How many times we make a mistake in not feeding the mother properly, and the pigs get to scouring, and they are put back for a whole week or more. We must feed her very lightly, and if the pigs do commence to scour give her a teaspoonful of copperas; dissolve it in her slop; that will regulate the whole business. After the pigs are two or three weeks old provide a place for them by themselves and begin to feed them. Here again don't make the mistake of having one of those V-shaped troughs unless you want your pigs to have long noses and to wrangle over their food and spill swill all over themselves. They want to be clean that is their nature, but you have prevented them from being so. Let them have a little trough by themselves and have the feed as near like milk as you can make it. We use oilmeal and corn. I had rather use middlings than any thing else, with a little oilmeal. I think that is the best pig food that we can get. Make the food thin; use water, if you haven't milk.

FEEDING THE PIGS.

Errors Made the First Three Days After Birth Are Fatal.

The first two or three days of the pig's life is a critical period. If a mistake is made by the feeder, the error is fatal to success. On the first day pure water only, with the chill taken off, should be provided.

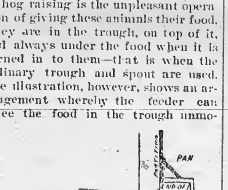
On the second day only a thin slop of wheat middlings must be given sparingly, with care to give too little rather than too much. A good sow is a great milker, and if fed liberally when the pigs are small, they will not be able to take all the milk, and the result is a caked udder or fever and the consequent drying up of the milk. After the second day the feed can be gradually increased as the pigs are able to take all the milk, and both sows and pigs will thrive, and the pigs will grow as no other live stock on a farm grows. In a few days they will show by their funny antics at play that they are feeling good, and are ready to make good returns for all the feed the owner furnishes, provided he has the good sense to feed just a little less than the dam will eat and thus keep her appetite sharp and digestion good, with no risk of surfeit and consequent indigestion.

After every meal the trough should be licked clean. If anything is left the feed has been too heavy. No farmer ought to own a brood sow who is not observing enough to notice whether or not anything is left in the trough after feeding.—Rural World.

IMPROVED HOG TROUGH.

A Contrivance Which Robs Pig Raising of Its Terror.

One of the most unpleasant features of hog raising is the unpleasant operation of giving these animals their food. They are in the trough, on top of it, and always under the food when it is turned in to them—that is when the ordinary trough and spout are used. The illustration, however, shows an arrangement whereby the feeder can place the food in the trough unmolested by his pigship, and place the trough before him in an orderly and becoming manner. The trough is made like a draw, and pulls out to be filled. It can then be pushed in under the end guides (shown in the cross-section), with none of the unpleasant features mentioned. These end guides hold the trough in place, as does also the stout button on the outside of the front of the pen.—N. Y. Tribune.



IMPROVED HOG TROUGH.

Injudicious Feeding of Horses.

The effectiveness of working horses, and especially on farms, is often impaired by injudicious feeding. The subject is better understood than it used to be, but there are yet far too many instances of horses being put to work with stomachs overloaded, and yet not providing the nutriment needed to give the muscular strength which hard work always requires. Hence the horse is always slow in his gait and soon tires out. This overloading the stomach with unnutritious food is mainly due to the average farmer's dependence on hay as the staple and cheapest food for horses. Really, so far as effectiveness goes, grain, and especially oats, are always cheaper than hay. Liverymen and those in cities who keep horses soon discover this fact. They have to buy all that their horses eat, and learn to discriminate. When they feed hay exclusively they find that the horse is incapacitated for fast or long driving on the road.—Rural World.

RURAL SURVIVALS.

Reminiscences of the Past About the Northern Waterways.

You find everywhere reminiscences of the past clinging like a green growth about the northern inland waterways—reminiscences of those past days of which old Lossing, in his ever-delightful Field-Book, writes of "a neat little canal packet, its cabin crowded with passengers and a well-supplied dinner-table, and its deck piled with as much luggage and as many loungers as low bridges and a hot sun would allow," and of which he says: "For a loiterer who takes no notice of the passing hours and who loves to glide along listlessly amid green fields and shady woods, a voyage upon a canal may be really delightful, especially if the face of nature is attractive, and a companion or agreeable book assists in smoothing the passage of time." The old fellow so wrote his delightfully stiff and formal phrases about 1850. That was in the very palmy days of canal travel, and it is of those days that reminiscences still cling about the purlieus of locks and of open basins.

I spent nearly an hour of one still and tranquil evening with an old lock keeper, listening to his narratives of those bygone days. He told me with great circumlocution of how the rival packet companies used to run their boats with 12-horse teams and a great show of colored trappings and jingling bells; of how the crews of the packets used to quarrel whenever they would meet; or how the companies always provided crews of fighting men to punch the heads of the crews of the opposition line. He told of how the passengers used to crowd the decks; of how the gentlemen used to step ashore at the locks; of how the bar could not supply them fast enough with drink.

The presence of the smooth, glassy stretch of waterway, and the cataractal rush of water overflowing the upper gate into the lock where the continual accompaniments to his words, the background to the narrative, and they made it all seem very real. I could picture to myself those old-time packets, their decks crowded with passengers—the men with bell-crowned hats, high-rolling collars, and stocks; the women with smoothly brushed hair, big bonnets, ample skirts and leg-of-mutton sleeves. I could fancy the Homeric battles of the fighting crews, their red shirts, the hair curled forward over the cheeks, the trousers tucked into their top boots. I could imagine the shouting and brawling when the packets met—the screaming of the ladies and the confusion of the gentlemen.

The old lockkeeper got up to open the gates to some on-coming boat, and I sat down and watched the lumbering hulk as it sank lower into the lock, with a vast and tremendous rushing of water out of the wickets. I did not go away, and by-and-by the old man came back and resumed his reminiscences, and I sat there far into the gathering of the warm, starry darkness, beholding, through him, as it were, a glimpse of other days and of another life, gone never to return, excepting in the dim twilight of the imagination.

Those peaceful narrow stretches of water highways! Those gentle, kindly, simple folk! Those slow-moving, heavy-ladened barges, with the innocent, pan-like music of mouth-organ or accordion sounding distantly from the little cabin-house upon the deck! Haply I shall voyage thither among them some time again; if not, those things shall linger with me as a sweet and tranquil memory of a passage of very happy hours.—Harper's Magazine.

PLAGUE OF OFFICEHOLDERS.

France Is Suffering from an Excess of the Tax Eaters.

France's chamber has met anew. Speaking from an arithmetical standpoint, the reforms look harmonious. They will consist in doing away with 187,000,000 francs of fiscal duties received by indirect revenue, and replacing that exact sum with an increased taxation on the incomes derived from property; also in a tax on bank values, domestic and foreign, besides the tax which seemed to have been given up on exterior sings of luxury—house rent, servants and horses.

The tax on servants and horses means thousands of "Jeamses" without employment and an increase of bicycles, instead of carriages. So the fiscal problem is not to be solved with these reforms.

At the present hour the French pay more taxes than any other nation in Europe. While the Frenchman on an average pays 112 francs for taxes, the German pays 62 francs, the Italian 60 francs, the Austrian 54 francs, the Englishman 51 francs. The trouble is that in France budgets never have been modified. The reformers have never made what might be called reforms, for real reforms would mean economies in the administration. The evil of "functionarism" that overburdens the public treasury and monopolizes the best part of the activities of the nation is little known abroad. In one of the departments of administration you may count 30 chiefs for 65 employes; in another 15 superiors for 22 "understrappers," and in a third 36 bigwigs presiding over 42 scribes. Thus you may see that, if he would suppress some of these officers, the secretary of finances would not need to torture his mind further to invent the means of economy.—N. Y. Press.

Decay of Kimberley.

Some idea of the decay of Kimberley, Africa, in recent years may be gathered from a statistical table included in the mayor of Kimberley's recent annual report. The highwater mark of the town's prosperity, in so far as it was reflected in municipal finance, was reached about 1890, when the value of property in the borough was assessed at $7,500,000. Since that time Diamondopolis has been gradually slipping down hill and its property is now valued at $3,700,000.

JUST REVERSED.

How Bridget Interpreted the Dream That Went by Contraries.

An old Irishwoman, who has received may benefits at the hands of a benevolent minister and his wife, is so shiftless that occasionally the large-hearted couple lose all patience with her; but she has such a sense of humor, and such a beguiling tongue that she never fails to amuse them and finally to win them back.

At one time when money was given her to buy warm underclothing with, she wasted it upon a large photograph album. The minister spoke to her with considerable severity, as did also his wife, and for some time Bridget received no calls from either of them.

One afternoon, however, the minister relented and stopped at Bridget's door on his way to see a sick woman.

"Shure, and it's mesilf that dreamed about you last noight, Misther Williams," said Bridget, with a beaming smile. "Oi dreamed that you and Missus Williams came here to see me, and says you: 'How are you off for tay and coffee, Bridget?' and Oi says: 'It's niver a drop of ayther Oi've got in the house, Misther Williams!' And thin you presinted me wid a pound of tay, and Missus Williams wid a pound of coffee on the shpot! Yis, sorr, that was me dream."

"Well, Bridget," said the minister, striving not to smile, "you know dreams are said to go by contraries."

"'Shure, and that's fwhat Oi said to mesilf," exclaimed Bridget, triumphantly. "Said Oi, 'Misther Williams is the wan that'll be giving me the coffee and Missus Williams the tay!' Thim was my very thoughts, sorr."

A MINISTER'S WIFE.

The Frank Statement of the Pastor of Bethel Church.

From the Advertiser, Elmira, N. Y.

DR. WILLIAMS.—Dear Sir:—My wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism for more than three years, suffering at times with terrible pains in her limbs, and other times with a severe "crick" in her back which causes great agony. She spent much for physicians and medicine, but secured only temporary relief; finally she concluded to try Pink Pills. She has taken eight boxes and I can say from the first one she has improved until now she is almost entirely free from pain, and has grown much stronger and feels confident that, by the blessing of God, they will effect a permanent cure. We take great pleasure in recommending them to our friends.

(Signed.) REV. J H. BUCKNER,
Pastor Bethel A. M. E. Church, Elmira, New York.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

With a sharp stick you can turn up the dirt and get ground ready for planting—but what a clumsy, slow, laborious, ineffective way of going to work! Not much more so, though, than the old-fashioned way of washing. Think of it! Grinding the clothes up and down on a wash-board, with nothing but soap and main strength to get out the dirt. Then think how simple and easy is Pearline's way—soaking, boiling, rinsing. You need Pearline for all your washing and cleaning. You need something better than soap or a sharp stick when you're dealing with dirt. 516

Showater, of Georgetown, and champion chess player, has gone to Germany to play in an international contest.

Finley Campbell, of Stanford, shot his wife three times, but not fatally. A quarrel over her treatment of his former wife's children, was the cause.

The Kentucky Chair Company was awarded a judgment for $6,000 against the insurance companies for losses sustained when the warehouses burned about one year ago.

The Mason & Ford Company has made another contract with the State for four hundred convicts at 35 cents each per day. The labor will be used to make brooms and shoes.

Zora Trumbo, the Morehead youth who confessed to having stolen several watches from Hamilton's jewelry store, escaped from jail. Somebody furnished him tools to cut his way out.

The Kentucky Prison Commissioners claim to have made a most advantageous contract for the out put of the penitentiary chair factory. A. D. Mrrtin, of Chicago, is the contractor whose bid has been accepted.

The State officers are after the Pacific Railroad Company and will see to it that the big corporation doing business in California on the charter granted by the Kentucky Legislatuse pays a proper tax to the State.

The cannel coal mines on Straight creek, Carter county, under control of several different companies, will be put into operation. These mines have been idle the better part of the summer. Three hundred miners will be employed.

Near Camden, Anderson county, Beverley Proctor was poating a notice that the family of Rev. Wm. Bentley must not use water from a certain spring. Mrs. Bentley went to the spring and attacked Proctor with a fence rail. Proctor struck her with the hatchet he was using to nail up the notice. He was arrested and fined $40.

The results of the recent national conventions have fallen with heavy force upon two brand-new infants in the vicinity of English. Elmer Gradon has named his latest addition Abraham Lincoln Ulysses William McKinley and John Vaughan calls his heir Thomas Jefferson Andrew Jackson James Monroe William Jennings Bryan.

Locust Creek, Saturday night played sad havoc with the crops planted in its bottoms. The oldest settlers do not recall such a flow of water. The toll gate house on the Augusta and Brooksville turnpike was almost swept from its foundation; water rushed in to the depths of 27 inches before the occupants could remove any of the household goods.

The Governor pardoned Pat Cane, the Boyle county man, in the penitentiary for manslaughter. In passing upon the case the Executive says that it is evident from the record "that the jury could have acquitted Cane without doing any violence to the evidence." Eleven of the jury asked for his pardon, which was also prayed by a large number of county officials and citizens.

Laughlin the double murder was condemned to death in the Bracken circuit court, last week. Laughlin's crime was committed February 16, last. He brained his wife and his niece, Mary Jones, with a poker, and then set fire to the house. His rambling story about a robber having done the deed did not receive credence, and he confessed soon after his arrest. He was taken to Maysville for safe keeping.

A red hot Democrat in Carter county, not long since delivered a speech with a sentence contained therein as follows: "The Democratic platform is so wide that it reaches from the Atlantic on the East to the Pacific on the West; so long that it reaches from the North pole to the South; so high that you can stand on it and tickle the feet of the angels in heaven: so deep that you can descend and hand an icycle to a Republican in h—ll.

The report comes from Taylor county that wheat is sprouting in the stack. The oats crop has been materially injured and the corn is beginning to sufter. There was not over half a crop of tobacco set, and that is "frenching," and suffering from lack of cultivation. A business man who has traveled over Adair, Green and Taylor counties reports that the outlook for tobacco is very gloomy, and that not exceeding a third of a crop will be housed, and that of an inferior quality.

An interesting suit involving prominent tobacco growers of Todd county (Ky.), has been brought by St. Clair Shanklin, of Fairview, against his brother-in-law, G. N. T. Latham and T. T. Harned and William Tucker. He "wanted to handle a little tobacco," and, in order to secure the necessary funds from the Hopkinsville warehousemen was compelled to give a mortgage of his farm. His wife was at first adverse to signing away her right, but finally agreed to do so. Then it transpired that the defendants in the suit had written to the warehousemen advising them to not let Shanklin have the money as he was not competent to buy tobacco, and as he was forcing his wife to sign the mortgage. Shanklin now avers that he has sustained damages of $1,000 at the hands of the defendants and asks judgment. All of the neighbors have been summoned as witnesses on one side or the other, and the case has stirred up the good people of Todd county.

CROP AND STOCK.

Chinch bugs are doing great damage to crops in Nicholas county.

Lightning killed three $50 steers belonging to Major John D. Harris, near Richmond.

The prospect for a good corn crop was never better. Tobacco is also looking fine.—Georgetown Times.

There is some inquiry for fat cattle in Montgomery county, but buyers are only offering 3¼ cents per pound.

Mr. John F. Payne, of Fayette county, had 79 acres of wheat that averaged 25 bushels to the acre. Part of it was old corn ground and this cut the average down very much. The best of the land produced 34 bushels. He sold at 52½ cents per bushel.

The Southwestern Millers' Association, at Kansas City, has issued a wheat crop report estimating Kansas at 50,000,000 bushels, Oklahoma at 7,000,000 bushels, Nebraska the largest crop on record, with a yield of twenty-five to forty bushels per acre; Missouri at 20,000,000 bushels, Texas at 4,000,000 bushels, and say that the Mississippi Valley will raise 50,000,000 bushels more than last year.

A great many blackberries are being shipped from this county to Greencastle Ind., where they are made into wine. The fruit is picked and poured into barrels sufficiently tight to hold the juice and is thus shipped. One cent per pound is paid for the fruit delivered at the depot in Madison, it matters not what condition it is in—"the sourer the better." This is a new thing here, but is not objectionable however.—Milton News.

The Kentucky crop report from the Commissioner of Agriculture says the average yield of wheat over the State is 6¾ bushels per acre. The counties reporting the largest yield are Nelson, 12 bushels; Carlisle, 10 bushels; Fulton, 11 bushels; Trigg, 10 bushels; Union, 11 [illegible]; Henderson, 9 bushels. The counties reporting the smallest are Allen, Breckinridge, Hardin, Madison, Meade, Oldham, Simpson and Washington, 4 bushels each, and Butler, 3 bushels. Recent copious rains have hurt the corn crop correspondingly in Western Kentucky, and no improvement is noted in the tobacco yield. Oats look promising, and the hemp yield is estimated at 82 per cent. Apples are still reported falling badly, and peaches are rotting on the trees, the price being too low to pay expenses of shipping.

The colored Odd Fellows celebration held in Wm. Payne's woods, near town, last Saturday, was a very successful affair. There was a large attendance, and the procession was a very creditable one. Two brass bands headed the procession and marched from the Odd Fellows Hall to the grove.

A. M. Draper and A. Huber, of West Liberty, Ohio, were here Thursday making a trip on their bicycles. They represent the Boston Rubber Shoe Co., and are enroute to the City of Mexico, expecting to make the entire trip on their wheels, arriving there by October 1st, when the exposition opens there where they will have charge of an exhibit.

OWEN COUNTY.
[Herald]

The Chicago ticket takes well among Democrats here, with a very few exceptions. They say it is a strong ticket and one that will win.

The case of J. M. Bourn vs, the County Court was argued before Judge Greene last Thursday by Lindsay & Botts for Mr. Bourn and J. G. Todd for the county. The Court granted a temporary injunction, making an order enjoining and restraining the County Court, the Fiscal Court and magistrates from making any order appointing committees to receive, purchase or obtain any turnpike roads that will cost the taxpayers anything, or to levy any tax to pay for same. Of course this disposes of our free-turnpike business until the next term of court, in October at least.

The following has been received through the postoffice, presumably for publication. Mr. Martin was foreman of the late grand jury:

We, the grand jury of the Owen Circuit Court, June term, 1896, in view of the fact that but few indictments were found by our body for violation of the local option law, desire to say to the public that divers witnesses were examined by us touching their knowledge of the above offense, and the substance of the testimony seems to be that whisky is not sold, but is given away, bottles being laid around for those who want it to stumble over and find as if by accident. How far these statements are true eternity, if not time, will disclose. The fault is not with the law nor the grand jury, but to our minds it proves the awful and desperate chances men and boys will take in evading the truth and the law, that strong drink may have a right-of-way in its course of devestation and ruin.

[News]

When we get licked we know it and don't you forget it.

Free turnpikes and free silver is what the people want, and by the eternal they are going to have both.

The brick masons began work on the new Baptist church Monday and a sufficient force is at work to finish the job in about 2 weeks.

Owen county will go back this fall to her old time majority, though there be lots of democrats who opposed 16 to 1 they wont follow any of the bolting contingent.

Dr. J. L. Massie is now behind the prison walls, having been taken there last week by Sheriff Gayle, the Governor refusing to grant a pardon. It cost the State lots of money to accomplish it, but at last the law is vindicated. The Warden found in his hat enough morphine to put half the prison to sleep, and it was thought that he either was a morphine fiend or contemplated suicide. The Doctor, it is said, had sworn he would never go to the pen hence it is believed that he contemplated the latter, as he seems to have suffered no ill effects since by being deprived of the drug.

Judge Green is a great bookworm, and from the liberal manner in which he patronizes the book agent he dont care for the cost so it is a book that suits his fancy. The latest addition to his library is an eighteen dollar book of biographical sketches of prominent Kentuckians. The Judge prizes it very highly, and says he is of the opinion now that any man who says he wont patronize a pretty book agent has not within him any of the milk of human kindness and admiration. "Oh, yes, always send the book agent around. God bless 'em. I love 'em."

It will perhaps be a glad surprise to many to know that Bryan, the nominee for President, is closely connected by blood to the wife of our worthy citizen, Mr. A. Cobb, and by marriage is connected with the Cobb family of this county.

THE latest reports from St. Louis indicate that the Populists will endorse Bryan.

THE Pops appear to want to make things pop all by themselves, in the campaign this fall.

To be in the fashion the Populist convention now in sessian at St. Louis must breed a bolt.

Two National conventions in session in St. Louis this week, the Populist and the silver party.

AND Senator-elect Foraker will make one speech in the interest of Major McKinley, and then start for Europe.

IF the Democrats in this State do not get together in this campaign, Republican control in Kentucky is assured for many years to come.

THAT base ball has a very strong hold on the people of this country was attested by that immense crowd at the Cincinnati park last Sunday —24,944.

CHAIRMAN JONES is undecided as to where to locate Democratic headquarters. It is the desire of all the Democrats that he manage the campaign so as to continue Democratic headquarters at Washington, D. C., and to that end they will ever work.

THERE are several Democrats in this county who have declared their intention to vote for McKinley, while others will refuse to vote at all; but if the Democrats who support the nominees of the Chicago convention will turn out in force at the polls Boone will poll her usual Democratic vote.

THE campaign for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the seventh, will be unusually lively again this fall. Breckinridge, Owens, Settle and Carroll, constitute a team that can make things hum. It is said that an effort is being made to get Breckinridge to refuse to contest the nomination with the other candidates, and make an independent race.

THE Populist convention now in session in St. Louis is having its wrangle. The endorsement of Bryan for President is proposed and urged by some, while others are fighting it and demanding that the convention nominate its own candidates for President and Vice-President. The opposition claims that by endorsing Bryan the Populists will lose their identity as a party.

IT is believed that there is a dicker on between McKinley and the gold-bug Democrats who have repudiated the action of the Chicago convention. Can it be thet they are trying to get the Major to pledge himself to prevent any tariff legislation in consideration of their support? The tariff is the only public measure upon which McKinley has any pronounced views of long standing, and can not be expected to surrender them in order to catch a few more votes.

THERE is a very great difference of opinion, even among the Democrats, as to the make up of the Democratic National convention. Some say that it was the uprising of the people, demanding the relief to which the governed is entitled. Others say it was a gathering of anarchists and revolutionists. But, nevertheless, the deliberations of the body were the result of a convention acting under the call of the regularly constituted Democratic authority.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1896. NO. 40.

THE Williamstown Courier is now owned and edited by J. H. Westover, the firm of Westover & Points having dissolved.

W. F. HART is in the Mayfield jail charged with adultery. According to his own story he has taken eight wives unto himself.

THE banks came to the assistance of the United States Treasury, last week, and replenished the gold reserve which had dropped below the $100,000,000 mark.

OIL has advanced one cent on the gallon, owing probably to the demand being increased by the large output of political machinery, which will require lubricating this fall.

THE report was started that Senator Sherman would not be a candidate for reelection, but he lost no time in contradicting it. He evidently wants to die with the harness on.

THE Denver Tribune says "McKinley voted for silver in 1878. He dosen't know what he will vote for now until Mark Hanna and his supporting syndicate tell him what to do."

THE political campaign in Indiana and Illinois will be unusually lively this fall, as each party will make a special effort to carry those two States, it being conceded that they are pivotal territory.

THE present indications are that after the next November election the woods will be full of Demmies who cannot say, "I have always abided by the decision of my party and supported the nominees of its convention."

FOR the first time in the history of the Republican party of Georgia a ticket of Electors composed entirely of whites has been appointed by the State Central Committee. The leaders of the party say that this means a largely increased vote for the Republican party in this State.

THE Kentucky editor has not yet been discovered who will admit to his readers that he doesn't understand all about the money question. In some of the back counties cordwood and potatoes are being accepted in return for an equivalent number of bushels of financial knowledge.—Kentucky Post.

THERE appears to be some Democrats in Louisville, who do not line up with the opposition to the nominees of the Chicago convention. They are organized and are known as the Young Men's Democratic Club, and have expressed themselves in vigorous terms in regard to Democrats who are refusing to support the national ticket.

THE unusual amount of rainfall lately has caused considerable damage to the wheat and oats crop. B. F. Furnish, of near Napoleon, has sixty-five acres of oats cut and in the shock that have sprouted so badly because of the wet condition of the weather, that he considers the crop worthless. Many others have crops in a similar state. The continuous rains have given the weeds a great start in corn and tobacco, and the wet weather has begun to injure the tobacco. Warm, dry weather now would make the best general crop raised in this section for many years.—Warsaw Independent.

THE local option fight in Grant county is not over with yet by any means, as appears from the following taken from the last issue of the Warsaw Independent: "Recently an election was held in Grant county to determine as to whether the people desired liquor sold within its borders, and by a majority of nearly 300 the voters asked for local option. It is claimed that the election was not held according to the provisions of the law, and the liquorites began an action to restrain the authorities from entering the result of the election and executing the local option law, by moving the board of elections to declare the election illegal. The case finally came up before Judge Greene of the Circuit Court, Tuesday, D. C. Points, of Williamstown, coming here to make the argument for the local option element, while Hon. M. D. Gray represented the people who wish liquor sold, chiefly druggists, though there were others not engaged in the traffic, who are among the contestants. After hearing the case on every proposition, Judge Greene granted a temporary restraining order until the October term of the Grant Circuit Court, when the case will come up on its merits before Judge Greene."

SOME of the Democrats up in the Seventh District are apprehensive of a combination between the bolting Democrats and the Republicans by which a gold man will be elected to Congress. On that subject the Lexington Argonaut says: "There is a large sized conspiracy between certain Republican leaders and some bolting Democrats by which the place of Congressman Owens shall be filled by some gold Democrat who will not offer himself before the Democratic primary, but rely on the undivided support of the Republicans, who will put no candidate in opposition to him."

THE absolute honesty of a citizen of North Carolina has saved the Government about $41,000. At the recent session of Congress a bill was passed appropriating that sum to pay an old claim that had its origin during the war. K. H. Lewis, of Raleigh, N. C., was one of the beneficiaries under this claim. When a draft was sent him a few day ago by the Secretary of the Navy, he returned it with the information that his claim had been fully paid many years ago. An investigation was at once made by the Auditor for the Navy Department, and he found that the claim had been paid twenty years ago. On account of the honesty of Mr. Lewis the Government will save all but about $8,500 of the money, but that sum will probably be lost, because it has been paid to attorneys and heirs of the original claimants, and has already been distributed among them,

The Governor has let it be known that he will call special elections for the regular November election, to fill the vacancies in the Legislature, caused by resignations, death, etc. It will be the duty of the Lieutenant Governor to call the election in the Weisenger district, because the vacancy occured while the Legislature was in session. This will apply to Speaker Blandford and the Lexington district, in case the advanced refusal of Dunlap to take the Kaufman seat, is construed to make a vacancy. It is taken as a matter of course here now that an extra session will be called for immediately after the November election, unless the Republicans should get the worst of the special legislative elections, and the Democratic Legislators continue to refuse to enter any agreement against the bringing up of the Senatoral fight.—Capital.

Reports from the pension bureau show that within the year past the number of pension claims pending has decreased 56,546, leaving 410,922 on file, and that altogether there are now 970,000 pensioners.

It is expected that from this time forward the decrease will be rapid. When the old soldiers begin to go, they will go rapidly. It is remarkable how many of them were of nearly equal age, and in the nature of things they will largely depart from earth together.

Still it is also remarkable how very many of them have lived to a green old age, after the great sufferings and dangers through which they passed.—Cincinnati Post.

And another remarkable thing about the old soldiers in this county is this: All those who served in the rebel army are yet stout, able-bodied men, with very few exceptions, while nearly every one who was in the Union army, either long or short service, has applied for and been pensioned for some disability.

THE editor of the Trimble Banner, until recently a Prohibitionist, has been trying to make his paper an independent journal, but has concluded to line up with the Democrats. He says. "This thing of wobbling around and being on no side of any question may suit a poor man, but it does not suit the editor of the Trimble Banner. He has tried it and is thoroughly satisfied. He wants to be somewhere and be able to look around and discover 'where he is at.' He has therefore decided to take a stand politically and to stand there until somebody or something shall knock him off. Trimble Banner will be a Democratic paper and will support the nominee of the Democratic party. Aside from this it will be as independent as ever. The editor has discovered that it is just as easy, indeed a little more easy, to be independent and in a party. He is for the ticket nominated at Chicago, and he will throw his paper that way. If he chooses to criticise at any time the action of the Democratic party he will do so without stint, but he is a Democrat nevertheless.

THE Georgia Republicans gave the colored brother the cold shoulder when it came to making up the electoral ticket.

POLITICAL.

Hon. John Rhea, of Russellville, has opened his Congressional canvass.

Col. Nelson says he is a sure enough candidate for Congress in this district.

Ex-President Harrison will open the Republican campaign in Indiana August 20.

Senator Gorman will support the Democratic ticket, and do all he can to bring about harmony in the party.

A. R. Burnam has been nominated by the Republicans for Judge of the Court of Appeals from the Fifth Appellate district.

Charles R. Long, late Chairman of the State Democratic Executive and Central Committees, will not vote for Bryan and Sewall.

So far Bryan seems to be too much of a Democrat for the Populists and too much of a Populist for the Democrats.—Cynthiana Courier.

The Democratic nominee for President has the distinction of being the youngest candidate ever nominated for that position by ten years or more.

State officials have decided to try to collect a franchise tax from the Southern Pacific railway and if they fail will attempt to have its Kentucky charter repealed.

State elections will be held in Alabama, August 3; Vermont, September, 1; Arkansas, September, 7; Maine, September, 14; Florida, October, 6, and Georgia, October 7.

The time for nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress is near at hand. The proper authority in this, the Sixth ought to call the convention to meet not later than September 15.

Mr. McKinley's managers announce the completion of their campaign plans, and Mr. Bryan's generals are marshalling their hosts for the mighty conflict that is already raging throughout the land.

Harry M. Bryan, of Hopkinsville, claims to be a relative of Hon. William Jennings Bryan, the nominee of the Chicago convention. The Kentucky Bryan is a firm believer in his Nebraska relative and thinks he will be elected President.

The Democracy of Kentucky have been taking three of the syndicate pills at one dose, because the dose could not be divided. Just think of it—the Courier-Journal, Times and Capital at one dose, without even shaking.—Argus.

Messrs Hendrick, Wheeler and George, Democratic candidates for Congress in the First district, have made up a list of forty-one joint appointments beginning to-day at Roaring Springs, Trigg county, and closing at Paducah on the night of September 4.

Hon. R. P. Ernst, candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress, is making an energetic canvass of the district. Hon. T. B. Mathews will follow closely on his trail. They will make things lively from now until the nominating convention meets.

A Breckinridge petition is now being circulated in Georgetown and Scott county, asking the Seventh district Committee for a primary election as the method of selecting the Democratic nominee for Congress. We warn the people not to sign such a petition.—News.

At Louisville the Young Men's Democratic Club with a membership of over 3,000, held a very enthusiastic meeting and passed a resolution unanimously indorsing Bryan and Sewall, and passed by a decisive vote a resolution condemning the daily press of that city as un-Democratic.

The Courier-Journal bolted Gen. Hardin because, it is said, he did not stand on the platform. It now bolts Bryan because he stands upon the platform. The poor old Louisville bolter is hard to please, but then nobody tried to please it. Outside of Louisville it has no influence, and it has done all the damage it possibly can do to Democracy. So let'er rip.—Nicholasville Democrat.

It is safe to announce that the silver committeemen will favor a delegate convention in order to defeat both Breckinridge and Owens. This has been agreed on, and the voice of all the petitions that can be made will not change what has been agreed on in this matter. Committeemen have been changed to carry out this move, and it will be done, no matter what the result. —Argus.

There may be some dispute as to the attitude of the national Democratic platforms in the past touching the restoration of silver to the position it occupied in the coinage laws of the country prior to 1873, but there can be no question that the Democracy of the Second district has always been heartily in favor of such restoration. Every nominee of the party from John Young Brown down to Dr. Clardy has openly proclaimed this doctrine and made it one of the shibboleths of the party fights in this district.—Madisonville Hustler.

Fate seems to be busy with the active participants in the Chicago convention. On Wednesday afternoon of convention week speeches were made by Tillman, Vilas Jones, Russell, Hill and Bryan. Gov. Russell is dead already. Bryan has been named for president. Tillman's daughter was smitten to death by the forked lightning and Jones is chairman of the national committee, Vilas has bolted the ticket and Hill has decided to support it. Journalism has therefore been busy with every one of the orators on that famous day.

We will not stultify our record by advocating the election of the nominees. We are a Democrat; this platform and ticket are Anarchistic Socialistic—everything but Democratic. We cannot join a movement in which Altgeld and Tillman and their sort are set up as apostles. In the meantime we hold ourselves ready to co-operate with the true Democrats of the country in such efforts as may be determined on as being best calculated to keep alive the principles of the party, as laid down by Jefferson, enforced by Jackson and vindicated by Grover Cleveland.—Chattanooga Times.

The Democrats may go wrong, but they can never equal the Republicans in wrong doing. We can never affiliate with a party that has been guilty of crimes innumerable, and if their party exegencies require it, will hesitate at no crime in the calendar, to carry out its purposes. What it has done it will do again, and we will have none of it. The gravest errors and blunders charged on the Democratic party, are venal and pardonable in comparison to the crimes the republicans have committed against civil liberty in the last forty years. Under no circumstances can we fraternize with a party guilty of the great crimes that have characterized that party, and we pity the Democrat that can condone these, simply because his party has been guilty, in national convention assembled, of some unwise declaration.

The case of Henry Watterson is a peculiar one. He has written many columns in the Courier-Journal in opposition to the gold standard. He has never written one line in its favor. On the contrary he took pains to be out of the state during the Hardin-Bradley campaign and stated in the Courier-Journal that while Beck lived he was with him, that since Beck's death he has never written on the subject. During this momentous compaign he goes to Europe and is out of politics, as current report has it, until the day following the presidential election. Now he cables home to the Courier-Journal to stand firm, and not compromise with his honor. In other words he is a bolter. Either he has become a sound money man without anybody knowing it, which is little short of a crime in a man in his position, or else he is disgusted with the Chicago platform because it does not seek to keep free trade to the front. Maybe he sent the cablegram to accommodate the owners of the Courier-Journal, who are paying him a big salary to live in Paris during this great contest, when he should have been instructing the people if he really believes that free silver means dishonor. It can hardly be a more radical departure in favor of dishonor than an alliance with Mark Hanna, who spent a quarter of a million dollars to nominate a man—with the expectation of getting the money back with interest in the shape of legislation that enables him to rob the people. The success of such a scheme would do more to encourage anarchy than for the plain people to run the country—for of such was the Chicago Convention.—Henderson Journal.

IT is an easy matter to prepare a table of figures assuring the election of a candidate, but the surprise developed by the polling of the vote very often tears the table to pieces quite badly. It is not a good idea to put your money up, relying on the tables published early in the campaign—in fact before it has fairly begun.

THE calling of an extra session of the legislature depends entirely upon the result of the special elections held this fall to fill the vacancies existing in the legislature. Should they result in making the legislature safely Democratic, Governor Bradley will have no use for the lawmakers at Frankfort, as they would likely elect a Democratic United States Senator.

W. J. BRYAN, the Democratic nominee for the Presidency, is a muchly nominated man—three nominations, within one month, for the highest office within the gift of the American people, is an honor neverbefore bestowed. Besides he is the youngest man who ever received the nomination for the exalted position to which he will be elected in November.

THE Democratic Committee of this Congressional District would like to know what plan a majority of the Democrats prefer adopted for the nominating of a candidate for Congress, but how they are going to arrive at a conclusion as to the will of the majority, does not appear; but they can come close enough for practical purposes.

IT is settled beyond any kind of a doubt that there are a great many gold-bug Democrats who will not vote for Bryan and Sewall; and it is also settled that the best thing they can do, under such circumstances, is to nominate a national ticket of their own.

THE table maker who puts Ohio's electoral vote in the Bryan column, has an abundance of confidence. If the Democrats carry Ohio this fall, the G. O. P. may as well take down its sign, sell it for kindling-wood, and go out of business.

SILVER PARTY

Nominates Bryan and Sewall for President and Vice-President

Amid the Greatest Enthusiasm—The Declaration of Principles Adopted by the Convention—After Being in Session Three Days the Convention Adjourns Sine Die.

St. Louis, July 23.—At 12:30 Dr. Mott called the national silver convention to order. At this time there were probably 400 delegates in their seats and two score spectators. At 12:30 Dr. Mott introduced Hon. Francis G. Newlands, representative in congress from Nevada, as the temporary chairman, who addressed the convention.

A permanent organization was then undertaken, committees being named by calling the roll of states. Some of them, which were represented, failed to respond, so that it was impossible to tell how many states were in the convention. After naming the committee on credentials, the temporary chairman suggested that the state delegations get together and select their representatives on the several committees and pending this, Miss Lillie Pierce, of St. Louis, was escorted to the platform.

She was arrayed in a garb of white, over which was draped the American flag and liberty cap on her head. On her left arm she wore shoulder and wrist bracelets connected with chains of gold coins, and on her bosom a delegate badge, the color of which was of old gold. She stood in front of the presiding officer's desk, which was draped with yellow silk bordered with gold bullion fringe. Miss Pierce carried a small flag, and waving it said: "Americans, under the folds of our grand old flag, I salute you."

She then recited the Declaration of Independence and the swelling periods of that document were greeted with rapturous applause.

The conclusion of the recitation, which was very effectively rendered, was marked by a wild outburst of applause, while the band played "Red, White and Blue."

A delegate from Colorado moved the thanks of the convention be given Miss Pierce for her recitation of the Charter of American Liberty, and it was adopted by a rising vote and more cheering. It was finally agreed that the state delegations should hand the names of the different members of committees to the secretary.

A motion to take a recess caused some discussion. Judge Scott, of Nebraska, suggested an adjournment until Thursday at 10 a. m. There was no necessity, he said, of being in a hurry in this matter. It took the republican party a whole week in this city to marry Grover Cleveland, and the democratic party a week in Chicago to get a divorce from him. (Laughter.)

A recess until 4:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon was finally agreed to, and at 2:20 o'clock the convention separated.

At 4:50 o'clock Chairman Newlands dropped his gavel. Mr. Williams, a delegate from Nebraska, moved that a committee of three be appointed to invite the delegates to the populist convention to take seats in the galleries for the afternoon, the populists not being in session. It was unanimously adopted. The committee on rules made its report, recommending that the rules of the present congress be used in the conduct of the convention's business. The committee on credentials reported no contests and suggested that any portion of a state delegation present in the convention could cast the full vote of the delegation. The report was adopted.

The permanent organization committee through its chairman, Col. Bradshaw, reported in favor of Wm. P. St. John, of New York, as permanent chairman. As his name was mentioned the convention cheered vociferously. Hon. Chas. A. Towne, of Minnesota, was named as vice president of the convention, and again the delegates manifested their pleasure. Robert Diffendorfer, of Pennsylvania, was named as secretary. The report was adopted with a cheer. While a committee was escorting Mr. St. John to the chair, Mr. Newlands announced that Mr. Towne would address the convention Thursday. The delegates appeared to be delighted to know that the business of the convention was not to be rushed through, and a final adjournment reached Wednesday night as had been rumored. Mr. Newlands then introduced Mr. St. John as permanent chairman. Mr. St. John then prefaced his remarks by saying that it having been rumored that he would be asked to preside over the convention, he had put his remarks in writing, so that what he had to say might be in shape which he would not regret having said. (Cheers.) He therefore asked the indulgence of the convention to read rather than trust to the eloquence of the occasion.

The effect of the speech upon the delegates was most happy, nearly every sentence being followed by enthusiastic manifestations of approval. When Mr. St. John concluded many delegates rose to their feet and cheered.

The next business in order, Chairman St. John announced, was the appointment of special committees. Mr. G. W. Baker, of California, moved the appointment of a committee consisting of one from each state to meet a similar committee from the populist convention to take up the questions of the differences between the two parties for the purpose of coming to some rational agreement, to the end that the nomination of Bryan and Sewall might be ratified by the two conventions. Mr. Olmsted, of Oregon speaking for the populists and as one of the leaders of the party of that state, seconded the motion, making the suggestion that each state delegation select its representative on the committee. The motion was further seconded by delegates from Missouri and Virginia.

A delegate from Illinois offered as a substitute for Baker's motion one to the effect that each state delegation select a member of this conference committee, and that the populists' convention be notified of the action, with a request that a similar committee be appointed by that body. A delegate asked if it were the intention to await the report of the proposed committee before proceeding to nominate Bryan and Sewall. (Cries of "No.")

FRANCIS G. NEWLANDS, of Nevada, Temporary Chairman.

"What's the use of appointing it, then?" he asked. But no one answered.

A delegate from Kansas, Mr. Shinn, expressed the opinion that it was not wise or expedient for the silver convention to force themselves upon the populists. There was really no difference between the two bodies.

The previous question was ordered on the motion of the delegate from Illinois, which was accepted by the author of the original motion, and it was agreed to.

The roll of states was called and a committee on conference was named.

At 6:25, on motion of Mr. Cornell, of Colorado, the convention adjourned until 10 a. m. Thursday.

St. Louis, July 24.—The silver convention on Thursday did little but listen to oratory and music and await the action of the populist convention.

St. Louis, July 25.—At 10:40 the silver convention was called to order by the chairman. Rev. W. R Covers opened the proceedings with the Lord's prayer. Senator Stewart then took the platform and addressed the delegates. The speaker's mention of Bryan's name gave rise to more enthusiasm than on any previous occasion. At the end of the speech the national committee was announced.

On a roll call on the veteran soldiers resolution it was shown that 196 union soldiers, 18 confederates and 4 Mexican soldiers were represented in the convention.

At 12:32 the convention adjourned until 3:30 p. m.

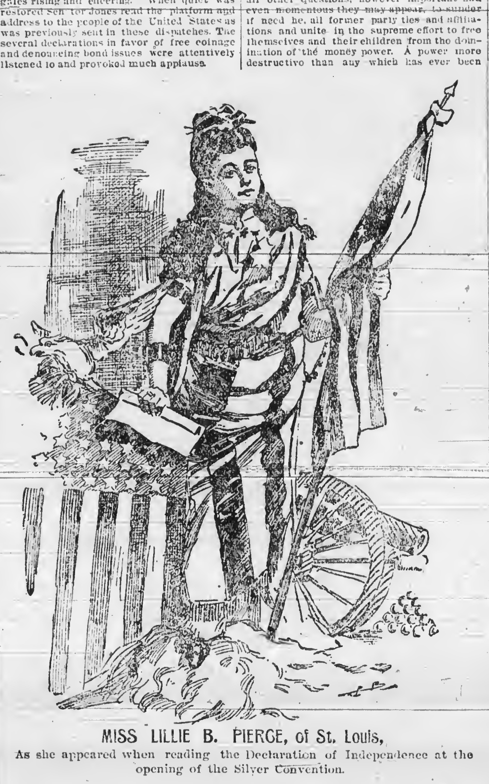
The last session of the national silver convention attracted the largest attendance of spectators that has honored the convention. A large proportion of the visitors were ladies. At 3:55 o'clock Chairman St. John called the convention to order, and introduced Rev. Mr. Haggerty, who invoked the Divine blessing upon the convention, its proceedings and the country.

Mr. Baker, of California, chairman of the silver convention committee of conference, reported the resolution adopted by that body in connection with the conferees from the populist convention. He said the delegates of that body were fully in accord with the sentiments entertained by this convention, they earnestly desired to bring about the reforms which are so necessary to the people of the United States.

The time at their disposal, Mr. Baker said, was so brief that the committees had to content themselves with a general statement of the sentiment animating them all. The reading of the resolution adopted by the committees was received with applause. Had the committees had 12 hours at their disposal, Baker added, he had no doubt such an understanding would be reached as to details as to make sure the success in November, which all believed was theirs. (Cheers.)

Mr. Shinn, of Kansas, moved that the report of the committee be accepted. Adopted, and the committee discharged. This was agreed to without debate or division. A delegate sought recognition but was suppressed by Chairman St. John, who said: "The regular order of business will be proceeded with, time is too precious to waste on any interruptions. The chair can not listen to the gentleman. The next business will be the report of the committee on resolutions, by Senator Jones of Nevada."

Senator Jones came forward and was given a most flattering reception, many of the delegates rising and cheering. When quiet was restored Senator Jones read the platform and address to the people of the United States as was previously sent in these dispatches. The several declarations in favor of free coinage and denouncing bond issues were attentively listened to and provoked much applause.



MISS LILLIE B. PIERCE, of St. Louis,

As she appeared when reading the Declaration of Independence at the opening of the Silver Convention.

The recommendation that Bryan and Sewall be nominated brought the whole convention to their feet with cheers and many demonstrations of delight.

Francis Clarno, of Oregon, moved that the resolutions be adopted as read.

At 4:20 p. m. the platform was adopted without the recommendation of Bryan and Sewall. A motion to proceed with nominations for president and vice president being made. Bryan and Sewall will be nominated practically unanimously.

The national silver party of America in convention assembled hereby adopts the following declaration of principles:

First—The paramount issue at this time in the United States is indisputably the money question. It is between the British gold standard, gold bonds and bank currency on the one side, and the bi-metallic standard, no bonds, government currency (and an American policy) on the other.

On this issue we declare ourselves to be in favor of the distinctively American financial system. We are unalterably opposed to the single gold standard and demand the immediate return to the constitutional standard of gold and silver by the restoration by this government, independently of any foreign power, of the unrestricted coinage of both gold and silver, into standard money at the rate of 16 to 1, and upon terms of exact equality as they existed prior to 1873, the silver coin to be of full legal tender, equally with gold, for all debts and dues, public and private, and demand such legislation as will prevent for the future the destruction of the legal tender quality of any kind of money by private contract.

We hold that the power to control and regulate a paper currency is inseparable from the power to coin money; and hence, that all currency intended to circulate as money should be issued and its volume controlled, by general government only and should be a legal tender.

We are unalterably opposed to the issue by the United States of interest-bearing bonds in time of peace, and we denounce as a blunder, worse than a crime, the present treasury policy concurred in by a republican house of plunging the country into debt by hundreds of millions in the vain attempt to maintain the gold standard by borrowing gold, and we demand the payment of all coin obligations of the United States as provided by existing laws, in either gold or silver coin, at the option of the government and not at the option of the creditor.

The demonetization of silver in 1873 enormously increased the demand for gold, enhancing its purchasing power and lowering all prices measured by that standand; and since that unjust and indefensible act, the prices of American products have fallen upon an average, nearly fifty per cent., carrying down with them proportionately the money value of all other forms of property.

Such fall of prices has destroyed the profits of legitimate industry, injuring the producer for the benefit of the non-producer, increasing the burden of the debtor swelling the gains of the creditor, paralyzing the productive energies of the American people, relegating to idleness vast numbers of willing workers; sending the shadows of despair into the home of the honest; filling the land with tramps and paupers and building up colossal fortunes at the money centers.

In the effort to maintain the gold standard, the country has, within the last two years, in a time of profound peace and plenty, been loaded down with $262,000,000 of additional interest-bearing debt under such circumstances as to allow a syndicate of native and foreign bankers to realize a net profit of millions on a single deal.

It stands confessed that the gold standard can only be upheld by so depleting our paper currency as to force the prices of our products below the European, and even below the Asiatic level, to enable us to sell in foreign markets, thus aggravating the very evils of which our people so bitterly complain, degrading American labor and striking at the foundations of our civilization itself.

The advocates of the gold standard persistently claim that the real cause of our distress is over-production—that we have produced so much that it made us poor, which implies that the true remedy is to close the factory, abandon the farm and throw a multitude of people out of employment; a doctrine that leaves us unnerved and disheartened, and absolutely without hope for the future.

We affirm it to be unquestioned that there can be no such economic paradox as overproduction, and at the same time tens of thousands of our fellow citizens are half clothed and half fed and are piteously clamoring for the common necessities of life.

Over and above all other questions of policy we are in favor of restoring to the people of the United States the time-honored money of the constitution—gold and silver, not one, but both—the money of Washington and Hamilton and Jefferson and Monroe and Jackson and Lincoln, to the end that the American people may receive honest pay for an honest product; that the American debtor may pay his just obligations in an honest standard and not in a dishonest and unsound standard appreciated one hundred per cent in purchasing power, and no appreciation in debt paying power and to the end further that silver standard countries may be deprived of the unjust advantage they now enjoy, in the difference of exchange between gold and silver—an advantage which tariff legislation can not overcome.

We therefore confidently appeal to the people of the United States to hold in abeyance all other questions, however important and even momentous they may appear, to sunder if need be, all former party ties and affiliations and unite in the supreme effort to free themselves and their children from the domination of the money power. A power more destructive than any which has ever been fastened upon the civilized men of any race or in any age.

And upon the consummation of our desires and efforts we evoke the aid of all patriotic American citizens and the gracious favor of divine providence.

Inasmuch as the patriotic majority of the Chicago convention embodied in the financial plank of its platform the principles enunciated in the platform of the American Bimetallic party, promulgated at Washington, D. C., January 22, 1896, and herein reiterated which is not only paramount but the only real issue in the pending campaign, therefore recognizing that their nominees embody these patriotic principles, we recommend that this convention indorse the nomination of Wm. J. Bryan of Nebraska, for president, and Arthur Sewall of Maine, for vice-president.

At 4:29 Mr. Little, of Kansas, placed the name of William J. Bryan in nomination for president of the United States amid great enthusiasm. Mr. Pace, of Nebraska, seconded the nomination.

WILLIAM P. ST. JOHN, Permanent Chairman.

At 5:45 p. m., Bryan was unanimously nominated by acclamation. Great cheering; everything portable in the hall waved in the air, and for the first time the convention gave evidence of the great enthusiasm which greeted Bryan at Chicago.

At 6 p. m., Sewall was nominated by acclamation, and the demonstration appeared as sincere and almost as noisy as that given Bryan.

At 6:28 the silver convention adjourned sine die.

CLOUDBURSTS

Inundate West Virginia Towns and Stop Railway Traffic.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 25.—Friday, for the second time in three days, the northern and eastern counties of West Virginia were visited by a terrific rain storm. The downpour began about two o'clock Friday morning and continued nearly twelve hours, with hardly a moment's intermission. In this county the rainfall for the day was 1.70 inch, making the total for the week thus far about 4.50 inches.

The storm was heaviest in Ohio, Marshall, Wetzell and Tyler counties, and in Belmont and Monroe counties, Ohio.

Neither the Baltimore & Ohio main line nor the Ohio River railroad had trains either in or out of Wheeling Friday, and the prospects Friday night are that it will be Saturday night or Sunday before either line is open. All Baltimore and Ohio trains from the west are from eight to twelve hours late, and upon arriving here are sent on east by way of Pittsburgh and Cumberland. This leaves the Baltimore and Ohio with its southwestern connection and all eastern connections cut off entirely.

The chief trouble is an immense landslide near Bellton, but the whole line for miles is washed out or covered with debris, while culverts and trestles are washed away. The Ohio River road, for the eighth time in two months, completely tied up by an enormous landslide at Baresville, where half a mile of track is destroyed. Work trains can not reach this point on account of smaller landslides and washouts on both sides. At the narrows between here and Moundsville the track is covered ten feet deep for a quarter of a mile.

At Sistersville the rain has been falling steadily for three days. The Ohio river is rising rapidly, and lowlands are inundated, while the small streams are raging torrents, carrying everything before them, bridges, crops and oil rigs. The damage in the oil field will be over $100,000, lines being broken, derricks washed away, and tanks overturned.

Stacks of hay and wheat are floating out, and whole fields of corn have been swept away. There are four landslides between Sistersville and Cochransville, and four Ohio River railroad trains are locked in just above Sistersville.

Tyler county will lose $20,000 on small bridges. A telegram says the Fairmount, Morgantown and Pittsburgh railroad is washed away at a dozen places, and that all efforts at running trains have been given up till the road can be completely overhauled. In places every semblance of the roadbed is gone.

A telegram from Piedmont says the river there is higher than for years, and is still rising, threatening to flood the town.

The West Virginia Central and Cumberland & Baltimore roads are suffering from dozens of washouts and landslides. No trains are running on either road.

No definite estimate of the total damage can be made, but it will reach into the millions.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE

And Damage to Property in Eastern Kentucky Caused by Heavy Rains.

Louisville, Ky., July 25.—Heavy rains in eastern Kentucky caused great loss of life and damage to property and crops Thursday afternoon and Thursday night. A colored boy was drowned at Nepton, and Mrs. James Peyton was drowned near Taylorsville. The water got in her room, and her husband took the children to a place of safety. When he returned for his wife he could not get in at the door. He then took his wife out of the window and started for safety, when he was struck by a pile of drift, which loosened his hold on her. He caught her again and the current carried them down stream about a mile, when Peyton discovered his wife was dead. In order to save himself he had to free himself of the burden of his dead wife. He was rescued by hands from the shore.

HEAVY RAINS.

Two and Ninety-Six Hundredths Inches Fell at Columbus, O., Thursday Night.

Columbus, O., July 25.—Probably the heaviest rainfall ever experienced here fell Thursday night, two and ninety-six hundredths inches. The streets became rivers, flowing ankle deep from curb to curb, and street cars ran over tracks that were several inches under water. Cellars were filled with water and sewers choked with the unusual demands made upon them.

Grove City, six miles south on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, is largely under water Friday morning. A small stream that runs through the village, and is not large enough to be dignified with a name, is a half mile wide this morning, and the first floors of many of the houses are under water, boats being used to rescue many of the occupants.

Gallagher Gets a New Trial.

Muncie, Ind., July 25.—Judge Koons rendered his decision on the motion made for a new trial for Francis Gallagher, who was convicted and sentenced to 21 years for murder. Gallagher was charged with murdering Joseph Reed, a young man formerly from Pittsburgh. He also killed James Dugan, a glass worker, from Chicago, on the night of April 16.

Bryan Said to be Out of It.

Chicago, July 25.—The Tribune has a St. Louis special interview with Senator Allen, Bryan's representative there, saying: "Mr. Bryan's name will not be presented to the convention Saturday morning. The Sewall vote settled it."

Bicycle Race Postponed.

Cleveland, O., July 25.—Rain, which has been falling steadily for 12 hours, has caused the great bicycle parade which was to have taken place Friday to be postponed till Monday. There were to have been 18,000 wheelmen in line.

The Frances Shimer Academy of the University of Chicago

Which for more than forty years has been known as Mt. Carroll Seminary has, by the wish of its founder, become an affiliated school of The University of Chicago. The relation of the Frances Shimer Academy to The Univesity of Chicago is a double one. It is an affiliated academy of the University, and as such the work of instruction is under the direct oversight of the University; eight of its fifteen trustees are trustees of the University.

The local and internal administration of the Academy will be in charge of the Dean, Miss Ida M. Gardner, who for fifteen years has been Principal of College Preparatory Schools both East and West. The course of study, with slight changes, will be identical with that of Morgan Park Academy, and will fit pupils for any College in the country.

Malarial disease is invariably supplemented by disturbance of the liver, the bowels, the stomach and the nerves. To the removal of both the cause and its effects, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is fully adequate. It "fills the bill" as no other remedy does, performing its work thoroughly. Its ingredients are pure and wholesome, and it admirably serves to build up a system broken by ill health and shorn of strength. BRYAN AND WATSON, Nominees of the Populists at St. Louis for President and Vice President.

The Convention Makes a Reversal in the Order of Things, and Nominates the Tail of the Ticket First—The Platform Adopted—Adjourned Sine Die.

ST. LOUIS, July 23—At 12:37 Chairman Taubeneck, of the national committee, called the populist convention to order. Rev. Dr. W. R. L. Smith, of the Third Baptist church, offered prayer. Gov. Wm. J. Stone, of Missouri, was introduced by Chairman Taubeneck and delivered an address of welcome. Gov. Stone was followed by Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota, who received a rousing ovation. Mr. Donnelly counseled moderation in their deliberations and captured the convention by saying that the people's party must not die and that they must stand together.

The chairman asked such members of the executive committee as were in the body of the hall to step up to the platform. Among those who thus advanced was Mrs. Mary Ellen Lease, who was warmly cheered.

MARION BUTLER.
Temporary Chairman.

Chairman Taubeneck introduced as temporary chairman of the convention Senator Marion Butler, of North Carolina, saying that he had been chosen by acclamation and without a dissenting voice, in a committee of 40 members, and expressing the belief that when the convention adjourned it would have accomplished its work just as unanimously. (Cheers.)

Senator Butler was received with three cheers which he characterized as "a cyclone of patriotism." All history taught, he said, that history showed that there always came crises in the affairs of men when humanity was raised to a higher level, accordingly as the men on whose shoulders the responsibility rested were able to meet the crisis with wisdom and patriotism. (Cheers.) And to solve it to the betterment of humanity.

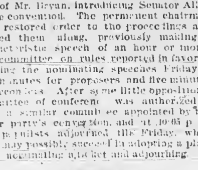
Two political parties, he said, had held national conventions this year, had adopted platforms and had put forward their leaders, and now another great political party, young, but a growing giant in strength had assembled to speak to the American people at this critical and important hour (cheers). The populists were here because there was need of them to be here. The parties that has had charge of the government since the war had succeeded in bringing the nation to the verge of bankruptcy and ruin, and had necessitated the existence of the populist organization. The two parties had vied with each other in "straddling," but now straddling was a thing of the past.

The people's party had come into existence to perform a great mission. There was a necessity for its coming, and it was going to stay so long as there was any necessity for it. (Cheers.) If the people's party were to go out of existence to-morrow, the next democratic national convention would report a platform on which Bryan would not stand. (Cheers.) The peoples party had raised an issue so universal, so great, so important, that it had split both the old parties in two.

When Senator Butler resumed his seat some cries were raised for a speech from Mrs. Lease, but the chairman directed the secretary to call the roll of states to name the committee on credentials. This was done.

ST. LOUIS, July 24.—It was not till late in the evening that any substantial progress was made by the people's party convention Thursday. All the morning and afternoon were frittered away in disputes over contested seats and similar trivial matters. The business of the convention was further much hampered by the lack of familiarity with parliamentary law with which both the temporary presiding officers were equally afflicted. It was nearly 8 o'clock when a decisive test of strength between the Bryan and anti-Bryan forces was brought about. It came up on the report of the committee on permanent organization. Bryan men named Senator Allen, of Nebraska, for permanent chairman. The middle of the road and anti-Bryan men united upon Mr. James E. Champion, of Maine, stated to be one of the ablest parliamentarians in the body. On a call of states the Bryan men carried the day by a decisive vote of 758 to 564.

The middle of the road men yielded gracefully, "Cyclone" Davis, the most active opponent of Mr. Bryan, introducing Senator Allen to the convention. The permanent chairman soon restored order to the proceedings and pushed them along, previously making a characteristic speech of an hour or more. The committee on rules reported in favor of limiting the nominating speeches Friday to ten minutes for proposers and five minutes for seconders. After some little opposition a committee of conference was authorized to meet a similar committee appointed by the silver party's convention, and at 10:05 p. m. the populists adjourned till Friday, when they may possibly succeed in adopting a platform, nominating a ticket and adjourning.



SENATOR WILLIAM V. ALLEN, NEBRASKA.
Permanent Chairman.

ST. LOUIS, July 25.—The people's party convention on the third day of its session, got down to solid work, and after a stormy session nominated Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia for vice president. It turned down the committee on rules by a decisive vote, and gave the nomination for vice president precedence over that of president, so as to force the selection of a southern populist in place of Sewall, whose record was strongly attacked by members of the Maine delegation. The hall was almost as crowded as it was during any of the sittings of the republican convention. There was a good deal of enthusiasm displayed, though not in favor of any special candidate. Most of the speeches were in favor of the nomination of Mr. Watson, of Georgia, and his nomination was almost assured an hour before he was chosen.

Following is the platform:

The preamble reaffirms the declarations of the Omaha platform.

First—We demand a national currency safe and sound, issued by the general government only, a full legal tender for all debts, public and private, and receivable for all debts due the government, and that without the use of banking corporations, a just, equitable and efficient means of distribution direct to the people through the lawful disbursements of the government.

Second—We demand the free and unrestricted coinage of silver and gold at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1 by the United States, and that without the consent of foreign nations.

Third—We demand that the volume of circulating medium be speedily increased to an amount sufficient to meet the demands of the business and population of this country and to restore the level of prices, labor and production, and thereby re-establish the prosperity and happiness of the people.

Fourth—We denounce the democratic and republican policies that seek to enslave our people by the issuance of interest-bearing United States bonds to be sold on English and foreign markets and steadfastly adhere to an American policy that will produce revenue sufficient to maintain legitimate and economic expenses.

Fifth—We demand such legislation as will prevent the demonetization of the lawful money of the United States by private contract.

Sixth—We demand that the government in payment of its obligations shall use its option as to the kind of lawful money in which it shall pay them, and we denounce the present and preceding administrations for surrendering this option to the holders of government obligations.

Seventh—We demand a proper income tax to the end that aggregated wealth shall bear its just proportion of taxation.

Eighth—We demand that postal savings banks be established by the government for the safe deposit of the savings of the people and to facilitate exchange.

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—The convention was called to order by the permanent chairman, Senator Allen, at 9:40 Saturday, and Rev. Mr. Kent of Washington, was introduced to say prayer. Starting out with a direct allusion to the action of Friday, he said that the convention "rejoiced in the manifestation which Thou hast made of Thyself in the world about us, and which Thou art continually making in history. We pray that this convention meet professedly in the interest of righteousness, may have its deliberations and actions contribute to the end for which it meets. Help us to feel that we must be not only honest but right. Free us from prejudice, free us from party spirit. Consecrate us to the service of our country and of mankind. Make us loyal not only to the individual conviction of our own interests, but to that deep conviction which concerns the welfare of our fellow men. And so may these deliberations redound not only to our interests but to the interests of the world at large."

The chairman repeated his ruling of Friday night that the amendment adopted by the convention giving the nomination of a vice-president the preference over the nomination of president made the selection of national committeemen the next order of business. Mr. J. K. Burnett, of California, protested that this was not so, and contested that the convention simply transposed the nomination of vice-president and president. The chairman replied that the gentleman's statement of fact was entirely mistaken, and went on with the naming of national committeemen. When this was completed he called next for committee on notification.

The sergeant-at-arms announced that their contract with the Business Men's association (which included the supply of music) had run out so that there would be no band Saturday. Unappreciative delegates greeted this announcement with cries of "good," and cheers.

The chair announced that the next order of business was nominations for president. Mr. Green, of Nebraska, got on the platform to make a motion and a speech. The latter was to the effect that this was one of the most important conventions that ever assembled on American soil, as it was to name a man who was not only to head the ticket, but who was to be elected.

When Alabama was called Mr. George Gaither, of that state, addressing his "brothers and sisters of the convention," yielded to James B. Weaver, who, he said, would name the man who would be the running mate of Tom Watson and run the goldbugs out of existence. Mr. Weaver came forward and was presented by the chairman and in a neat speech nominated Wm. J. Bryan.

Mr. Bryan's name was received with applause, the whole convention standing on chairs and waving hats. A gigantic wooden cross, surmounted by a golden crown, thus reversing Mr. Bryan's famous epigram, was brought in and carried around the hall. The guidons of the states were raised and a vociferous attempt was made to raise enthusiasm, but with a marked absence of spontaneity. A portrait of Bryan was displayed and numerous devices were carried around the hall. The demonstration continued 20 minutes.

After order had been partially restored Judge Field, of Virginia, seconded Bryan's nomination. He created a laugh by addressing the convention as "Gentlemen of the jury." Field moved that the rules be suspended and that the nomination of Wm. J. Bryan be declared unanimous."

The chairman put the question and two-thirds of the delegates rose with vociferous shouts of "aye, aye." This cry, however, was accompanied by the counter cry of "no, no." "Call the roll of states," said the chairman.

Several of the most excited opponents got on the platform and angrily prevented the chairman from declaring the result of the vote. During the uproar Mr. "Stump" Ashby of Texas managed to obtain a hearing. He said Texas was ready to endorse Mr Bryan if Mr. Bryan would endorse the populist platform. To endorse him without that would be the act of children.

He did not believe that Mr. Bryan, being an honest man, could ignore the democratic platform and stand upon the populist platform.

A telegram was read from Debs, saying his name must not be presented to the convention. More disorder. Roll call for president resumed. Cator, of California, seconded Bryan's nomination. Mr. Hunt, of Georgia, seconded Bryan's nomination; also Col Claggett, of Idaho. The nomination was also seconded by Taubeneck, of Illinois; Kolb, of Alabama, Simpson, of Kansas, and others.

Mr. S. F. Norton, of Chicago, was placed in nomination for president.

The Texas delegation held a conference and decided to support Norton, of Illinois, a "middle of the road" man, until "the last ditch" is reached, as one of the delegates expressed it. If Texas is outvoted in the convention the delegation will not bolt, but will go back to the state and be guided in the future by the action of the state convention which meets next week.

Missouri being called the chairman of the delegation, Mr. Livingston, nominated Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota.

Mr. Donnelly, from his seat, remarked: "I decline."

Then Mr. Livingston (saying that he spoke only for himself and not for the delegation) substituted the name of J. S. Coxey. (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Smith, of Montana, and Mr. W. L. Green, of Nebraska, seconded Bryan.

The call of states was finished at 3:20 and then the vote was called for which resulted as follows: Bryan, 1,042; Norton, 321; Donnelly, 1.

It was then 4:22. Bedlam was, of course, loosed, and pandemonium reigned for fifteen or twenty minutes. The Texas, Arkansas and Maine middle of the road men, with their guidons, together took no part in the demonstration. The middle-of-the-road men finally massed about their standard on the left of the hall. About three hundred in number, they made a counter demonstration. They cheered and yelled and pushed and fought for ten minutes. The sergeant-at-arms was powerless to restore order, and, after rapping for five minutes, Chairman Allen declared Mr. Bryan the nominee of the convention. Some one made a motion to adjourn. The chairman put the motion, and declared the convention adjourned sine die. As he did so Stump Ashby shouted: "Texas casts 103 votes for Norton first, last and all the time."

A GREAT WAVE

Of Water Ten Feet High, Sweeps Down the Canyon.

A Cloudburst Causes an Awful Cataclysm in Colorado—Thirty Bodies So Far Have Been Recovered From the Ruins—The Loss of Property Great.

MORRISON, Col., July 27.—At 8 o'clock Friday evening a great wave of water ten feet high came tearing down the narrow canyon of Bear creek, carrying everything before it. From fifteen to twenty lives are known to have been lost, and as the searching parties have been out but a short time, while hundreds were camping along the creek both above and below town, it is impossible to say how many have been lost.

All of the bridges across Bear creek were swept away. It is impossible to get across to learn from people on the other side if any fatalities are known over there. All the people on both sides of the creek were out with lanterns, traveling up and down, looking for friends or victims of the flood or helping to gather up property.

There was a very heavy storm up the canyon just before the great wave came down, but nobody considered it dangerous. It proved, however, to have been a great cloudburst, and when the wave came down the canyon it found everybody unprepared.

GOLDEN, Col., July 27.—A cloudburst Friday night did an immense amount of damage. Three lives are known to be lost and thousands of dollars worth of property lost. The dead are Mrs. J. F. Edwards, A. A. Johnson and Mrs. A. A. Johnson.

James Bishop, 80 years old, was carried half a mile down stream and finally caught a tree, from which he was rescued some hours later. His terrible experience has unsettled his reason.

The loss of property can not be estimated at this time. The Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf railway loses a bridge and other property. The light and water plants of the city are disabled.

At 7 p. m. a greenish-colored cloud was noticed hanging above Mt. Lookout. Inside of ten minutes the worst storm which has ever happened in this section began. The storm continued with unabated fury for about half an hour. As soon as it was safe to venture out citizens, with the fear that all was flooded near the creek, ran toward the stream and saw the turbulent waters carrying on its surface all kinds of debris, including barns, cabins, tents, bridges, etc. Many narrow escapes are reported. The Denver, Lakewood & Golden railroad tracks were washed out below the town. A large number of men were living in cabins above and below the town, engaged in placer mining, and it is feared that the sudden rise has swept some of them away.

No trains will be able to get up the canyon for some days. This will cut off the towns of Central city, Georgetown, Idaho Springs and other mining camps from communication with the outside world.

The water came down in a perfect wall, sweeping everything before it. It is reported that there were several people on the Ford-street bridge at the time, it was torn from its piling and swept down the stream. During the time it rained, it seemed as though the place would be deluged.

Golden lies at the end of a canyon, where it debouches into the plains. The water caught by a half dozen mountains came into the streets and coursed through them, taking everything of a movable character with it. There are reports of bodies seen in the creek.

Bowlders three feet in diameter were rolled down on the Gulf road. Sand covers the track to a depth of three feet in the city. The new bridge built two years ago by the Lakewood railroad was completely washed out, as were all the bridges across the creek.

Reports are out that the whole country east of here was flooded and the crops cut to pieces by hail which fell during the storm.

DENVER, Col., July 25.—Saturday morning a terrible state of affairs was revealed at Morrison, Golden, Central City and other points in Colorado where Friday night's storm raged the fiercest. Dead bodies, horribly mangled, were discovered, and at 9 o'clock 30 dead had been recovered, of which 21 are in Morrison alone. Trains left Denver early Saturday morning with coffins for the stricken district.

MORRISON, Col., July 27.—A second flood Saturday afternoon resulted in completely paralyzing all efforts to recover the bodies of those lost in the debris of Friday night's flood. The people are worn out with the excitement and labor of struggling amidst the rubbish brought down the canyon by the great wall of water which Friday night just at dark surprised the camping families along the road above town. At dark Saturday night 26 bodies had been recovered and identified. The others are either buried from sight in the sand or have been carried further down the stream, and possibly into the Platte river. Reports from up the canyon bring the cheering news that none of the people there camping were lost.

The list of dead follows: Mrs Moses Miller and three children of Morrison; child of J. C. Longenecker, of Morrison; Thomas McGough, aged 21, of Dayton, O.; Mrs. A. S. Proctor, 32 years old; Robert James Proctor, 5 years; Grace Proctor, 7 years; Edith Proctor, 2 years; Mrs. T. F. Casey, 38 years; James Casey, 12 years; Eddie Casey, 10 years; Mamie Casey, 8 years; Anna Casey, 5 years; Clara Casey, 3 years; Mrs. Anthony Herres, 31 years; Eugene Herres, 7 years; Mabel Herres, 2½ years; Josephine Herres, 6 years; Carrol Herres, 4 years. Annie Hansen, 20 years; Miss Della Horner, Miss Mary Horner, Miss Josephine Holme, Mrs. Horace M. Warren, all of Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Warren, jr., who are well known in Brooklyn society, where their relatives and friends reside, came up from Denver Friday on the afternoon train to spend Saturday and Sunday at the Horner ranch, up Mount Vernon canyon. They were met at the station of the Lakewood railroad at Golden by the Misses Horner and Miss Josephine Holme, also of Denver, and started for the ranch. The flood overtook them and the four ladies were drowned. Their bodies were found Sunday morning buried under brush and sand about 200 feet from the place where the water struck the carriage. Mr. Warren was swept away and his body was lodged in the branches of a tree, where he was afterward found, terribly bruised, but alive.

Miss Holme was the daughter of the manager of the Denver Water Co., and the Misses Horner were daughters of Judge J. W. Horner, also of Denver.

Seventeen persons in cabins and tents in Bear Creek canyon, a few miles above town, constituted one party. One of the Proctor children was rescued by the heroic efforts of two young men who braved the flood when at its highest point to save the child. She says the water came while they were all in the house and were all swept away.

The Herres family become extinct, the father and husband having died a few months ago. The Casey family were also in this party. Mrs. Miller lived here, her husband being engaged in mining and was not at home at the time. The Longnecker family were upstairs in their home when the flood came. He saved all but one member of his family, a little boy called Jake.

GOLDEN, July 27.—Three bodies, all that are known to have been lost in Saturday night's flood in this city, have been recovered. The dead are: A. A. Johnson, Mrs. A. A. Johnson, Mrs. J. F. Edward, all of Golden.

Another flood came over the canyon Sunday afternoon but no lives were lost. Seventeen people came in from Idaho Springs Sunday afternoon, having left the train at Beaver Brook, and walking in from that point. They report that the track and roadbed is about all gone between Golden and Beaver Brook.

About seven o'clock Saturday night threatening clouds came over the hill from the direction of Morrison. It had been cloudy and foggy all day, and the clouds gathered into ominous looking masses. Rain fell in torrents from the start, followed by hail, then a wall of water from twenty-five to thirty feet in height came rushing down Clear creek, carrying everything before it. The flood lasted about half an hour, and was followed by a heavy rain, which continued until about 10 o'clock. At that hour a body of water, greater in volume than the first flood, came down Tucker gulch, emptying into clear creek. It was this second flood that carried away the house of Johnson and his wife and which drowned Mrs. Edwards.

Two bridges have been washed out and three piers of the Denver, Lakewood and Golden bridge were knocked out by the iron work of the Ford street bridge.

The loss is estimated to be between forty and fifty thousand dollars.

DENVER, Col., July 27.—The victims of Friday night's flood were three in Golden, four in Mt. Vernon canyon and 21 near Morrison, making the total 28. The servant girl, Anna Hansen, who was reported dead, was not at the camp at the time of the flood and consequently escaped. A charcoal burner named Nichols, up at Evergreen, is reported missing, making the total still 28. Of these, 16 bodies were recovered Saturday and the body of Mabel Herres, a little child, was found Sunday. P. Johnson, of Arvada, telephoned in to Denver Sunday afternoon that he had four bodies in the bed of Clear creek about a mile above the town of Arvada. The coroner at Golden was notified and will take charge of the bodies.

Up to the discovery of these four bodies, no report of any missing persons has come from Golden. Arvada is a country hamlet between Golden and Denver along the Clear creek valley. These bodies, therefore, either floated down from Golden or are those of campers in Clear creek valley between the two points.

Railroad Man Shot.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 27.—A dispatch from Orlando, Fla., says:

Capt. W. Bailey Tucker, general manager of the Tavares, Atlantic & Gulf railroad and local manager of the Florida central & Peninsular railroad, was shot at 8:30 o'clock Sunday night, by Alfred St. Clair Abrams, prosecuting attorney of Lake county. The shooting occurred at Tucker's home. Abrams used a shotgun loaded with buckshot. He discharged only one barrel and only one bullet took effect, it struck Tucker in the head and inflicted an ugly wound. The physicians, however, say Tucker may recover. Abrams was lately the anti-railroad candidate for the legislature in Lake county. He was defeated and charged that Tucker had brought it about by unfair means. Abrams' wife was spending the summer here and he came up from Travares Saturday night. Tucker and Abrams met Sunday night at the former's home, and the shooting resulted.

Abrams immediately surrendered. Abrams is the only son of Maj. Alex St. Clair Abrams, who was formerly associated with Henry W. Grady on the Atlanta Herald.

Maj. Abrams came to Florida several years ago, and in politics has been one of the anti-railroad leaders.

Populist National Committee.

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—The first meeting of the new populist national committee was held Saturday evening at the Lindell hotel. The committee was called to order shortly after 8 o'clock by ex-Congressman Lafe Pence, of New York, and after much discussion the following gentlemen were placed in nomination for chairman of the committee:

Senator Marion F. Butler, of North Carolina; Gen. James B. Weaver, of Iowa; Judge H. L. Bentley, of Texas; Senator Wm. V. Allen, of Nebraska; John W. Breidenthal, of Kansas.

Senator Butler received the nomination on the second ballot.

BOLTING REPUBLICANS.

Issue a Manifesto as to Where They Stand.

Unequivocally in Favor of the Election of Bryan and Sewall, and Urge All Bimetallists to Support the Silver Ticket.

The committee of bolting republicans in session at Manitou, Col., on July 21 issued the following manifesto:

"We deem it fitting that we who have heretofore affiliated with the national republican party and who have rejected the financial plank of the platform adopted at St. Louis and refused to support the nominees of the convention should state our position in the presidential campaign and give briefly our reasons in support thereof.

"When certain delegates to the national republican convention repudiated the financial plank of the platform and withdrew from the convention we determined that we would give our support to such candidates as should appear most willing and capable of aiding in the restoration of silver to its rightful place as standard money.

"The democratic party in its Chicago convention has taken a position in its platform so pronouncedly favorable to silver and has nominated candidates of such unquestionable convictions in favor of the bimetallic policy and of such high personal character that we have determined to give them our support. We support such candidates because they represent the great principle of bimetallism, which we believe to be the cause of humanity, of civilization and the paramount question now before the American people.

Will Support Bryan and Sewall.

"We therefore announce that we shall by voice and vote support Messrs. Bryan and Sewall for president and vice-president, and we appeal to all citizens, and especially to republicans who feel as we do, that gold monometallism would be of lasting injury to the country, to act with us in securing their election.

"The democrats who believe in the gold standard are announcing their intention to support Mr. McKinley or proposing to put a third candidate in the field for the avowed purpose of aiding Mr. McKinley's election. A great number of leading and influential democratic journals have declared they will support the republican nominees. It is evident there is to be a union of forces on the part of the advocates and supporters of the gold standard to elect Mr. McKinley and a congress favorable to him which will support the financial policy outlined in the republican platform.

Silver Forces Must Unite.

"To those who believe in bimetallism, which means the equal treatment of both gold and silver at the mints of the nation, there is but one course to pursue, and that is to unite all the silver forces and to oppose with all our might the candidate representing the policy which we believe is fraught with disaster to the nation and ruin to the people.

Their Definition of "Gold Monometallism."

"Gold monometallism means the shifting to gold alone as primary money all the burdens of commerce and credit formerly borne by gold and silver, and as the world's stock of these metals has always been about equal in amount it means the doubling of the burden upon gold. Doubling the burden upon gold means doubling the demand for the same, and doubling the demand, of necessity, doubles the value thereof. This gradual shifting to gold of all the burdens of both gold and silver has caused a gradual and steady increase in the value of every dollar redeemable in gold, and hence a gradual and steady decline in the value of every commodity that is measured by that dollar.

Their View of McKinley's Success.

"The representatives and supporters of Mr. McKinley consented to the insertion in the St. Louis platform of the gold standard declaration thinly veneered by a declaration for bimetallism, 'when the leading commercial nations of the world should consent,' but until that consent was secured the gold standard must be maintained. It is well known that this consent cannot be secured from Great Britain and that such declaration for bimetallism means nothing with this limitation upon it. Mr. McKinley consented to the declaration for the gold standard in the platform, and in his recent speeches has accepted it, and has become the advocate thereof; he has shown by his speeches heretofore made that he understood the danger of the gold standard and the distress which would be inflicted upon the American people by its adoption, and yet he pledges the people to support and maintain that system, and fasten upon them all the evils of the financial system which he has heretofore repudiated, if they will make him president. Whatever may have been his attitude on the money question in the past, he must inevitably hereafter support the same financial system that the present democratic administration has, and if elected must continue the policy of Mr. Cleveland in the sale of bonds in time of peace. Hence, with the success of Mr. McKinley we may look for a continued increase of the public debt and the sale of bonds to maintain the gold standard.

Say It Is Due to the Gold Standard.

"That the condition of the country is not satisfactory all admit. The producers of wealth are not receiving fair and proper compensation for their labor, whether in field, factory or mine; enterprise has ceased; values are constantly declining; labor is unemployed; discontent and distress prevail to an extent never before known in the history of the country, and no reason can be found for such an unhappy condition save in a vicious monetary system. Those who profess to deplore the present financial condition and oppose the free coinage of silver are divided in opinion as to the cause of the present condition. Some declare that it is because we have too much tariff; others that we have not enough, while the fact exists that every gold standard country in the world, whether it has a high or low tariff, is now and has been during recent years in the throes of a financial panic; and every silver standard country, compared with its former condition, is enjoying an industrial development and degree of prosperity hitherto unknown in its history. While thus differing in opinion, they unite in asserting that the gold standard must be maintained until foreign countries shall signify their willingness that the American people shall exercise the rights of freemen and create a financial system of their own.

Doubt an International Agreement.

"If we overlook the humiliation and degradation we must feel on account of such a declaration of financial dependency, we may well inquire when the consent of the leading commercial nations will be obtained. No one who has read the proceedings of the three international monetary conferences that have already been held or who has examined the impracticable propositions presented at those conferences can for a moment believe that any international bimetallic agreement can ever be made with the consent of all 'the leading commercial nations of the world.' When will Great Britain, controlled as she is ever by the creditor classes, who collect vast sums of money for interest due her and her citizens, who buys of us annually many more millions than she sells to us and whose interest it is to make the pound sterling purchase as much of our products as possible, consent that we shall be financially independent as we are supposed to be politically independent?

"When did the creditor classes of Great Britain ever give up or in any way yield an advantage such as they now possess through the maintenance of the gold standard? There is no hope for international bimetallism until the United States shall establish bimetallism for itself, and when that is done international bimetallism may be secured without the consent of Great Britain. The United States on all other subjects of legislation acts independently of any other nation on earth. By what process of reasoning is its right, authority or ability to legislate upon this, the most important subject with which it has to deal, questioned or denied?

Says It's Cowardly.

"With a nation equal in wealth and power to one-fourth of the world, it is cowardly to say that we must ask the permission of Great Britain to establish and maintain a financial policy of our own. Believing, as we do, that a return to the monetary system especially recognized in the constitution and completely provided for by law from 1792 till 1873 affords the only ground of hope for the betterment of the distressed condition of all the classes except those who live by the increment that money loaned gives to those who loan it, we appeal to all classes to rally to the support of the only candidate whose success indicates any hope of relief.

All Urged to Support Bimetallism.

"Let the merchant and business man whose dwindling and lessened profits have despite his care and economy, brought him face to face with prospective bankruptcy and ruin, the professional man whose best efforts scarcely afford him compensation for his labor alone, the farmer, the continually falling prices of whose products have left him no returns for capital invested and work performed, and last but not least let the grand army of laboring men so-called, the artisan, the mechanic and the miner, and everyone who depends upon his daily labor for his daily bread look about him and observe the great number of those who vainly seek for a chance to work—upon the great army of enforced idlers, and one and all resolve to try, not an experiment (for bimetallism is not an experiment), but, rather a return to a policy that throughout the vicissitudes of our nation's infancy, through the internecine struggle of its manhood kept us a great, free and prosperous nation, in which the labor was not only respected and employed, but was so compensated that want and distress such as now weigh upon us was unknown. Let the lesson of history, too recent and too plain to be gainsaid or denied, be heeded, and let there be no fear that a system that so wonderfully protected labor, developed business enterprise and secured to the nation a contented and prosperous people in the past will do aught but bring to us a return of like prosperity, the predictions of disaster of our opponents to the contrary notwithstanding."

A Crisis Reached.

After eulogizing Mr. Bryan the manifesto concludes:

"This is a critical period in our national history. Our industrial and financial independence of other nations and peoples is involved in this campaign, and we firmly believe that there will be no return of prosperity until we shall have changed our financial system so as to restore the bimetallic system established by the fathers of the republic; and so believing, we urge all friends of gold and silver as standard money and the opponents of a single gold standard to give Mr. Bryan and Mr. Sewall their hearty support. In advising this course we do not consider it necessary that they shall abandon or surrender their political views on other questions. Profoundly impressed with the importance of the issues of this campaign, for ourselves and our associates, we respectfully submit the foregoing to the candid consideration of the American people."

The document is signed by H. M. Teller, Fred D. Dubois, Lee Mantle, Charles S. Hartman, Edgar Wilson, John F. Shafroth and A. M. Stevenson, committee.

THE ONLY COLONIZATION.

It Is That Done Upon the English Plan.

Colonizations and territorial extension are burdens, not gains. Great civilized states cannot avoid these burdens. They are the penalty of greatness because they are the duties of it. No state can successfully undertake to extend its jurisdiction unless its internal vitality is high, so that is has surplus energy to dispose of. Russia, as already mentioned, is a state which has taken upon itself tasks of this kind beyond its strength, and for which it is in no way competent. Italy offers at this moment the strongest instance of a state which is imperiling its domestic welfare for a colonial policy which is beyond its strength, has undertaken arbitrarily and has no apparent motive. Germany has taken up a colonial policy with great eagerness, apparently from a notion that it is one of the attributes of a great state. To maintain it she must add a great navy to her great military establishment, and increase the burdens of a population which is poor and heavily taxed, and which has not in its territory any great natural resources from which to draw the strength to bear its burdens.

Spain is exhausting her last strength to keep Cuba, which can never repay the cost unless it is treated on the old colonial plan as a subject province to be exploited for the benefit of the mother country. If that is done, however, the only consequence will be another rebellion and greater expenditure. England, as a penalty of her greatness, finds herself in all parts of the world face to face with the necessity of maintaining her jurisdiction, and of extending it in order to maintain it. When she does so, she finds herself only extending law and order for the benefit of everybody. It is only in circumstances like hers that the burdens have any compensation.—Forum.

POPULAR DISCONTENT.

The Silver Demonstration Is a Protest of the People.

"The west is swept with a wave of discontent," writes John Russell Young to the New York Herald, and adds: "This discontent is based upon the indifference at Washington to any interests but those of monopolies. Corporate schemes are so multipled and vast that they block the way in congress."

Where does the responsibility for "the indifference at Washington to any interests but those of monopolies" rest? The democratic party has been the persistent opponent of monopoly legislation. On the other hand, the republican party has fostered monopoly by legislation until under McKinleyism a climax of scandalous sacrifice of popular interests to the interests of monopoly was reached.

But the discontent is not confined to the west. The plain people in all parts of the country feel it and are suffering from Washington indifference to their indifference. The chief significance of the Chicago convention is the protest it embodies against the failure of democratic agencies at Washington to wipe out McKinleyism and completely reverse the monopoly-fostering policy established by the republican party.

Mr. Hanna, represetning the interests whose greedy rule has caused the irritation, offers as a remedy more of the same. He wants to allay popular discontent over trust-fostering and gold monometallism with another application of McKinleyism and the gold standard.—St. Louis Republic.

The condition of the hotel conveniences at the Springs are very poor, and yet there is not a more profitable investment in Kentucky than to buy and furnish a hotel at Big Bone. Numerous letters arrive here daily inquiring for entertainment, and, yet, with the best water in the world, we are without accommodations for the travelling public.

Well, gentlemen, you who are entrusted with overseeing the roads worked, have yet one more opportunity to redeem yourselves before the grand jury convenes, and from what those who are interested say, you'd better repair your charge, especially between Big Bone and Beaver, as taxpayers along that road aae getting restless, and the grand jury will be notified of any neglect remaining until the August term of circuit court.

It seems to be the desire of the Democrats of the Sixth Congressional District, and especially those favorable to the free coinage of silver, to give Boone county the next Congressman, and, as a number of your correspondents have thrown Congressional bouquets at several of our distinguished citizens in regard to that exalted position, we have one which we desire to deliver through the columns of the RECORDER, to our neighbors and friends, J. Frank Grant, who has been solicited to become a candidate by prominent Democrats in every section of the district. If Boone county wants to place one of her best and smartest Democrats in a Congressional seat at Washington, she has the opportunity. Socially, we like Colonel Berry, but is he sincere in his declarations for free silver? What caused his sudden change of heart? We unfurl to the breezes the banner of J. Frank Grant.

Union.

On the evening of July 16th the beautiful and spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Huey was thrown open to receive their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Huey have the reputation of being the most hospitable and entertaining couple in Boone county.

Mrs. Huey, attired in a beautiful costume of blue Mousseline de Soie, assisted by her charming friend, Mrs. Bowd, of Covington and her handsome son, Tom, stood in the reception hall to welcome her guests.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with cut glass bowls filled with Smilax and Sweetpeas. About 9 o'clock the guests commenced gathering from far and near. Soon the rooms were filled and the dancing began to the music furnished by a splendid string band. Miss Bertha Miller also charmed the assembly with beautiful music.

As the clock chimed the hour of midnight the guests were invited to the lovely dining rooms where a delightful repast was served. After supper the tripping of the light fantastic was kept up until the near approach of dawn warned them that the time had come to say farewell. All left with the hope that the opportunity of again assembling in that lovely home would soon be given them. Among those present were Misses Maud and Ella Norman, Fannie and Carrie Latham, Grace Garrison, Bertha Miller, Marietta Riley, Alva Williams, Fannie Cleek, Addie Norman, Lotta Fall, Effie Cleek and Harriet Dickerson; Messrs. James Clore, Dr. Clore, of Bullittsville; and L. C. Norman, jr., of Frankfort.

Miss Sallie Kinnedy entertained Saturday evening, in honor of Miss Glass, of Scott county.

The second District Sunday School Convention met at the Baptist Church at Union, Thursday, July 23d, 1896. After singing the opening song, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and prayer by Rev. T. L. Utz, the convention organized by selection Rev. T. L. Utz, chairman, and B. L. Rice, Sect'y.

In the absence of J. W. Kennedy, who, under the arrangement of the programme. was to make the salutatory address, Dr. M. J. Crouch supplied his place in a very neat and appropriate speech, to which Mr. W. W. Gaines, of Atlanta, Ga., responded in an able manner.

Big Bone, Beaver and Walton Sunday Schools not taking part in the singing exercises, the Union Sunday School sang, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," after which Rev. J. L. Presser filled the place of Rev. J. A. Kirtley, who was not present, in making the invocation prayer. The convention was then entertained by a solo from Miss Anna Rice, while waiting for those who had not come, and who were down for duty on the programme.

After the solo, Rev. J. L. Johnson, who had just arrived, was called and read a very interesting paper which he had prepared from the text, Proverbs, xxii, verse 6. "Train up a child in the way it should go, it will not depart from it." The subject then being opened for discussion, Mr. John Harbick, of Covington, and Rev. Lentz, the Lutheran minister, both of whom the convention was glad to have present, made good and interesting talks upon the subject. Rev. S. M. Adams said he thought the subject was too good for the discussion to stop, and made a forcible argument in behalf of the text. Rev. T. L. Utz also spoke upon the subject in his earnest and argumentative way, ending the discussion, except that Rev. L. Johnson wished to open up the subject that he might present some thoughts to the convention which he had omitted in the reading of his paper in introducing the subject. At the close of Rev. Johnson's remarks there was a song by the Union Sunday School, and then the convention adjourned for dinner, to meet again at 1:30 o'clock.

When the convention reassembled promptly at the appointed hour, there was a congregational song and then the subject, "Superintendent, Pastor or Church, which?" had been assigned to Mr. Perry Johnson, on the programme, was called. Mr. Johnson not responding for duty, the convention requested Rev. T. L. Utz to supply his place, which he did by giving a strong, lucid argument in favor of the responsibility of the Superintendent in connection with the Sunday School. At the close of his remarks, others were asked to discuss the question, and Rev. Johnson, in his forcible way, rather took issue with Mr. Utz in claiming that the responsibility for the success of the Sunday School rested upon the church. The discussion of the subject closed with Mr. Johnson's speech. Then Mr. Harbick with Mrs. Susie Garrison as accompanist entertained the convention with a solo, well sustaining his reputation as a good singer.

The next subject introduced, "Vice," and on the programme was assigned to Mr. Geo. Ossman. He not being present Mr. D. E. Castleman was asked to talk upon the question; he rather reluctantly complied, but made a good and interesting speech.

No other Sunday School participating in the singing exercises it devolved upon the Union School to furnish all the singing, which they did in a very creditable manner. They were assisted, however, by Miss Jennie Glass, of Scott county, Messrs. S. L. Webb and J. G. Blanton, of Erlanger; Mr. John Harbick, of Covington, and Mr. Tommie Huey, with his cornet, added very much to the music by playing an accompaniment to each song together with the organ—consequently another song by Union Sunday School, then an address by B. L. Rice. Miss Anna Rice with Miss Jennie Glass as accompanist sang, "Awake My Soul."

A vote of thanks was, on motion of Rev. L. Johnson. unanimously expressed thanking everybody for everything pertaining to the success of the convention.

Rev. S. M. Adams made the closing address, speaking, touchingly, of the great work in which the Sunday Schools are enlisted, and expressed the hope that all should meet again.

On motion of Rev. L. Johnson the Secretary was directed to send the proceedings of the convention to the Boone County RECORDER for publication in its next issue.

The convention sang, "Blessed be the Tie that Binds," and an adjournment was then moved and carried.

One of those outrageous scenes disgraceful to the fair fame of our town, occurred the other night in front of Mrs. King's hotel. Herbert and Dudley Anderson, the latter a soldier on furlough from Ft. Thomas, had an altercation with a negro named Ed Long, but were prevented from fighting by Marshal Moxley. The Andersons resisted arrest with drawn pistols, and after discharging the same into Mrs. Kings stable, made their escape. About a year ago Herbert raised a disturbance at a Christian Church festival at the opera house, and was let off with a light fine under the circumstances. If he is captured, as no doubt he will be, he will have to face a more serious charge, viz: breach of the peace, disorderly conduct, carrying concealed deadly weopons, resisting arrest and reckless shooting within the town limits.

There is no use of one Democrat trying to read another out of the party because they do not agree on the money question. The Democrats will have to pull together if they expect to cut any figure in the government of this country.

Our old friend, Geo. W. Popham, was in town yesterday, and says that he has a fine crop of corn and excellent prospects for tobacco, and if Bryan and Sewall are elected he will marry before christmas. He was in excellent spirits and believes Bryan and Sewall will be elected.

Junius Wiggiuton and Lyne Smith, a pair of young Lexington voters, the former a free silver man and the latter an advocate of sound money, settled an argument over the financial question in a novel way. They secured a set of boxing gloves, and, taking their positions under the gaslight near the Phœnix Hotel, fought it out, the free silver man being acknowledged the winner after the first round.

Last Friday about 2 p. m., lightning struck the large barn of Clinton Gaines, of Bullittsville, and destroyed it together with its contents. The barn was filled to its entire capacity with hay and oats, farming implements, &c. The only livestock consumed was the large black, family horse of Rev. J. A. Kirtley, which had just been put in a stall. The insurance amounts to $690, in the Boone County Company, and will not begin to make up the loss.

A colored boy named Hedges was sitting in a swing at his home near Francesville, last Friday. The swing seat was supported by two chains attached to limbs of a tree. Lightning struck the chains and ran down to the boy's hips, when it left the chains and ran down his legs, tearing his pants into shreds from the hips down. The negro was rendered unconscious for a short time only, and was soon up and about none the worse off on account of the effort to electrocute him.

It seems like a farce to relate that prisoners chained together and on their way to prison for life would commit robbery right along. But that is just what a gang of about sixty U. S. convicts did do on a B. & O. S. W. train that passed through here last Monday morning. They occupied a car together and whatever passenger went into that car was immediately held up and robbed. Watches, money, hats, dinner baskets belonging to laboring men on their way to work, in fact whatever the villians could lay hands on was captured. It was both funny and serious. —Aurora Independent.

"Old Chief" the large sorrel horse belonging to C. L. Crisler, was grazing in the back yard at the Boone House, one morning last week. He got too close to some beehives, and the bees made war on him, when he commenced a retreat, running on to the back porch, where his feet slipped, throwing him on the cellar door, which gave way beneath his weight and dropped him into the cellar. This unusual occurrence created considerable excitement at the hotel, and it was some time before the horse was gotten out of the cellar. Strange to say Chief was hurt very little, although Cy declared he ought to have broken his old neck.

On Tuesday evening Sheriff Busching came here from Versailles in quest of the notorious horse thief, "Spinny" Douglas. It is known that Douglas has a stolen horse in his possession and that he is in Ohio county. Busching deputized George Pate and together they started this (Wednesday) morning after their man. Up to the hour of our going to press they have not returned.—Dillsboro (Ind.) Advocate.

Douglas is the man who was captured on the road between Burlington and Bellevue, with two stolen horses in his possession, in 1879, and was shot through the lung in trying to escape from the guards at Bellevue. It was believed that the wound would prove fatal, and on Sept. 25th, 1879, he was recognized in the sum of $400, and taken home to Indiana to die, which he failed to do.

Base Ball.

The Burlington and Petersburg teams met at Petersburg again last Saturday, and played an excellent game, the score standing 3 to 2 in favor of Petersburg. It was pretty much a pitcher's battle, Brady and Alloway, each, doing splendid work. The game was witnessed by a large crowd of base ball enthusiasts. The following is the score by

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T

The Lawrenceburg, Ind., team will play the Burlington club at the park here next Monday afternoon (County Court day.) The Lawrenceburgers have been putting up good games this year, and you should not miss seeing the game here next Monday.

At Hebron Saturday morning, the Bullittsville boys defeated the Hebrons —both picked nines.

The Bullittsville and Hebron teams play ball at Hebron to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon.

I wish to say now to those owing back taxes, that I am in a position that I am compelled to raise considerable money in order to meet my obligaions. Master George Aheran, of Shelbyville, Indiana, has returned home after a short visit to his grandmother here.

Big Bone.

Quite a nice crowd of young people from Union and Beaver Lick, came to the Springs, last Saturday afternoon, to enjoy an outing in C. A. McLaughling's pretty grove. Quite a number of them took lunch with Dr. S. M. Adams and family, after which all left for their respective homes.

The condition of the hotel conveniences at the Springs are very poor, and yet there is not a more profitable investment in Kentucky than to buy and furnish a hotel at Big Bone. Numerous letters arrive here daily inquiring for entertainment, and, yet, with the best water in the world, we are without accommodations for the travelling public.

Well, gentlemen, you who are entrusted with overseeing the roads worked, have yet one more opportunity to redeem yourselves before the grand jury convenes, and from what those who are interested say, you'd better repair your charge, especially between Big Bone and Beaver, as taxpayers along that road ase getting restless, and the grand jury will be notified of any neglect remaining until the August term of circuit court.

People in the lower Big Bone bottoms are living in fear of the back water destroying their crops, which the water at this writing is fast encroaching upon, and every one along Big Bone and Mudlick creeks have good crops, and view the present danger with great alarm.

"Fiddler" Kirtley gave the young folks a nice picnic at his platform, last Saturday afternoon, and all present enjoyed themselves greatly.

Quite a number of visitors are spending the heated season with mine host, "Sifter" Rich, at the springs. Mr. Rich is an old settler, and can give them the benefit of his past experience in and about the Springs. He has the prettiest property and the best spring at Big Bone, and knows how to entertain, having run the Clay House several years ago, when it was in its glory.

Too much rain for saving the meadows and oats.

Nearly all the tobacco has been topped and looks fine.

Hon. N. S. Walton had a valuable horse injured so badly by a kick that it had to be killed.

Indiana Democrats have gone to work in earnest, and if hustle amounts to anything her electoral vote will be cast for Bryan and Sewall.

Chas. Fritch had a valuable mule to choke itself to death with a rope halter.

The Katie Did has commenced its melancholy chant.

A solid South and all the great West and Bryan will be elected and have votes to spare.

Cinch bugs, potatoe bugs and gold bugs will be the ruination of this country.

It seems to be the desire of the Democrats of the Sixth Congressional District, and especially those favorable to the free coinage of silver, to give Boone county the next Congressman, and, as a number of your correspondents have thrown Congressional bouquets at several of our distinguished citizens in regard to that exalted position, we have one which we desire to deliver through the columns of the RECORDER, to our neighbors and friends, J. Frank Grant, who has been solicited to become a candidate by prominent Democrats in every section of the district. If Boone county wants to place one of her best and smartest Democrats in a Congressional seat at Washington, she has the opportunity. Socially, we like Colonel Berry, but is he sincere in his declarations for free silver? What caused his sudden change of heart? We unfurl to the breezes the banner of J. Frank Grant.

James Burns had a mule to drop dead while hauling oats the other day.

The morning after his return from Chicago, I asked Hon. N. S. Walton how he felt, and he answered "Very well, considering the fact that they do not sleep any out there."

Miss Mary Cutter, of Cincinnati, who has been visiting relatives at Plattsburg, has returned home.

Union.

On the evening of July 16th the beautiful and spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Huey was thrown open to receive their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Huey have the reputation of being the most hospitable and entertaining couple in Boone county.

Mrs. Huey, attired in a beautiful costume of blue Mousseline de Sole, assisted by her charming friend, Mrs. Bowd, of Covington and her handsome son, Tom, stood in the reception hall to welcome her guests.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with cut glass bowls filled with Smilax and Sweetpeas. About 9 o'clock the guests commenced gathering from far and near. Soon the rooms were filled and the dancing began to the music furnished by a splendid string band. Miss Bertha Miller also charmed the assembly with beautiful music.

As the clock chimed the hour of midnight the guests were invited to the lovely dining rooms where a delightful repast was served. After supper the tripping of the light fantastic was kept up until the near approach of dawn warned them that the time had come to say farewell. All left with the hope that the opportunity of again assembling in that lovely home would soon be given them. Among those present were Misses Maud and Ella Norman, Fannie and Carrie Latham, Grace Garrison, Bertha Miller, Marietta Riley, Alva Williams, Fannie Cleek, Addie Norman, Lotta Fall, Effie Cleek and Harriet Dickerson; Messrs. James Clore, Dr. Clore, of Bullittsville; and L. C. Norman, jr., of Frankfort.

Mr. W. Winston Gaines, of Atlanta, and Miss Lutie Gaines, of Bullittsville, were the guests of their sister, Mrs. Crouch, last week.

Mrs. Lizzie Huey returned Thursday from a pleasant visit to friends in Jessamine county.

Mr. J. A. Huey and wife entertained a few friends Saturday evening in honor of their guests Misses Hattie Crouch and Fannie Linsay, and Geo. Crouch, of Gallatin county. Mr. Huey entertains in true Kentucky style and with his charming wife and bright children, all could but enjoy every moment spent in their beautiful home.

Messrs. Jim Blanton and Squire Webb, of Erlanger, have been enjoying the festivities of Union, lately.

Rev. Johnson, of the Methodist Church, will deliver a lecture at the town hall Thursday evening.

Mr, O. Harter and family have moved from Covington to their pretty cottage near Union for the summer.

Miss Sallie Kinnedy entertained Saturday evening, in honor of Miss Glass, of Scott county.

The second District Sunday School Convention met at the Baptist Church at Union, Thursday, July 23d, 1896. After singing the opening song, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and prayer by Rev. T. L. Utz, the convention organized by selection Rev. T. L. Utz, chairman, and B. L. Rice, Sect'y.

In the absence of J. W. Kennedy, who, under the arrangement of the programme, was to make the salutatory address, Dr. M. J. Crouch supplied his place in a very neat and appropriate speech, to which Mr. W. W. Gaines, of Atlanta, Ga., responded in an able manner.

Big Bone, Beaver and Walton Sunday Schools not taking part in the singing exercises, the Union Sunday School sang, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," after which Rev. J. L. Presser filled the place of Rev. J. A. Kirtley, who was not present, in making the invocation prayer. The convention was then entertained by a solo from Miss Anna Rice, while waiting for those who had not come, and who were down for duty on the programme.

After the solo, Rev. J. L. Johnson, who had just arrived, was called and read a very interesting paper which he had prepared from the text, Proverbs, xxii, verse 6. "Train up a child in the way it should go, it will not depart from it." The subject then being opened for discussion, Mr. John Harbick, of Covington, and Rev. Lentz, the Lutheran minister, both of whom the convention was glad to have present, made good and interesting talks upon the subject. Rev. S. M. Adams said he thought the subject was too good for the discussion to stop, and made a forcible argument in behalf of the text. Rev. T. L. Utz also spoke upon the subject in his earnest and argumentative way, ending the discussion, except that Rev. L. Johnson wished to open up the subject that he might present some thoughts to the convention which he had omitted in the reading of his paper in introducing the subject. At the close of Rev. Johnson's remarks there was a song by the Union Sunday School, and then the convention adjourned for dinner, to meet again at 1:30 o'clock.

When the convention reassembled promptly at the appointed hour, there was a congregational song and then the subject, "Superintendent, Pastor or Church, which?" had been assigned to Mr. Perry Johnson, on the programme, was called. Mr. Johnson not responding for duty, the convention requested Rev. T. L. Utz to supply his place, which he did by giving a strong, lucid argument in favor of the responsibility of the Superintendent in connection with the Sunday School. At the close of his remarks, others were asked to discuss the question, and Rev. Johnson, in his forcible way, rather took issue with Mr. Utz in claiming that the responsibility for the success of the Sunday School rested upon the church. The discussion of the subject closed with Mr. Johnson's speech. Then Mr. Harbick with Mrs. Susie Garrison as accompanist entertained the convention with a solo, well sustaining his reputation as a good singer.

The next subject introduced, "Vice," and on the programme was assigned to Mr. Geo. Ossman. He not being present Mr. D. E. Castleman was asked to talk upon the question; he rather reluctantly complied, but made a good and interesting speech.

No other Sunday School participating in the singing exercises it devolved upon the Union School to furnish all the singing, which they did in a very creditable manner. They were assisted, however, by Miss Jennie Glass, of Scott county, Messrs. S. L. Webb and J. G. Blanton, of Erlanger; Mr. John Harbick, of Covington, and Mr. Tommie Huey, with his cornet, added very much to the music by playing an accompaniment to each song together with the organ—consequently another song by Union Sunday School, then an address by B. L. Rice. Miss Anna Rice with Miss Jennie Glass as accompanist sang, "Awake My Soul."

A vote of thanks was, on motion of Rev. L. Johnson, unanimously expressed thanking everybody for everything pertaining to the success of the convention.

Rev. S. M. Adams made the closing address, speaking, touchingly, of the great work in which the Sunday Schools are enlisted, and expressed the hope that all should meet again.

On motion of Rev. L. Johnson the Secretary was directed to send the proceedings of the convention to the Boone County RECORDER for publication in its next issue.

The convention sang, "Blessed be the Tie that Binds," and an adjournment was then moved and carried.

T. L. UTZ, Chairman.
B. L RICE, Secretary.

Miss Ida Mayhugh of Indiana has been appointed teacher of the public school.

It is a great pity that Kentucky cannot furnish its own teachers.

Last Wednesday witnessed a slight boom in the matrimonial market. Bro. L. Johnson united Miss Maggie Johnson to Mr. Benj. Vest, widow; and later in the evening Miss Nellie Lewis, of Brach Station, to Mr. Everett McElroy.

B. L. Northcutt and family yesterday returned from a delightful visit to Mr. N.'s family in Grant county.

One of those outrageous scenes disgraceful to the fair fame of our town, occurred the other night in front of Mrs. King's hotel. Herbert and Dudley Anderson, the latter a soldier on furlough from Ft. Thomas, had an altercation with a negro named Ed Long, but were prevented from fighting by Marshal Moxley. The Andersons resisted arrest with drawn pistols, and after discharging the same into Mrs. Kings stable, made their escape. About a year ago Herbert raised a disturbance at a Christian Church festival at the opera house, and was let off with a light fine under the circumstances. If he is captured, as no doubt he will be, he will have to face a more serious charge, viz: breach of the peace, disorderly conduct, carrying concealed deadly weopons, resisting arrest and reckless shooting within the town limits.

For Rent.—A house and lot in Burlington. Also a nice building lot for sale. For particulars apply to.

There is no use of one Democrat trying to read another out of the party because they do not agree on the money question. The Democrats will have to pull together if they expect to cut any figure in the government of this country.

Junius Wigginton and Lyne Smith, a pair of young Lexington voters, the former a free silver man and the latter an advocate of sound money, settled an argument over the financial question in a novel way. They secured a set of boxing gloves, and, taking their positions under the gaslight near the Phenix Hotel, fought it out, the free silver man being acknowledged the winner after the first round.

Last Friday about 2 p. m., lightning struck the large barn of Clinton Gaines, of Bullittsville, and destroyed it together with its contents. The barn was filled to its entire capacity with hay and oats, farming implements, &c. The only livestock consumed was the large black, family horse of Rev. J. A. Kirtley, which had just been put in a stall. The insurance amounts to $690, in the Boone County Company, and will not begin to make up the loss.

A colored boy named Hedges was sitting in a swing at his home near Francesville, last Friday. The swing seat was supported by two chains attached to limbs of a tree. Lightning struck the chains and ran down to the boy's hips, when it left the chains and ran down his legs, tearing his pants into shreds from the hips down. The negro was rendered unconscious for a short time only, and was soon up and about none the worse off on account of the effort to electrocute him.

It seems like a farce to relate that prisoners chained together and on their way to prison for life would commit robbery right along. But that is just what a gang of about sixty U. S. convicts did do on a B. & O. S. W. train that passed through here last Monday morning. They occupied a car together and whatever passenger went into that car was immediately held up and robbed. Watches, money, hats, dinner baskets belonging to laboring men on their way to work, in fact whatever the villians could lay hands on was captured. It was both funny and serious.—Aurora Independent.

"Old Chief" the large sorrel horse belonging to C. L. Crisler, was grazing in the back yard at the Boone House, one morning last week. He got too close to some beehives, and the bees made war on him, when he commenced a retreat, running on to the back porch, where his feet slipped, throwing him on the cellar door, which gave way beneath his weight and dropped him into the cellar. This unusual occurrence created considerable excitement at the hotel, and it was some time before the horse was gotten out of the cellar. Strange to say Chief was hurt very little, although Cy declared he ought to have broken his old neck.

On Tuesday evening Sheriff Buschling came here from Versailles in quest of the notorious horse thief, "Spinny" Douglas. It is known that Douglas has a stolen horse in his possession and that he is in Ohio county. Buschling deputized George Pate and together they started this (Wednesday) morning after their man. Up to the hour of our going to press they have not returned.—Dillsboro (Ind.) Advocate.

Douglas is the man who was captured on the road between Burlington and Bellevue, with two stolen horses in his possession, in 1879, and was shot through the lung in trying to escape from the guards at Bellevue. It was believed that the wound would prove fatal, and on Sept. 25th, 1879, he was recognized in the sum of $400, and taken home to Indiana to die, which he failed to do.

Base Ball.

The Burlington and Petersburg teams met at Petersburg again last Saturday, and played an excellent game, the score standing 3 to 2 in favor of Petersburg. It was pretty much a pitcher's battle, Brady and Alloway, each, doing splendid work. The game was witnessed by a large crowd of base ball enthusiasts. The following is the score by

The Lawrenceburg, Ind., team will play the Burlington club at the park here next Monday afternoon (County Court day.) The Lawrenceburgers have been putting up good games this year, and you should not miss seeing the game here next Monday.

At Hebron Saturday morning, the Bullittsville boys defeated the Hebrons—both picked nines.

The Bullittsville and Hebron teams play ball at Hebron to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon.

DR. TALMAGE

Delivers a Sermon on Good Parents and Good Children.

Traits That Run in Families and the Good or Bad Blood They Represent—The Law of Heredity.

The text chosen by Rev. Dr. Talmage for his sermon Sunday ways I. Samuel, xvii., 58: "Whose son art thou, thou young man?"

Never was there a more unequal fight than that between David and Goliath. David five feet high; Goliath ten. David, a shepherd boy, brought up amid rural scenes; Goliath, a warrior by profession. Goliath, mountain of braggadocio; David, a marvel of humility. Goliath, armed with an iron spear; David, armed with a sling with smooth stones from the creek. But you are not to despise these latter weapons. There was a regiment of slingers in the Assyrian army, and a regiment of slingers in the Egyptian army, and they made terrible execution, and they could cast a stone with as much accuracy and force as now can be sent shot or shell. The Greeks, in their army, had slingers who would throw leaden plummets inscribed with the irritating words: "Take this!" So it was a mighty weapon David employed in that famous combat. A Jewish rabbi says that the probability is that Goliath was in such contempt for David that in a paroxysm of laughter he threw his head back and his helmet fell off, and David saw the uncovered forehead, and his opportunity had come, and, taking this sling and swinging it around his head two or three times and aiming it at that uncovered forehead, crashed it in like an eggshell. The battle over, behold the tableau: King Saul sitting, little David standing, his fingers clutched into the hair of decapitated Goliath. As Saul sees David standing there holding in his hand the ghastly, reeking, staring trophy, evidence of the complete victory over God's enemies, the king wonders what parentage was honored by such heroism, and in my text he asks David his pedigree, "whose son art thou, thou young man?" The king saw what you and I see—that this question of heredity is a mighty question. The longer I live the more I believe in blood—good blood, bad blood, proud blood, humble blood, honest blood, thieving blood, heroic blood, cowardly blood. The tendency may skip a generation or two, but it is sure to come out, as in a little child you sometimes see a similarity to a great-grandfather, whose picture hangs on the wall. That the physical and mental and moral qualities are inheritable is patent to any one who keeps his eyes open. The similarity is so striking sometimes as to be amusing. Great families, regal or literary, are apt to have the characteristics all down through the generations; and what is more perceptible in such families may be seen, on a smaller scale, in all families. A thousand years have no power to obliterate the difference. The great lip of the house of Austria is seen in all the generations, and is called the Hapsburg lip. The house of Stuart always means, in all generations, cruelty and bigotry and sensuality. Witness the queen of Scotts, Witness Charles I. and Charles II. Witness James I. and James II., and all other scoundrels of that line. Scottish blood means persistance. English blood means reverence for the ancient. Welsh blood means religiosity. Danish blood means fondness for the sea. Indian blood means roaming disposition. Celtic blood means fervidity, Roman blood means conquest. The Jewish faculty for accumulation you may trace clear back to Abraham, of whom the Bible says: "He was rich in silver and gold and cattle;" and to Isaac and Jacob, who had the same characteristics, Some families are characterized by longevity, and they have a tenacity of life positively Methuselish. Others are characterized by Goliathian stature, and you can see it for one generation, two generations, five generations, in all generations. Vigorous theology runs down in the line of the Alexanders. Tragedy runs on in the family of the Kembles. Literature runs on in the line of the Trollopes. Philanthropy runs on in the line of the Wilberforces. Statesmanship runs on in the line of the Adamses. You see these peculiarities in all generations.

Henry and Catharine of Navarre religious, all their families religious. The celebrated family of the Casini, all mathematicians. The celebrated family of the Medici, grandfather, son and Catharine, all remarkable for keen intellect. The celebrated family of Gustavus Adolphus, all warriors. This law of heredity asserts itself without reference to social or political condition, for you sometimes find the ignoble in high place and the honorable in obscure place. A descendant of Edward I., a tollgatherer. A descendant of Edward II., a doorkeeper. A descendant of the duke of Northumberland, a trunkmaker. Some of the mightiest families of England are extinct, while some of those most honored in the peerage go back to an ancestry of hard knuckles and rough exterior. This law of heredity is entirely independent of social or political conditions. Then you find avarice and jealousy and sensuality and fraud having full swing in some families. The violent temper of Frederick William is the inheritance of Frederick the Great. It is not a theory founded by worldly philosophy, but by Divine authority. Do you not remember how the Bible speaks of a chosen generation, of the generations of the righteous, of the generations of vipers, of an untoward generation, of a stubborn generation, of the iniquity of the fathers visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation? So that the text comes to-day with the force of a projectile hurled from mightiest catapult: "Whose son art thou, thou young man?" "Well," says some one, "that theory discharges me from all responsibility. Born of sanctified parents, we are bound to be good, and we can not help ourselves. Born of unrighteous parentage, we are bound to be evil, and we can not help ourselves. Two inaccuracies. As much as if you should say: "The centripetal force in nature has a tendency to bring everything to the center, and therefore all come to the center. The centrifugal force in nature has a tendency to throw everything to the periphery, and therefore everything will go out to the periphery." You know as well as I know that you can make the centripetal force overcome the centrifugal, and you can make the centrifugal overcome the centripetal. As when there is a mighty tide of good in a family that may be overcome by determination to evil, as in the case of Aaron Burr, the libertine, who had for father President Burr, the consecrated; as in the case of Pierrepont Edwards, the scourge of New York society 80 years ago, who had a Christian ancestry, while, on the other hand, some of the best men and women of this day are those who have come of an ancestry of which it would not be courteous to speak in their presence. The practical and useful object of this sermon is to show you that if you have come of a Christian ancestry then you are solemnly bound to preserve and develop the glorious inheritance; or, if you have come of a depraved ancestry, then it is your duty to brace yourself against the evil tendency by all prayer and Christian determination, and you are to find out the family frailties, and in arming the castle put the strongest guard at the weakest gate. With these smooth stones from the brook I hope to strike you, not where David struck Goliath, in the head, but where Nathan struck David, in the heart: "Whose son art thou, thou young man?"

There is something in all winter holidays to bring up the old folks. I think many of our thoughts at such times are set to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." The old folks were so busy at such times in making us happy, and perhaps on less resource made their sons and daughters happier than you on larger resources are able to make your sons and daughters. The snow lay two feet above their graves, but they shook off the white blankets and mingled in the holiday festivities—the same wrinkles, the same stoop of shoulder under the weight of age, the same old style of dress or coat, the same smile, the same tones of voice. I hope you remember them before they went away. If not, I hope there are those who have recited to you what they were, and that there may be in your house some article of dress or furniture with which you associate their memories. I want to arouse the most sacred memories of your heart while I make the impassioned interrogatory in regard to your pedigree: "Whose son art thou, thou young man?"

First, I accost all those who are descendants of a Christian ancestry. I do not ask if your parents were perfect. There are no perfect people now, and I do not suppose there were any perfect people then. Perhaps there was sometimes too much blood in their eye when they chastised you. But from what I know of you, you got no more than you deserved, and perhaps a little more chastisement would have been salutary. But you are willing to acknowledge, I think, that they wanted to do right. From what you overheard in conversations, and from what you saw at the family altar and at neighborhood obsequies, you know that they had invited God into their heart and life. There was something that sustained those old people supernaturally. You have no doubt about their destiny. You expect if you ever get to Heaven to meet them just as you expect to meet the Lord Jesus Christ. That early association has been a charm for you. There was a time when you got right up from a house of iniquity and walked out into the fresh air because you thought your mother was looking at you. You have never been very happy in sin because of a sweet old face that would present itself. Tremulous voices from the past would accost you until they were seemingly audible, and you looked around to see who spoke. There was an estate not mentioned in the last will and testament, a vast estate of prayer and holy example and Christian entreaty and glorious memory. The survivors of the family gathered to hear the will read, and this was to be kept and that was to be sold, and it was "share and share alike." But there was an unwritten will that read something like this: "In the name of God, amen. I, being of sound mind, bequeath to my children all my prayers for their salvation: I bequeath to them all the results of a liftime of toil; I bequeath to them the Christian religion, which has been so much comfort to me, and I hope may be solace for them: I bequeath to them a hope of reunion when the partings of life are over. 'Share and share alike,' may they inherit eternal riches. I bequeath to them the wish that they may avoid my errors and copy anything that may have been worthy. In the name of God who made me, and the Christ who redeemed me, and the Holy Ghost who sanctified me, I make this my last will and testament. Witness all you hosts of Heaven. Witness time, witness eternity. Signed, sealed and delivered in this our dying hour. Father and Mother." You did not get that will proved at the surrogate's office, but I take it out to-day and read it to you. take it out of the alcoves of your heart. I shake the dust off it. I ask if you will accept that inheritance, or will you break the will?

Oh, ye of Christian ancestry! You have a responsibility vast beyond all measurement. God will not let you off with just being as good as ordinary people when you had such extraordinary advantage. Ought not a flower planted in a hothouse be more thrifty than a flower planted outside in the storm? Ought not a factory turned by the Housatonic do more work than a factory turned by a thin and shallow mountain stream? Ought not you of great early opportunity be better than those who had cradle unblessed? A father sets his son up in business. He keeps an account of all the expenditures. So much for store fixtures, so much for rent, so much for this, so much for that, and all the items aggregated, and the father expects the son to give an account. Your Heavenly Father charges against you all the advantages of a pious ancestry—so many prayers, so much Christian example, so many kind entreaties—all these gracious influences, one tremendous aggregate, and He asks you for an account of it. Ought not you to be better than those who have had no such advnatage Better have been a foundling picked up off the city commons than with such magnificent inheritance of consecration to turn out indifferently. Ought not you, my brother, to be better, having had Christian nurture, than the man who can truly say this morning: "The first word I remember my father speaking to me was an oath; the first time I remember my father taking hold of me was in wrath. I never saw a Bible till I was ten years of age, and then I was told it was a pack of lies. The first 20 years of my life I was associated with the vicious. I seemed to be walled in by sin and death."

Now, my brother, ought you not—I leave it as a matter of fairness with you—ought you not to be better than those who had no early Christian influence? Standing as you do between the generation that is past and the generation that is to come, are you going to pass the blessing on, or are you going to have your life the gulf in which that tide of blessing shall drop out of sight forever? You are the trustee of piety in that ancestral line, and are you going to augment or squander that solemn trust fund? Are you going to disinherit your sons and daughters of the heirloom which your parents left you? Ah! that can not be possible—that can not be possible that you are going to take such a position as that. You are very careful about the life insurances, and careful about the deeds, and careful about the mortgage, and careful about the title of your property, because when you step off the stage you want your children to get it all. Are you making no provision that they shall get grandfather's or grandmother's religion? Oh! what a last will and testament you are making, my brother! "In the name of God, amen. I, being of sound mind, make this my last will and testament. I bequeath to my children all the money I ever made and all the houses I own, but I disinherit them. I rob them of the ancestral grace and the Christian influence that I inherited. I have squandered that on my own worldliness. Share and share alike must they in the misfortune and the everlasting outrage. Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of God and men and angels and devils, and all the generations of earth and Heaven and hell, July, 1896."

Oh, ye of highly favored ancestry, wake up this morning to a sense of your opportunity and responsibility. I think there must be an old cradle or a fragment of a cradle somewhere that could tell a story of midnight supplication in your behalf. Where is the old rocking chair in which you were sung to sleep with the holy nursery rhyme? Where is the old clock that ticked away the moments of that sickness on that awful night when there were but three of you awake—you and God and mother? Is there not an old staff in some closet? We beg you to turn over a new leaf this very day.

Oh! the power of ancestral piety, well illustrated by a young man of New York who attended a prayer meeting one night and asked for prayer, and then went home and wrote down these words: "Twenty-five years ago this night my mother went to Heaven—my beautiful, blessed mother—and I have been alone, tossed up and down upon the billows of life's tempestuous ocean. Shall I ever go to Heaven? She told me I must meet her in Heaven. When she took my hand in hers and turned her gentle, loving eyes on me, and gazed earnestly and long into my face, and then lifted them to Heaven in that last prayer, she prayed that I might meet her in Heaven. I wonder if I ever shall. My mother's prayers. Oh! my sweet, blessed mother's prayers! Did ever a boy have such a mother as I had? For 25 years I have not heard her pray until to-night. I have heard all her prayers over again. They have had in fact a terrible resurrection. Oh! how she was wont to pray. She prayed as they prayed to-night, so earnest, so importunate, so believing. Shall I ever be a Christian? She was a Christian. Oh! how bright, and pure, and happy was her life. She was a cheerful and happy Christian. There is my mother's Bible. I have not opened it for years. Did she believe I could ever neglect her precious Bible? She surely thought I would read it much and often. How often has she read it to me. How did she cause me to kneel by my little bed and put my little hands up in the attitude of prayer. How has she knelt by me and over me, and I have felt her warm tears raining down upon my hands and face. Blessed mother, did you pray in vain for your boy? It shall not be in vain. Ah! no, no, it shall not be in vain. I will pray for myself. Who has sinned against so much instruction as I have? Against so many precious prayers put up to Heaven for me by one of the most lovely, tender, pious, confiding, trusting of mothers in her Heavenly Father's care and grace. She never doubted; she believed. She always prayed as if she did. My Bible, my mother's Bible and my conscience teach what I am and what I have made myself! Oh! the bitter pangs of an accusing conscience. I need a Savior mighty to save. I must seek Him. I will. I am on the sea of existence and I can never get off from it. I am afloat. No anchor, no rudder, no compass, no book of instructions, for I have put them all away from me. Savior of the perishing, save, or I perish.

The White Lady, whose appearance is believed to bode evil to the reigning house of Prussia, has, it is said, been seen at the old castle in Berlin.

COMPARE THE CANDIDATES.

Bryan's Record and Ability Overshadows McKinley's.

Republican tacticians have not yet settled upon the line of attack which is to convince the American people that Bryan lacks presidential qualifications.

During this period of indecision they are letting their voters become very much confused on one point—Bryan's abilities as a public speaker.

One day recently a republican organ averred in the same article that Bryan was utterly unable to make an offhand speech, and that all his early political successes were obtained by his "gift of gab." In addition to this conflict of assertion it publishes in the same issue three extemporaneous speeches made by the democratic candidate in Illinois.

Numberless other republican organs have been see-sawing between the two allegations—that he cannot speak except by committing every sentence to memory and he is a mere talking machine without thought or knowledge; that he cannot prepare a speech except with laborious reference to books and that he is a freak of verbosity who has no capacity or training as a student.

Democrats are willing to end this trying republican perplexity. They will be generous about it. Republicans may choose weapons, ground and code for a contest between the two presidential candidates.

McKinley's specialty is the tariff. If he does not know that he does not know anything. Take him, then, at his best. Compare any speech he ever made on the tariff question or any part of it with any tariff speech Bryan ever made. The test ought to show which is the closer and abler student of a public question, and McKinley has all the presumable advantage.

If that does not suit, bring the two men face to face before any audience in any American town, Ohio towns not barred. Select the particular branch of the particular issue and give notice beforehand, or spring it as a surprise to both at the opening of the meeting. McKinley was in congress when Bryan was a boy. He was a presidential candidate when Bryan, not much past boyhood, entered congress. For almost as many years as Bryan has spent on earth he has been in contact with great speakers and great issues. He has lived in a state of great campaigns. He ought to play with the young Nebraskan in such a contest. But he need not carry weight for age. Any weight, any course, any conditions are at his option.

If the republicans deem it undignified to expose their man's reputation in a joint debate, let each prepare a paper on any topic associated with national government—legislative, administrative or judicial; concerning the past, present or future. Judge the productions by the test of composition, or of knowledge of of imagination or of logic or of humor or of spirit or of universal philosophy—one or all.

Whatever William J. Bryan is or is not, as an orator or a man of public affairs, he is the superior of McKinley. He has all of McKinley's lauded virtues and more of every quality or acquisition that makes one man greater than another. He knows more of every subject that interests mankind. He could have a nervous chill and make a more brilliant oration or a more profound argument on McKinley's pet theme than McKinley ever did or ever will make.

Unless McKinley's friends will agree to go before the people on a comparison of some sort they should decently drop the subject of ability in the arts of expression and present their figurehead for the trusts as a man who thinks so much that he never learned to tell his thoughts.—St. Louis Republic.

——We may expect during the coming campaign to hear republican stump speakers shouting calamity, while tinned-plate is turned out in increasing quantities and there is no diminution in the number of corporation charters issued or in the value of farm products. It is well to remember facts when republican campaign orators are shouting.—Harrisburg Patriot.

——The issue between the people of the United States just now is that of money, and on this Mr. McKinley is yet to be heard clearly and unequivocally.—Nashville American.

ATTITUDE OF M'KINLEY.

Mark Hanna's Candidate Is a Doubtful Article.

Mr. Hanna must now perceive how unfortunate and unsuitable is his selection of William McKinley as the republican candidate for president.

McKinley was selected because of Hanna's belief, no doubt an honest one, that the American people were anxious to reverse their verdict, twice rendered, of emphatic disapproval of the McKinley bill. In a campaign in which McKinleyism was to be the paramount issue no fitter choice of leader could be made than the man who gave his name to the system. We know that Mr. Hanna intended that the tariff would be the great issue; we recall how he strove to make the currency plank non-committal and meaningless, and how for months before the convention he padlocked Mr. McKinley's lips on the great question of the currency. Hanna's plan was to sidetrack the currency question, upon which he knew his party to be divided, and give prominence to the tariff, upon which he believed his party to be substantially a unit. It might or might not have proved good generalship in the campaign to follow; at any rate, events have changed the entire line of battle. Events have outgeneraled Mr. Hanna, they have sent to the rear the only question upon which Mr. McKinley stands for anything vital and positive, and brought to the front an issue upon which Mr. McKinley has shuffled and dodged and kept silence, and upon which his known record must inevitably excite profound distrust.

Now perceiving this drift of things and believing his play to be a sudden discovery that he has all along been a sound-money man, does he finally speak in no uncertain terms? What assurance has the country that he would veto a free coinage rider to a high tariff bill? The veriest dolt knows that in no other form will a high-tariff bill pass the next congress, and yet McKinley is silent on that point. He voted for the Sherman bill, and declared himself in 1890 "for the double standard."

Evidently McKinley will not get the votes of hundreds and thousands of sound-money men who might vote for a republican of clearer record and greater bravery on the money question. This tariff question must inevitably drive away the support of democrats and independents, and what is there in his currency record to attract them? It may not be too late to consider the withdrawal of McKinley and the substitution of Gov. Morton or Senator Allison or some other republican properly representing, as McKinley does not and cannot, the antithesis of Mr. Bryan's known and undisguised views on the money question.—Albany Argus.

POLITICAL SLEIGHT OF HAND.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

USED A SQUIRREL FOR BAIT.

Californian Pulled a Rattlesnake from His Hole with a Bushytail.

"I have always been an enthusiastic lover of the rifle," said ex-Senator Sprague at Sacramento the other day, "and during my hunting trips through the mountains have had numerous encounters with rattlesnakes, some of which were simply hair-lifting, and I think I can safely lay claim to having killed the largest rattlesnake ever seen in this portion of the state.

"It was on the headwaters of Cash creek, in Yolo county. My brother and I were returning to camp after an unsuccessful trip for deer, and discovered the snake curled up in a recess among the bowlders that littered the canyon we were passing through.

"As it was impossible to get a shot at the snake, owing to its sheltered position, I procured a pole and stirred it up. After rattling angrily for a few seconds it came out and threw itself into the creek, swimming handily, with its head and six inches of its body out of the water. We shot the snake, fished it out of the creek, and found that it weighed 24 pounds and had 19 rattles, several having evidently been taken off.

"Another occurrence is seemingly impossible of belief, yet I can vouch for the truth of the story. Once while hunting in the sink of Cash creek my attention was called to the peculiar action of a ground squirrel. I watched it a minute and then shot it. Hurrying to the spot, I nearly stepped upon a large rattlesnake, which had evidently been engaged in charming the animal.

"The snake turned at my approach and escaped down a squirrel hole. The thought struck me that possibly I could attract the snake out of the hole by means of its intended prey, so I cut the squirrel open with my hunting knife, put a rough stone in its interior to give it weight, took a piece of twine and tied it around the body of the squirrel to retain the rock, attached it to the dried limb of a tree and inserted it in the hole.

"The squirrel slipped out of sight, and shortly afterward when I attempted to withdraw it I found that my scheme had been successful.

"The resistance of the snake was simply wonderful, and I had to exert considerable strength to pull the reptile out. When it came out, it was with a jerk, and to prevent it from striking me in the face, I threw it over my head. The end of the limb snapped, and the snake flew through the air and lodged in a thicket of buckthorn brush, which it was impossible for man to penetrate, and so the snake escaped.

"The following summer, while hunting in the same vicinity, I shot a large rattler, and noticing a peculiar swelling in the body, I cut it open, and found in the interior the same rock I had placed in the body of the squirrel, which I identified by a thread of quartz running through it, the only difference being that all the sharp angles were worn away, the stone being perfectly smooth, probably from the effects of food digestion during the year."—San Francisco Call.

A Unique Fence.

Years ago, when Thomas Thacher built his great Colonial house in Roxbury, Mass., it was one of the grandest houses in town. Mr. Thacher thought it would be a fine idea to have a continual fox hunt on his grounds, and he conceived the idea of having the fence running up over the terrace in front of the conservatory represent the chase. One of the men in the foundry followed out his suggestion, and the result was the most unique fence in the world. The fence is of iron, painted in natural colors, and consists of low running vines and branches which just brush the backs of seven hunters racing for dear life up the hill. The dogs are about five feet apart. The last dog is still a little distance from the fox which has looked back for a moment to see how near his enemies are.—Chicago Chronicle.

ABOUT ROAD BUILDING.

Suggestions Submitted by a Well-Known Canadian Engineer.

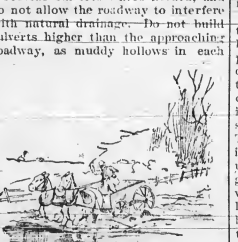
Country roads are commonly divided into two classes—gravel and dirt, writes A. W. Campbell, C. E. highway commissioner for Ontario, in Farmers' Advocate. The terms "good" and "bad" are frequently regarded as synonymous with these, and as our roads are usually constructed, this interchange of words is to some extent not without reason. The way to construct a good gravel road is to first build a good dirt road from the natural soil.

A good dirt road to those who have driven through sloughs designated "bad" roads during the past spring, will seem an impossibility. And yet these bad roads are chosen in June by the teamster in preference to the "good" gravel roads. These latter are now a collection of parallel ruts, with rocks firmly set, protruding or rolling loose under the wheels and the feet of the horses.

The diseases being so perfectly known, it is a poor recommendation for our inventive powers if we cannot produce the remedies. For dirt roads, take the water out and keep it out; for gravel roads, this and more. There will be less moisture remaining in the roads after the rains fail to assist the disintegrating and upheaving action of the frost. There will be less water to be carried away in the spring, and more ample means to do it quickly. A dry foundation for a road is as necessary as for any other structure. Were the benefits of drainage better known, our system of roads would soon be vastly improved.

Drainage must be secured at the surface of the road and beneath it. Underdrainage—there may be a few exceptions—will accomplish more than surface drainage. Where and how to place the drains is a matter regarding which no definite code of laws can be formulated, since each mile or less of roadway may lead to an entirely new combination of circumstances. Surface drainage is attained by rounding up the road bed ordinarily with a rise of not less than one nor more than one and one-half inches to the foot, providing open ditches on each side of the grade. Crown the roadway on hills slightly more, so as to draw the water sharply to the ditches. Water allowed to follow the track of the wheels will wear them to ruts, and deposit a softened mass of mud at the foot of the hill.

The drains running parallel to the road about three feet below the surface and at the edge of the grade will usually afford the best method of underdraining. Take advantage of all natural water courses to relieve the ditches of their water. Use hard, well-burned tile laid carefully to a uniform grade, with a fall of not less than three feet to the mile, and if it can be obtained at reasonable cost, not less than six feet. Provide culverts where needed, and do not allow the roadway to interfere with natural drainage. Do not build culverts higher than the approaching roadway, as muddy hollows in each side will result. If possible place small culverts below the surface, and cover with earth, as they will be the less subject to wear and will not interfere with the smooth surface of the road. Make culverts permanent. Avoid the use of perishable material. See that proper outlets are made for them and keep free. Water which is allowed to stand in them in frosty weather will destroy the best material.



A TYPICAL COUNTRY ROAD.

The surface of the road should be kept smooth and free from ruts. Where gravel or other metal is to be applied it is best to dig a trench for its reception, otherwise the crown will be too high. Gravel is intended to perform the double service of a roof to shed the water and a floor to resist the wear of traffic and to lessen the amount of traction required. A 40 per cent. greater load can be drawn by a team over a smooth gravel road in an equally good state of repair. All the work should be done on a uniform plan in a systematic and permanent manner, with a view to its extension on the same plan in subsequent years; this in a short time will secure a perfect system of finished roads.

Modern road machinery, properly operated, is economical. The grader and roller are indispensable. The grader performs the work quicker, easier, cheaper and more perfectly than can be expected from hand labor. The roller compacts the loose material, unites the different particles so as to better resist the load, prevents displacement which forms ruts, and reduces to a minimum resistance to traffic.

Singular Fact About Milk.

It is a singular fact that milk shipped long distances to market is in a healthier condition when it reaches the consumers than milk produced in town. This is because the former is well cooled before being shipped and is carried in refrigerator cars, and the low temperature prevents the multiplication of germs of decayed disease. Milk produced near at hand is too often sold direct to the consumer before it is properly cooled, and some of it is from cows in unhealthful surroundings.—American Agriculturist.

POTATO SPRAYER.

With It One Person Can Easily Spray Ten Acres in a Day.

The sprayer illustrated herewith is inexpensive and easily made. First, a heavy iron rod about 1¼ inches thick and 6½ feet long must be procured for an axle. This may be taken from an old grain drill or elsewhere, and adapted to the present use. For wheels, take those of the hay-rake, as a high wheel makes the flow stronger. The shafts should be about eight feet long. They are bolted to the axle, five feet apart, and fastened securely, that the rod may not turn. Two pieces of wood, three by three inches and three and one-half feet long, are bolted across the shafts 12 or 15 inches apart, one of them being placed a trifle back of the axle, and the other farther in front of it. The singletree is attached to a third crosspiece farther forward. Two more pieces, two by six inches and two feet long, are bolted edgewise across the 3x3-inch pieces, two feet apart. These pieces are hollowed out at the top so that a barrel will rest on them securely. Two stopcocks are inserted into the barrel opposite the bung, and two pieces of hose six feet long, terminating in a fine spray nozzle, attached to them. The bunghole is turned upward and a funnel used in filling it. The horse walks between two rows of potatoes, the man following and holding a nozzle in each hand above the row, on either side. When turning at the end of a row, the hose may be laid across the barrel to stop the flow. The pressure of the liquid in the barrel, if well elevated, is sufficient to produce a heavy flow, and the jolting of the machine will keep the paris green in solution. With a sprayer of this kind one person can easily spray ten acres of potatoes in a day.—Orange Judd Farmer.

RINGING OF TREES.

Those Intended to Be Cut for Timber Should Be So Treated.

Architects will remember that the old books on building advise that the trees intended to be cut for timber should have a ring of bark cut around the trunk in the latter part of the winter preceding the autumn season in which they are to be felled. This advice seems to have been founded on experience, but so far as we know it is never followed in modern times. Very recently, however, M. Mer, of the great forest school of Nancy, in answering an inquiry as to the best means for preserving wooden telegraph poles from the ravages of insects, explains the effect of "ringing" growing trees in a very interesting manner.

According to M. Mer, a tree intended to be used for a telegraph pole should be cut in the autumn, and during the preceding winter should have a ring cut out of the bark, down to the wood, near the upper part of the trunk. If this is done the ascent of the sap in the spring is prevented, as it is well known that the sap circulates just under the bark. The tree nevertheless grows, consuming as nutriment the starch grains laid up in the sapwood. When the season's growth is over, the starch in the sapwood is gone; but, as fresh sap has not been allowed to circulate, no new starch has been deposited in its place to supply the next season's growth, and when the tree is felled its tissues contain no starch, and consequently no food for the insects, which feed upon wood, and which, according to M. Mer, only eat the wood for the starch which they find in it. To inject wood with sulphate of copper, as is often done, M. Mer says helps to complete its protection, but only on condition that the starch is first removed as he suggests.—American.

TRUCK FARMING PAYS.

Facts and Figures Ascertained by an Investigating Committee.

To give some idea of the profitableness of raising vegetables and fruit, we will mention that only recently the large truck-farms in the vicinity of one of our large cities were inspected by a committee to examine into this industry, and they reported that one farm of 40 acres yielded annually $16,000 worth of fruits and vegetables; another of six acres yielded $6,000: another of 90 acres returned $20,000, and another of 20 acres returned $8,000. These figures represent gross receipts, but even after making reductions for fertilizers and other necessary expenditure, the net returns, although not stated, were no doubt handsome.

Apart, however, from the profits from exclusive truck-farming, the garden acre on the farm can be made an important item in the domestic economy of the home, if we take into consideration all the expense attaching to the purchase of garden produce necessary to the health, comfort and well-being of the family.—Farm and Fireside.

Fertilizer for the Orchard.

All orchards in full bearing should have an annual top-dressing of mineral fertilizers. But the trees that have blossomed heavily should also be dressed with stable manure used as a mulch and spread under them a little further than their roots extend, which in bearing trees will cover the entire ground between them and their neighbors on either side. If hogs are turned in to root under the trees they will mix the earth and the top dressed manure, so that the soil will be in the best possible condition to hold the rainfall and keep it in position for use by the tree roots. Managed in this way the apple crop will not be injured by dry weather late in the season.—American Cultivator.

EARTH'S GIANT VALLEY.

Fierce Natives Indulge in Strange and Disgusting Customs.

The greatest valley in the world, according to Dr. J. W. Gregory, an English explorer, is the Great Rift valley, which is an immense depression or trough which runs through eastern Africa 4,000 miles "from the Lebanons almost to the cape." "The Great Rift Valley" is the title of Dr. Gregory's book, which has just appeared in London, which is the newest, most comprehensive and important of the works that have appeared on this region.

One of the most fascinating portions of this record of travel is that relating to the Masai, the most ferocious of the African races. You never can be sure of your Masai, even when you have spat upon him and he upon you. That is how they swear eternal friendship, Dr. Gregory says—the harder one spits the more the other feels flattered. How it is done and what the Masai equivalent for handshaking is the traveler explains in this wise:

"The chief came up, and for the first time held out a 'knobkerry' cut from a rhinoceros horn for me to shake. I, of course, shook it, glad of this expression of friendliness, though quite aware that if it stopped at this it meant nothing. But as I walked down the slope from the camp after the men he came up again, and this time not only held out his knobkerry, but as I shook one end he shook the other. After walking a few yards he repeated this more vigorously. Then at last he held out his hand; we shook hands, at first coldly, and then more cordially. Finally, after we had walked a couple of hundred yards, he repeated the process and the chief spat upon me, a salutation which I returned with perhaps unnecessary vigor. I had been warned that whenever Masai retire from a conference without spitting the spit of peace squalls may be expected. I was, therefore, much relieved when the friendly rite had been performed."

But all this meant nothing, for that very night a band of Masai warriors, led by this same chief, came crawling snakily through the grass, bent upon massacring the camp. But the traveler was ready for them and they crawled back, leaving several of their dead upon the field.

Dr. Gregory's botanical and zoological observations are full of interest. He seems to have solved one of the problems that have vexed African explorers for a long time: Why there should be in some places vast heaps of bones of animals all mixed together. Some writers have attributed this to the action of a deluge, but Dr. Gregory says the bones are the remains of animals that in season of drought have fought around the water holes for their last drop.—N. Y. Journal.

HOW GUNPOWDER IS MADE.

The Part That Each of the Three Ingredients Plays.

Gunpowder then steadily developed as mechanical skill constructed better and better weapons in which to use it, until to-day it has reached a perfection of manufacture for various purposes which allows its effects to be foretold in any weapon, even to the time it takes a grain to burn, and to the distance it will drive a shot.

Roger Bacon's gunpowder was made of saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal. Saltpeter is chemically called niter, and is a natural product found bedded in the earth in different parts of the world, chiefly in India and China. Sulphur, too, is found in a natural state in many volcanic countries, like Sicily, while, as is well known, charcoal is made from wood or woody substances by heating them almost to a burning heat in an airtight vessel, thus driving off everything in them but carbon.

Saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal are still the only ingredients of the gunpowder in common use, although a new gunpowder made of different materials is undergoing successful experiment. A mixture of saltpeter and charcoal alone would form an explosive, and sulphur is added chiefly to make it plastic, or capable of being pressed into cakes and shapes. All three ingredients have to be purified by the most careful chemical skill before they are combined. Then an exact proportion of each has to be measured out according to the kind of powder to be made.

For the gunpowder generally used you would find in every 100 pounds, if you could separate the ingredients, 75 pounds of saltpeter, 15 pounds of charcoal and ten pounds of sulphur; but it would be almost impossible to separate the ingredients, for they are not merely mixed together as you might mix pepper and salt, but they are ground and rolled and stirred and pressed together by special machines until they are almost sufficiently united to form a single new substance.

This mixing process is called "trituration," and the powder is thus made into the form of big cakes, called press cake, and then broken up, and screened into grains of special sizes, or ground to the fine powder used for shotguns and revolvers. The large-grained powders are still further stirred together until the grains become highly glazed, and these are called cannon powders. A lighted match may be held to a grain of cannon powder and it will be found almost impossible to set it on fire, but once ignited it flashes off very suddenly and violently.—Lieut. John M. Ellicott, in St. Nicholas.

Young Seals Afraid of the Water.

Young seals do not know how to swim. They have to become gradually accustomed to the water, either by entering it to paddle about themselves, or by being carried into it in their mother's jaws. They have great fear of the waves that break into foam, and as soon as they see one approaching take to flight in terror, and do not turn round until they have ascended to a very high place above the sea.—St. Louis Republic.

A HORNLESS BUCK.

Killed in Michigan and Said to Be Unique in This Country.

A curious and exceedingly unusual freak is reported by a deer hunter to Forest and Stream. The hunter was up in Wexford county, Mich., and got on a deer trail that had hoof marks plainly made by a buck. Almost all hunters of deer can tell a buck from a doe track. After trailing the deer, and getting within a rod of it the buck leaped out of a clump of brush and got knocked down with a bullet through the head.

The deer did not have any horns, although a two-year-old, and weighing 150 pounds. Further, it never had had any horns.

Does with horns, bucks with three horns, dozens of spikes, and malformed horns, have often been reported of Michigan and other American deer, but this is the first hornless American buck reported, although some European deer sometimes lack such weapons, but yet are able to whip the horned ones.

Can't See Your Own Eye Move.

A curious and slightly known fact is that it is impossible to move the eye while looking at its reflection in a mirror. The eye is the most movable part of the face, yet if you try to look at it and move it a thousandth part of an inch you will be baiked in your purpose. The moment you endeavor to perceive the motion of the eye it becomes fixed. That is why a person's expression as he sees himself in the glass is entirely different from the one by which his friends recognize him.

Beer and Size of Feet.

The very peculiar theory has of late been propounded that all women who partake to any extent of malt drinks have large feet! The women of Holland, Germany, are quoted as examples, while the women of the wine countries—France, Spain and Italy—are, on the other hand, famed for their small and shapely feet.

Pill Clothes.

The good pill has a good coat. The pill coat serves two purposes; it protects the pill, enabling it to retain all its remedial value, and it disguises the taste for the palate. Some pill coats are too heavy; they will not dissolve in the stomach, and the pills they cover pass through the system as harmless as a bread pellet. Other coats are too light, and permit the speedy deterioration of the pill. After 30 years exposure, Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills have been found as effective as if just fresh from the laboratory. STATE NEWS

Mrs. Charles Murry was burned to death at her home in Shelby county.

Gov. Bradley was in Cincinnati, having his throat treated for an old trouble which has recently come back on him.

Uncle Sam sent a revenue officer to High Bridge camp meeting, last Sunday, and pulled ten men for selling whisky without license.

A Mormon conference, in which thirty-five Mormon Elders will participate, will be held at Vanceburg, Ky., from July 31 to August 3.

The body of Nellie Mullen, who jumped from the suspension bridge, between Covington and Cincinnati, last Friday, was found at Louisville Sunday.

A number of prominent physicians are at Glen Springs. They have met largely for the purpose of experimenting with and testing the X-rays.

Nield Terhune, of Mercer, says he does not intend to raise any more wheat. His reasons are that on an average only 10 bushels of wheat are raised to the acre in the United States.

Lightning killed Samuel Head, Jr., eleven sheep and a dog on Carr's Fork. The boy had gone to drive the sheep up, and all had taken shelter under a mulberry tree, which was struck by the lightning.

The poor wheat crop this season has caused farmers to band together to save a part of the threshing expenses; a number stacked their crops on Aunt Sally McClanahan's farm, Monday night the creek carried it all away, loss 600 bushels.—Bracken Chronicle.

At a negro dance near Versailles a general fight took place, during which razors, corn knives and pistols played conspicuous part. Henry Johnson was cut in the arm and Will Tyler was shot in the abdomen by Sid Jackson and will probably die. Jackson escaped.

According to the Chicago Breeders Gazette the hay crop is short the country over. Many farmers are discouraged over the prevailing low prices for their products, but all of them should perform their whole duty to all their crops, and work and vote for the election of a labor, business and good time creating government.

The hemp farmers say that the price for cutting hemp this year cannot exceed two dollars per acre. At this price laborers can earn nearly twice the wages as compared with any other work they can get at the time of the year. The continual wet weather has almost totally ruined the wheat that is in the shock, a very small per cent. of the crop though remained to be threshed.—Lexington Gazette.

Calvestor Whitlow, a young man living in Allen county, became afflicted with rheumatism in 1870. He went on crutches about a year. Since that time he has been confined to his bed perfectly helpless. His legs and arms are dried up, his fingers and toes have come off. His eyesight and hearing are gone, and his mouth is paralyzed so only a small portion of food can be inserted. He is still living and has all the time seemed to enjoy life.

The heaviest rains in a year fell in this county Monday and Tuesday night and there is no estimating the damage wrought by the overflow, Creeks ran out of their banks and carried away fences, growing crops and everything in the path of the flood. Much of the wheat crop was in the shock and is totally ruined. Tobacco was washed out of the ground in many places, and one farmer lost five acres. Near Millville the roads were washed so badly as to be impassable, and bridges are reported to have been swept away.—Midway Clipper.

By tools made from the iron bedstead in their cells, William Henry and Frank James cut a large stone out of the wall of the jail at Versailles, and escaped. Henry was awaiting his trial which would have come up in October. He was charged with robbery. James was serving a seven months term for house breaking, and had served four months of his term. William Paul, another prisoner, would not go with them.

Nearly everything in the way of farm products are in a most prosperous state. Wheat however was very poor and the crop in the county will not average over ten bushels to the acre. The grain is very poor in most of the crops threshed. Oats developed wonderfully but the recent rain and wind caused most of them to fall down and much of the crop will be wasted unless fed in the field to hogs. All other crops are up to an average. There never was a better potato and corn crop and tobacco is a better crop than has been raised in this section for ten years. Garden truck is plentiful; fruit with the exception of pears and apples, is abundant. Live stock is in fine condition, though some cholera has been reported among the hogs. But taking it all together, so far as crops are concerned the farmer is in clover waist high, figuratively speaking and if prices are any thing like what they ought to be the farmer will do very well this year.—Milton News.

The Governor was busy with official acts last Monday. He appointed Hon. John W. Lockett, of Henderson, special circuit Judge to go to Hickman and sit during the trial of the Commonwealth against Hayward Boone. He issued requisitions and appointed a number of State agents to go after criminals outside the State, and whose arrests have not been effected. He pardoned Augustus Underwood, of Martin county, whose two-years sentence for manslaughter was just expiring. Underwood was police Judge of Eden; was at the head of a posse, one of whom shot a man, and Underwood was convicted as an accessory. Nine of the jury and all the local officials asked for his pardon. One of the jury is dead and the other two had removed from the county. The Governor also pardoned six little boys who had been indicted for seining on Goose creek in Clay county. He restored to citizenship two men who have been out of the penitentiary for eight or ten years. One is W. H. Faught, of Muhlenburg county, and the other Ben Goggin, of Jessamine. The Governor rejected the applications for pardon in the case of 12 convicts now in prison.—Capital.

A dispatch in Monday's Enquirer gives the following account of a killing in Grant county: "Out on a country road, in the Fork Lick Hills, five miles south of this town, was enacted a tragedy about 11 o'clock last night that resulted in the death of one of the participants and the wounding and fleeing from justice of the other. Carl Hightower and Noah Readenower were neighbor boys, born and raised in sight of each other. They were each the sons of well-to-do farmers, whose farms join, and were each about 22 years of age. Some time ago they had a falling out and a fist fight at the wedding of a nighbor's daughter. The hard feeling was on account of a damsel they were each paying attentions to. Readenower has since threatened to kill Hightower. Last night they met at Mt. Pleasant Church. Hightower was riding home, accompanied by a friend, when he was overtaken by Readenower, who stopped him in the road, and after a few words were passed struck him in the face with a stone which he took from his pocket. Hightower pulled his gun and fired two shots at Readenower, each shot making a slight wound, and then wheeled his horse and started to run. As he started off Readenower, who had got his gun from his pocket, fired at him, the ball striking him in the back and killing him almost instantly. Readenower, after watching his fallen foe until he was dead, took to the woods and hills, and is still at large. The Sheriff with a posse of a dozen men scoured the woods and hills all last night and to day, but the young man who did the killing is still at large. If he is found before the excitement subsides a lynching will likely occur."

CROP AND STOCK.

According to the Agricultural Department at Washington, the condition of the fruit crop throughout the county has declined during the past month. Kentucky is one of the most favored States.

Silas Corbin, of near Bethel, was in the Outlook office Monday having a social chat. In a reply to "How are your crops?" he said that about two acres of his corn were only "tolerable,"—would make only about 20 barrels per acre,—but that the balance would make a better average. He feels so good over the general crop prospects that he will take holiday this week and haul a buggy-load of neighbors' children to the Sharpsburg fair.—Owingsville Outlook.

Good rains have fallen again during the week and the prospects for splendid crops of all kinds, except wheat, in this county was never better at this season of the year. The corn crop, which is a very large acreage, will average in Grant county at least ten barrels to the acre. It is feared that corn will be worth less than a dollar a barrel the coming fall. Oats are a splendid crop the largest average per acre ever grown in the county and tobacco is looking extremely well.—Williamstown Courier.

Anent the present low price of tobacco the following story has been going the rounds: A Woodford county farmer shipped a hogshead to a Louisville Warehouse to be sold. After remaining in storage for several months the tobacco was put on the market and disposed of. The warehouseman then took his charges out of the proceeds of the sale, leaving just 22 cents which he sent the shipper of the tobacco. The farmer at once wrote a polite note of acknowledgment and thanks but sent back the 22 cents with 22 cents more, with the instructions to buy for him two hogsheads as he wished to speculate a little on the weed.

Razor & McGlothlin's machine was threshing James Kincard's wheat, on the T. C. Owings farm, on Flat Creek, last Thursday, when the cylinder of the separator exploded with a report as loud as that of a small cannon. The separator was blown to fragments, some of which cut and bruised Thomas Cook, of Rowan county, Hoyt Warren, of Craigs, very seriously. They were brought in buggies to this town and their wounds were dressed by Dr. Gudgell. None of their bones were broken. Mr. Cook was feeding the machine and the explosion threw him a considerable distance. In falling he lit on his feet, spraining both ankles. One of the rods plowed out a fleshy furrow in James Jones' arm and, passing on, stuck in the ground. Uncle Jo Suladie, who was sacking wheat, was tumbled over backwards, either by fright or the concussion, but wasn't injured. The separator was a total wreck. What caused the cylinder to explode is a puzzling question. Some think the high speed of running it, others that there was some explosive like dynamite in the wheat, caused it.—Owingsville Outlook.

Mr. E. R. Scott sends us a copy of the Tri-County Scribe, published at Plymouth, Ill., of July 23, in which appears an obituary of Moses Scott, who died July 18th, after a short illness incident to old age. Mr. Scott was born in this county February 2, 1816. In October 1836 he and Miss Harriet Rice were married. She lived until about seven years ago. In 1850 he bought and moved to a farm in Hancock county, Illinois, and there he resided until his death. Four sons and three daughters survive him.

Hon. J. H. Wilson, the Republican Congressman in the Eleventh District of Kentucky, is a believer in the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and believes it will come, no matter who is elected President this fall.

It is said that Senator Sherman is becoming very much alarmed because of the manifest growth of the sentiment in favor of the free coinage of silver, and is urging those in control of McKinley's campaign to bring the stumping contingent into operation at once. He offers his services, and wants to mount the rostrum at once. The danger ahead is stimulating the old gentleman to action, but he will have a hard time, with all the assistance he can muster, in stopping the silver tide that has set in over in Ohio.

Sim Carter, a boy aged about 14 years, was arrested last week in Owen county and lodged in jail at this place charged with stealing two horses from R. K. Ford. He had an examinging trial before Judge Bowling Friday, and was held over to await the action of the grand jury. From the evidence adduced it seems that the boy in company with another boy took the horses and after riding them about seven miles turned them loose expecting them to go home, and in our opinion, considering the age of the boy, he has been punished sufficiently by his week's incarceration.

OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald]

Concord Association will meet with the church at Greenup's Fork Owen county, Ky., seven miles from Owenton and four miles from Monterey, on Tuesday after the third Sunday in August 1896.

Bosque Bonita residence, the handsome place in Woodford county, formerly owned by Gen. Abe Buford, was destroyed by fire several days ago. Bosque Bonita is half way between Midway and Versailles and is one of the handsomest country houses to be found anywhere.

A petition is being circulated for the purpose of asking that a local option election be held next October. This petition is being signed, not only by those who have heretofore voted in favor of licensing saloons in Owenton, but also by a number of those who have always voted on the other side of the question.

Mr. J. D. Sullivan informs us that a snake was found in a hen egg at his house a few days ago. The egg was of the regulation size and there was nothing in its external appearance out of the ordinary but when broken it was found to contain the reptile in question. His snakeship was about two inches in length, the size of a rye-straw and was perfectly formed having regular snake eyes and mouth. It was thought to be alive at first, but soon shriveled to very small proportions.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The demoralized condition of trade is not confined to any branch but appears to be universal in all mercantile and mechanical industries and farm products, and while our tobacco trade has not shown much activity and prices have declined until the growers and shippers are realizing less money than for some years, still we have the consolation to know that tobacco is doing fully as well in proportion to any other product of the soil.

The future is not favorable for any better prices for this great staple until there is a general revival of all branches of trade, and from the present outlook that is some distance in the future. Therefore the tobacco trade can only accept the situation and do the best they can, which they are doing at present by selling and accepting the prices. Our market fluctuates largely in prices one sales day being satisfactory, while perhaps the next day the buyers will show carelessness and prices will decline and cause the sellers to reject, and then, with more activity, they will advance and become firm again.

The past week has been a continuation of the past month, and with only moderate sales there appears to be no change in prices only when fluctuating. There has been more active bidding for color, and some fancy hogsheads have done exceedingly well, but the general run of the tobacco has shown no change in prices, and with the general impression that the growing crop will be a good one it is causing the owners of the old crop to accept the sales very liberally.

The reports from the country are not so encouraging as they were some time ago.

The Populist and Silver Parties, both conventions held in St. Louis, last week, nominated William Jennings Bryan for the Presidency. It begins to look like a winning combination has been formed, and many of the Democrats who have been "settin' on the fence, cussin'" ever since the Chicago convention, will begin crawling down and climbing into the Democratic band wagon.

Some very large bets have already been made on the result of the Presidential election—one of $20,000 to $10,000 that Bryan will be elected. That fellow has faith in the boy orator.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1896. NO. 41.

The race for assessor will be the race.

THE Ohio river destroyed a great deal of property last month.

CINCINNATI came to the front last week with two murders.

SHERMAN and Foraker are slated to open the campaign at Columbus, Ohio, August 15.

THE rain, hail and wind did great damage to crops in the central part of this State, last Saturday.

THE sound money Democrats, alias bolters, will hold a state convention in Louisville on the 20th inst.

LIGHTNING struck the grand stand at the Greensburg, Indiana, races, and shocked a thousand spectators.

THE Republicans of this idstrict will hold their Congressional convention in Newport on the 12th of this month.

SEWALL, the Democratic nominee for Vice President, says he will not withdraw, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

GOV. BRADLEY has designated the first Monday in September as Labor Day, and requests that the same be observed as a holiday.

Bernhardt for her little outing in America added $120,000 cash to her balance at the bank. She played for a percentage of the gross receipts.

THE heaviest hail storm ever known in that section visited Woodford county, last Saturday, and did great damage to the corn, hemp and tobacco crops.

THE Aurora Bulletin says "there is a split in the Democracy of Kentucky. Henry Watterson is on one side and the remainder of the party on the other."

THE Commercial-Tribune says that "as a matter of fact those sound money Democrats have been Republicans all along and are just finding it out."

SOME of the Hazle Green Democrats, who have been published by some of the Louisville dailies as declaring against Bryan, are indignant and give the statement an emphatic denial.

BRYAN is a Populist, because the Populists indorsed him, say the Republicans. On the same grounds then McKinley is an anarchist, because Her Most, the greatest anarchist in this country indorses him.

WITH as popular a man as Hon. R. P. Ernst as the Republican candidate for Congress, and the Democrats cutting the throats of each other, there is no telling just how the next Congressional election will pan out in the Sixth District.

T. B. MATHEWS has withdrawn from the race for the Republican nomination for Congress in this district, leaving Hon. R. P. Ernst a clear field. Mr. Ernst is a strong man, and the Democrats will have a sure enough fight on their hands when the campaign opens.

THE Emerson-Fisher Carriage Company, the largest manufacturers of buggies in the world, assigned Saturday, in Cincinnati, to L. Emerson and Attorney Edward Ritchie. The assets consists of stock and accounts valued at $250,000 and real estate worth $200,000 more. The liabilities are $369,000.

JUST what are Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge's political intentions is a matter of considerable interest in the Ashland district. Unless a primary is called for choosing the Democratic candidate for Congress, it is belived that he will bolt the party, and attempt to fuse with the Republicans, he to be the candidate of the fusion.

THE Republicans are not loading the mails down with speeches made in opposition to the free coinage of silver, by Major McKinley while a member of Congress, but the Democrats are sending out extracts from some of his speeches in Congress that sound very much like they came from a man who at one time, was very much of a silver man.

DR. HUNTER, who was the Republican candidate for United States Senator so long, last winter, has been nominated for reelection to Congress. The Doctor was so popular in his district that other Republicans dared not to oppose him, even, with all the assistance Gov. Bradley could furnish towards knocking the "gum-shoe" statesman out.

The Chicago Ticket and Platform.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The monometallist Democrats probably do not relish the prospect of standing up to be counted, even in the Eastern States. They have discovered in the brilliant light of recent events that they comprise not only a very small company, comparatively speaking, but that their financial policy, founded as it is upon selfish greed, has become so extremely unpopular in the eyes of the great majority, that they begin to feel a very creditable shame for themselves in its advocacy, so much that they do not want to stand out as marks for present and future political disfavor. The largest gathering of them which I have yet seen mentioned was estimated at about 50, and that was by newspapers which applauded their action. I have no doubt that a few hundreds could be gotten together in any of the large Eastern cities, and if they thought of holding a mass meeting, the Republicans might furnish the audience, as has been done in other such cases.

Democrats generally are falling into line for the Chicago ticket, those who are not fully satisfied with the platform, standing faithfully by the old custom that the majority rules the party.

Another obstacle to separate action on the part of the gold Democrats is the silence of the gold oracles. The small army of officeholders, as the majority, not all of these by any means, have been looking to Gray Gables with strained attention and anxiety to learn what Mr. Cleveland means to do, but without a response. They will not hear from him: he is too true a Democrat. Secretary Herbert, and some other of the higher officials, eager to preserve the accidental prominence they have enjoyed, from falling into decay, have declared that they will not support Bryan and Sewall, but their action is from too insignificant a source to be taken as an indication of the administration's wishes with regard to a third ticket. It is rumored that Mr. Cleveland would not object to leading a forlorn hope of gold Democrats, but this is only a rumor, the acceptance of which; does violence to that gentleman's well earned reputation for sound sense and judgment. This hope of the gold Democrats, if it be one, is without foundation in probability, and might be better abandoned on the threshhold. It is only a few after all of the faithful cohorts, who have ventured to break silence, and avow their allegiance to the Republican ticket, or even to repudiate the Democratic.

The other oracle, oddly enough, is Mr. Hill, of New York, to whom the gold men at Chicago gave such prominence as naturally misleads many into supposing that he has convictions on the money question, or can supply that small wing of the party with light and leadership. Now Mr. Hill will lead it to any conclusion which be believes likely to be profitable to himself, and just now he does not see that profit in a Republican victory in New York, for the simple reason that the next legislature in that State is to choose his successor in the National Senate. He is naturally disinclined to a third ticket, seeing that Democratic chances in his own State will not be improved by dividing the forces. How serious that division would be is indicated by the fact that Tammany Hall is pretty certain to declare its loyalty to the Chicago ticket, and to throw the votes of New York city for Bryan and Sewall, in spite of Wall street. We have no doubt that Mr. Hill would like to take the position of Mr. Patterson, of Pennsylvania, and invite "the two wings to flop together." He has no enthusiasm for gold, which would lead him to acquiesce in a breaking up of the party for the sake of the gold theory. He has, on the contrary, such a very solid conviction that he ought to succeed himself in the Senate of the United States for the next six years, that he is not likely. to encourage any disturbing factions in the party in that state just now; and so, as a politician, he does not see any good reason why his friends should play the Republican game in this election, without some such compensation as this of the senatorship.

The Australian ballot law, in all these states where it has been enacted, adds greatly to the interest of the political situation. Suppose a third ticket were to be nominated, how would it be designated in the official ballot? The Chicago nominations were certainly regular in the fullest measure. That convention was made up of delegates chosen by regular Democratic organizations from every state in the Union. The defeated minority remained in the convention to the end, and nearly half of them participated in the voting. According to the unwritten law which governs the case, electors designated as Democratic in the official ballots, would be obliged, if elected, to cast their ballots in the electoral college for Bryan and Sewall. They would want to do this, and, being selected on account of their well known and unquestioned bias for the Chicago platform and its ticket, they would do so.

In New York, and possibly in other states too, the names of these candidates will be printed at the head of the column above those of the Democratic electors. Yet the New York State convention which meets in September, and which has to select the electors, may have a majority, hostile to the Chicago nominees. The gold organs predict such a majority with great show of confidence, but it is far from certain. Taking the vote of the Pennsylvania delegates to Chicago as an indication, it is very likely that a strong majority will be found to acquiesce in the decision of the National Convention. But if it should be otherwise, and if the Convention in New York should either refuse to choose electors, or should choose them from the supporters of a third ticket, the courts, when invited to interpret and enforce the ballot law, as they would surely be in the event such electors sought to cast their votes for others than the regular nominees of the Democratic convention, would infallibly defeat the successful operation of any such nefarious scheme. The possibility of such a happening as is here suggested, furnishes a fresh illustration of that evil which results when one state undertakes to restrict the liberties of the people, by arranging for them, what they can much better arrange for themselves.

In the campaign of education the Republicans profess to have begun, the business men of the east declare their intent of taking a leading part. They are going to place in the hands of the farmers, already crushed by mortgages, campaign literature with which they hope to reconcile them to paying two bushels of wheat where they paid one before. They are going to undertake in the same way, to reconcile the Southern planters to taking four cents a pound for cotton, instead of ten. They are also to undertake to reconcile the South and West to borrowing money on rat-trap mortgages, at from eight to twenty-five per cent. interest. And they are going to try to prove all this to be indispensable to personal honesty and personal integrity. Where they will find the argument for this, it is not easy to see. They have not yet been furnished by any of the monometallist organs, which are now living by the advertisements they are getting from those same business men, who thus control their opinions. But in any case, their campaign literature may easily be more truthful in substance, cogent in logic, and deferential to the opinions of others, than the big dailies deal out to their readers in editorials on gold and silver money.

This heaping of invectives by the gold contractionists on all those who hold opinions at variance with their own, bodes no good, either to those who use them, or to the peace and happiness of our people. Tirades of abuse will anger, but will not convince, and a continuance of the campaign misrepresentation, mistatement, and abuse so systematically begun by the gold press, can not fail to fan into flames the slumbering wrath of our producing classes, who have been so grievously wronged by the discarding of silver and the consequent appreciation of the value and power of gold.

In the theological arena, souls are won by moral suasion, not by physical compulsion. Vinegar does not catch flies, at least not from the willingness of the fly to be caught. Personal abuse will not convert thinking, honest men to the opinion of the abusers. Let us reason together, remembering that we be brethren of the same party. Let us agree if we can; differ if we must; but let us do either in that spirit which recognizes and permits for others the unfettered enjoyment of the sovereign right of freedom of speech, thought and suffrage.

J. FRANK GRANT.

THE report sent out from Lexington that the silver Democrats intended to pack the convention held by the gold men, was a political canard, promulgated for the purpose of creating sympathy for the gold men. The lie was caught up with and stamped out before it had accomplished its purpose.

POLITICAL.

Ex-Gov. McCreary says: "Democracy means more than the money question." And he stands by the nominees, Bryan and Sewall.

Dover Free Silverites are perfecting arrangements to have a grand barbecue at that place in the near future.

Hon. C. M. Clay, Jr., of Bourbon, is bolting again and is out in a card denouncing the Chicago platform and nominees. We hope to live long enough to see a Democratic ticket and paltform that will suit the Bourbon statesman.—Caslisle Mercury.

There was never anything like it, and if free silver continues to grow as it has during the past three months the Republican party in Owen won't be left with a nest egg. Outside of those who expect office, the ranks are being shattered daily. —Owen News.

Some of the free silver papers are not pursuing a course towards their fellow Democrats, who are a little slow to accept the Chicago nominees that is calculated to keep them within the party ranks. There never was a better time for the practice of a little moderation by the majority element of the party.—Georgetown Times.

Our esteemed Louisville contemporaries persist in their efforts to make Colonel Breckinridge run for Congress nolens volens. Permit us to suggest that the Seventh District is strongly Democratic and a Democrat will be elected without any outside interference. While this subject is up, we may remark that Evan E. Settle will be that man.—Owen Herald.

The country press may not amount to much when individual papers are taken into consideration, but as a whole it is about as powerful as the great metropolitan journals. The local newspapers go into the homes of the community. They are read and digested by every member of the family, and, in the majority of cases, have a strong influence on the minds of their readers. It is some consolation, therefore to know that while the thunderers of the cities are largely deserting Bryan and Sewall, the little country fellows are standing by them; and the little country farmer and the little country merchant who read the little country papers, have just as big ballots as the city chaps—and more of them.—Cynthiana Democrat.

The Courier-Journal, and its journalistic followers have forgotten that as late as three months ago they wrote flaming editorials day after day deploring a probable bolt on the part of silver men after the Chicago convention "had declared for gold." Their editors and allies discussed the question on the streets and warned silver men that they must abide by the action of the convention, believing at that time gold would carry the day.

They have also forgotten the traditions and history of the party they now betray. As late as 1892 several States of the Union declared for free silver and fought for it on the floor of the convention which nominated Cleveland. They were beaten then as they had been many times before but they did not bolt. The action of the convention was accepted as the law of the party and they fell into line. Shortly after the convention adjourned, there was a mere whisper of a bolt upon the part of some of the silver men. What happened? Mr. Cleveland, the nominee, rushed to the foot lights and fired a partisan letter at the party in which he pointed out the duty of every Democrat. That as he then saw it was that the majority ruled; that the action of the convention was supreme and that no man could be a Democrat who refused to walk up and take his medicine.

This sentiment was applauded by the press of this city and echoed from ocean to ocean. But that anticipated "gold declaration" failed to connect; the shoe is now on the other foot and the other fellow's ox is being gored. Where is Mr. Cleveland now?—that great patriot of 1892.—Louisville Critic.

AN old Democratic farmer in Maine has just had an object lesson which has a direct bearing on the currency question. It has convinced him of the fallacy of the silver men's argument and it will convince others. It happened thus: The old farmer, not having a good opinion of national banks, kept his money in the barn. In one bag he had $200 in gold and $300 in silver. The barn burned down, as barns too often do. For the melted gold the farmer received $200, while for the melted silver the very best he could do was $120. He is now a gold man and will vote against Bryan and Sewall. All his free silver neighbors have bolted with him. —Lawrenceburg Press.

That old farmer is a bigger ass than Thompson's Colt, and it was a mule, if he votes against Bryan and Sewall. They want to save him and others like him from just such igneous catastrophe as that. Under the "existing gold standard" the farmer gets only bullion value for his melted dollars, under free coinage he could send them to the mint and have them recoined into 300 bright new silver dollars free of charge. Stick to Bryan and Sewall old farmer.—Aurora Bulletin.

AN old river man was heard to remark that, if there were more summers like this, steamboating would soon gain what it has lost since the introduction of railroads. It is only the uncertainty of water that prevents fine boats, which could compete with the railroads in freight rates, and still make good time for the accommodation of passengers. If a few boats like the City of Louisville could run regularly between Cincinnati and New Orleans, trade would be built up to a great extent. A few millions of dollars expended on the Ohio would keep it at a good stage of water at all seasons, as there are many long stretches which never close, and locks and dams would make the river always navigable.

The hot weather seems to have blocked off some of our correspondents.

CUBAN NEWS.

More Troops for Weyler to Be Shipped the Last of August—Spain Has Difficulty in Getting Men to Go Into the Fray.

LONDON, July 30.—A dispatch to the Central News from Lisbon says that private advices received from Madrid state the existence of a secret Cuban committee has been discovered there and that certain Cuban exiles who were in Madrid have vanished. It has also been discovered, the advices say, that separatist schemes relative to the Philippine islands are on foot. As a result of certain acts of insubordination among the last 600 men embarked for Cuba and the discovery that secret proclamations were being circulated among the soldiery, and in view of the notorious reluctance of the troops to go to Cuba, the reinforcements, 40,000 strong, who will be embarked at the end of August, will be shipped without arms, through fear of a mutiny among them, and their arms will be forwarded by other vessels.

The advices also state that desertions from the army are numerous, especially in Aragon. Fear is entertained by the authorities that disorders will occur in connection with the dispatching of reinforcements for the Spanish forces in Cuba, and elaborate precautions are being take to prevent trouble. Instructions have been given to the Spanish censor to suppress all telegrams relating to the matter.

GUNBOAT LOST.

The German Gunboat Iltis Goes to the Bottom—Only Ten of the Crew Saved.

SHANGHAI, July 30.—A dispatch from Chee Foo states that the German gunboat Iltis was lost in a typhoon on July 23 at a point ten miles north of the southeast promontory, which is a low reef-girted island, lying about 30 miles southeast of the Shang Tun promontory. Only ten of those belonging to the warship were saved. All the others, including the officers, perished.

The Iltis was a single screw iron vessel of 480 tons and was built at Dantzic in 1878. She was 139 feet one inch in length, 25 feet nine inches beam, and her mean draught of water was ten feet eight inches. Her engine was 340 indicated horse power and her speed was 9.5 knots. She mounted only twenty guns.

The officials at the imperial admiralty confirm the report of the loss of the Iltis. Dispatches received at the admiralty show that 75 officers and men lost their lives in the disaster.

NEW YORK, July 30.—The first meeting of the national republican executive committee in the east was held Wednesday afternoon at the Metropolitan life insurance building. Among those who attended the conference were Mark A. Hanna and Garrett A. Hobart.

After a secret conference the executive committee held a session. Several names were suggested but none selected for the ninth place on the committee. Mr. Bliss, the former treasurer of the committee, who has held over pending the election of his successor, was re-elected and consented to serve. Mr. Hanna was authorized to name a man to represent Utah and he chose a Mr Rogers, who was recommended by Senator Brown. Mr. Hanna, Mr. Quay and Mr. Scott were the only members of the executive committee at the meeting.

ADMONISHED.

All Conspirators Are Liable for the Act of One.

The President Issues a Proclamation Warning U. S. Citizens and All Others Within Their Jurisdiction Against Violating the Neutrality Laws.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The following proclamation was issued from the state department Thursday afternoon:

By the President of the United States of America—A proclamation:

Whereas, By a proclamation dated the 12th day of June, A. D., 1895, attention was called to the serious civil disturbances, accompanied by armed resistance to the established government of Spain, then prevailing in the island of Cuba, and citizens of the United States and all other persons were admonished to abstain from taking part in such disturbances in contravention of the neutrality laws of the United States; and

Whereas, Said civil disturbances and armed resistance to the authority of Spain, a power with which the United States are on terms of peace and amity, continue to prevail in said island of Cuba, and

Whereas, Since the date of said proclamation, said neutrality laws of the United States have been the subject of authoritative exposition by the judicial tribunal of last resort, and it has thus been declared that any combination of persons organized in the United States for the purpose of proceeding to and making war upon a foreign country with which the United States are at peace and provided with arms to be used for such purpose, constitute a "military expedition or enterprise" within the meaning of said neutrality laws, and that the providing or preparing of the means for such "military expedition or enterprise," which is expressly prohibited by said laws, includes furnishing or aiding in transportation for such "military expedition or enterprise" and

Whereas, By express enactment, if two or more persons conspire to commit an offense against the United States, any act of one conspirator to effect the object of such conspiracy renders all the conspirators liable to fine and imprisonment; and

Whereas, there is reason to believe that citizens of the United States and others within their jurisdiction fail to apprehend the meaning and operation of the neutrality laws of the United States authoritatively interpreted as aforesaid and may be misled into participation into transactions which are violations of said laws and will render them liable to the severe penalties provided for such violations.

Now, therefore, that the laws above referred to as judicially construed may be duly executed, that the international obligations of the United States may be fully satisfied, and that their citizens and all others within their jurisdiction, being seasonably apprised of their legal duty in the premises, may abstain from disobedience to the laws of the United States and thereby escape the forfeitures and penalties legally consequent thereon:

I, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, do hereby solemnly warn all citizens of the United States and all others within their jurisdiction against violations of the said laws interpreted as hereinbefore explained, and give notice that all such violations will be vigorously prosecuted. And I do hereby invoke the co-operation of all good citizens in the enforcement of said laws and in the detection and apprehension of any offenders against the same, and do hereby enjoin upon all the executive officers of the United States the utmost diligence in preventing, prosecuting and punishing any infractions thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

[SEAL]

Done at the City of Washington, this twenty-seventh day of July, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand, eight hundred ninety-six, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and twenty-first.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President.
RICHARD OLNEY,
Secretary of State.

The president's warning proclamation as to Cuban filibusters is understood to be one of the results of Secretary Olney's recent visits to Gray Gables, and is thought to be, in some measure at least, the answer of the administration to the petitions and complaints against Spain's treatment of Americans in Cuba, which continually pour in upon the state department. Many of these have contained pleas of ignorance of the laws under which the suspects were arrested and imprisoned, and it has apparently been deemed advisable to leave American citizens no longer in doubt as to the protection they may expect if they go so far in their sympathies as to violate the United States statutes.

Senor Dupuy de Lome has persistently tried to secure some such statement of the administration's attitude ever since the belligerency resolutions were adopted by congress.

Satolli's Successor.

LONDON, July 31.—The correspondent in Rome of the United Press telegraphs that, although the report that Monsignor Diomede Falconio would succeed Monsignor Satolli as papal delegate to the United States had been hitherto entirely credited at the vatican, the pope has appointed as Monsignor Satolli's successor Rev. Sebastian Martinelli, prior general of the Augustins Chausses and a brother of the dead Cardinal Martinelli. The fact that the nomination had been made has been kept secret, even from the most intimate associates of his holiness, and upon its becoming known occasioned a general feeling of surprise. The pope's choice is regarded as an excellent one. Rev. Sebastian Martinelli is about 60 years old. He is a learned theologian and is thoroughly versed in the foreign policy of the vatican.

National Republican Executive Committee Meeting.

CHICAGO, July 31.—The national republican executive committee members were all at their desks again Thursday and did a lot of work, much of which was either of no public interest or was not given out. As Mr. Dawes said: "It is getting to be a matter of business now and we can not disclose our plan of campaign to the enemy."

Western Association Reorganized.

BURLINGTON, Ia., July 31.—The Western association clubs reorganized Thursday. Four clubs now constitute the association—Dubuque, Burlington, Cedar Rapids, Des Moines. The season opens at Cedar Rapids and Burlington Friday and closes at Des Moines and Dubuque on September 13.

Iowa Sound Money Democrats.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., July 31.—A conference of sound money democrats has been called to meet at Des Moines on August 4, to select a state committeeman to attend the coming conference at Indianapolis.

CAMPAIGN STARTED.

Thurston and Darrow Hold a Large Audience Spellbound With Their Arguments For and Against Silver.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 1.—Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, for the republican party, and Clarance S. Darrow, a Chicago lawyer for the democrats and populists, contested with oratory and argument for presidential votes Friday afternoon, at Lakeside, the grounds of the Mona Lake association. By a lucky chance only a fatality was avoided on the Madison street side of the lake.

Senator Thurston had been escorted by 100 members of the local Republican marching club from the Park hotel to the place where steam launches are taken to Lakeside. There was a wild scramble of hundreds to get tickets and reach the boats on a frail, rotten landing of single planks.

The senator had embarked when this frail woodwork broke, carrying a dozen persons into four feet of water.

Wm. Larkin, an old retired citizen of Madison, fell flat in the water, his head striking a rock, which inflicted a bad scalp wound. Men rushed into the water to save him from drowning. One woman and her little girl were dragged out, and the others escaped with lost hats and umbrellas and drenched clothing.

Senator Thurston was first presented to the audience, being allowed one hour and five minutes to speak.

He said in part: "This money question is a new one in this campaign. I was brought up to believe that the judgment of the man who had succeeded in life was better to follow than that of the man who had failed; that the word of the man who had never broken his promise was better to believe than that of the man who had broken his word. Therefore, I think it is safer for me to keep away from the leadership of such men as Altgeld, and Tillman, and Llewellyn, and Waite, and follow the lead of Allison and Reed, and that greatest of all Americans, William McKinley, of Ohio.

"I am an American. The American traveling in foreign lands finds that his silver dollar is taken without one cent of discount. You can buy with it twice as much as you can with the silver dollar of any country which opens its mints to the free coinage of silver. I do not want to Mexicanize our American dollar or apologize for its cheapness.

Mr. Darrow was then introduced. Among other things he said he did not think the settlement of the free coinage question would ever give to labor that which labor never had under a democratic or republican administration—a full share of the product of his toil—nor lift from the farmer the great burden of debt and distress under which he lived. But it would do something.

It was the first time that a national party in the United States had asked that silver money should be stricken down and gold alone used by our people. He created a sensational scene when he declared that if a dollar's worth of American wheat continued to be sold for 50 cents the Englishman will collect his interest from America, as he does from the Egyptians, with cannon and with sword.

REVIVED THEIR FEARS,

Did the Threatened Tornado in St. Louis Under Similar Conditions.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 1.—There was no abatement Friday morning of the terrible heat of the past four days. At 8 a. m. the government thermometer registered 88 degrees; at noon it was 91 and at 4 p. m., 96. These are the figures registered at the top of the custom house. Street thermometers ranged about four degrees higher. At 5 p. m. the promised storm cloud appeared, but in such threatening manner as to almost create a panic. With the memory of the recent tornado still fresh, people noted with alarm the approach of a cloud from the southwest, which was a mass of black in the center and shaded off to a dull copper color. High wind came with the cloud and the fear deepened. At the fair grounds race track a panic occurred, and the 3,000 people fled to the open field in the center. A deluge of rain fell for five minutes and the storm was over. At 8 p. m. thermometers registered 78 degrees. The fatal sunstroke cases Friday were: Hon. John Coppedge, member state legislature, St. James, Mo., died at the city hospital; Chester Hoisington, roofer; Henry Welp, machinist; two unknown men, one aged 75 and the other 50, died at the city hospital; Mary Collins, an aged widow.

There were 12 other cases treated at the city dispensary, some of them being serious.

Robert Garrett Buried.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 1.—The remains of Robert Garrett, who died at Deer Park, Md., last Wednesday, were interred in Greenmount cemetery Friday. The funeral services were conducted at Grace Protestant Episcopal church by Rev. Percy Hall at 10 o'clock Friday morning. The special musical service was elaborate and included several of Mr. Garrett's favorite hymns sung by a quartette.

A great crowd filled the church early in the morning, and before the funeral cortege arrived blocked the streets in all directions. Aside from the musical programme the services were simple and quickly over.

Explosion of Gun Cotton.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 1.—An explosion of gun cotton in the chemical works of Maas & Walstein, at Riverside and Verona avenues, city limit line, early Friday morning, destroyed the storage section of the building. Fire followed, doing $5,000 worth of damage. Surrounding factory buildings owned by the firm all had their windows demolished, doing $3,000 damages. The shock was felt two miles distant.

Had the explosion occurred during working hours the loss of life would have been appalling. The buildings were insured.

IS HE INNOCENT?

A Convict Confesses to a Murder for Which Another Man Was Convicted.

The Testimony Was Purely Circumstantial—Two Other Men, Who Are Suspected, Are Still Fugitives From Justice—Great Excitement.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 3.—The convict known as Frederick Whitney, who committed suicide at the Maryland penitentiary Saturday, appears by his own confession to have added murder to his long list of crimes. Friday afternoon Whitney sought out Warden Weiler and intimated that he meant to end his miserable existence. In the course of his conversation with Mr. Weiler the man said his real name was Frederick Hildebrand and that his home was in Detroit, Mich.

The "hold-up" of City Councilman Swindell, for which Whitney was serving an 18 years' sentence, occurred on March 23, 1895. In his confession he said that while fleeing from the Baltimore detectives he killed and robbed a man in Altoona, Pa., in April of last year.

"While we were in Altoona," declared Whitner, or Hildebrand, to the warden Friday, "I assaulted a man on the street, murdered him and robbed him of his money, quite a large sum. For this murder another man was arrested, tried and convicted."

"Was your pal, Williams, implicated in this murder?" asked the warden.

"No, sir, I did it all myself. I am alone guilty and can stand the strain no longer."

The warden tried to gain more information from his prisoner, but failed. He set apart an hour for a further conference with Hildebrand, but the opportunity for which the prisoner had long waited presented itself Saturday, and the unfortunate man threw himself from a window and dashed out his brains on the flagging 30 feet below.

Information from Altoona states that April 5, 1895, Henry Bonneka, a reputed miser, was murdered. A man named Wilson was arrested and convicted of the crime, mainly on circumstantial evidence, and is now awaiting the death sentence.

The suicide was 35 years of age. When incarcerated in the penitentiary he gave his occupation as a ball player.

John B. Williams, who was implicated in the Swindell "hold-up," in this city, and is serving a 18-year's sentence in the penitentiary, confessed to Warden Weiler Sunday that Hildebrand's statement was true.

"Hildebrand killed old man Bonneka," he said, "and secured $11,000. I helped him count the money. We hid it near Altoona."

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 3.—If the confession of the convict known as Frederick Whitney, who committed suicide at the Maryland penitentiary, is true, that he killed Henry Bonneka in this city, an innocent man now lies under sentence of death for the murder. There are some discrepancies in the story of Whitney's confession, as sent from Baltimore, as to the facts of the murder. Bonneka was not killed upon the street, but was found strangled to death in his house here on April 6, 1895. Whitney was in Altoona at the time of the murder, was suspected and was followed to Baltimore by detectives, but not enough evidence was gathered against him to warrant his arrest. Three other men fell under suspicion and finally one of them, Frank Wilson, was arrested.

Wilson at first admitted having been present when Bonneka was killed. He afterward retracted his admission and was recently tried and convicted of murder in the first degree. He is now under sentence of death in the county jail. The other two men who are suspected of having been Wilson's accessories are still fugitives from justice.

District Attorney Hammond talked with the warden of the Baltimore penitentiary Sunday, and learned that Hildebrand was insane when he made the confession. The news created a good deal of excitement in this city, especially among the people who believe Wilson and Farrell are innocent, they having been convicted of the murder of the miser on circumstantial evidence.

WHEN SOVEREIGNS CONFER.

Great Ado Made on the Occasions of Royal Meetings in Europe.

The innumerable banquets which are offered to the royal persons on every occasion are exact emblems of the many valuable and pleasant days which are, at their instigation and by their command, wasted in senseless formula, says Ouida in the Forum. Once, when costume was beautiful, pageantry was so also, and ceremonial was so also; but now both are unsightly and grotesque. Two bearded men in hemlets, or caps, kiss each other on a railway footboard; old ladies in waterproof cloaks toddle through two lines of policemen; a fat gentleman, with a round hat, with a cigar in his mouth, walks over a piece of red carpet, nodding to a bending human hedge of supple spines; faces beam inanely, throngs outside the station door cheer, they know not why, troops are massed in readiness, for nowhere are these personages safe from attempts upon their lives; the whole thing is unlovely, absurd, anomalous, a caricature of what was once both intelligible and respectable, but in which there is no longer either prestige or symbolism. Without dignity in its object loyalty is a mere boneless bundle of wornout robes, and dignity perishes at the scream of the railway whistle.

A New Surgical Instrument.

An instrument which, as the name denotes, is intended for the arrest of bleeding in surgical operations, has been perfected by Lawson Tait, of London. A platinum wire, arranged to carry a current of electricity, is inclosed in the blades of a pair of steel forceps or any other requisite instrument, the wire being insulated by a bed of burnt pipe clay. A current of suitable voltage is turned on, the artery seized and compressed and in a few seconds the tissues and arterial walls are so agglutinated that the passage of blood is rendered impossible. The temperature employed is about 180 degrees Fahrenheit, so that it will be seen that the principle is fundamentally different from that of electrical cauterizing instruments. It is stated that by Mr. Tait's instrument the necessity of a ligature is removed, and a new and completely effective method is placed in the hands of the surgeon for the treatment of surface oozing.

Bird and Balloon.

If by any means a bird attained the lightness of a balloon it could not fly. A balloon drifts with every gust; steering is impossible, the wind chooses its course. The bird-balloon, as light as the wind and as strong as iron, is a figment of the imagination.

AN EXPRESS TRAIN

Crashes into a Special Excursion Train on a New Jersey Railroad.

List of Dead Number Fifty and Injured Fully Sixty—Sickening Scenes at the Morgue and Hospitals—Responsibility Not Yet Fixed.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 31.—A terrible railroad catastrophe took place on the Meadows, about two miles out of this city, shortly after 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening, resulting in the death of 42 people, so far as now can be learned, and the wounding of 80 others. A train left here consisting of seven cars over the West Jersey railroad bearing a special excursion of Red Men and their friends, of Bridgeton, N. J., and Salem, and had reached the crossing of the Reading railroad when it was struck by the 5:40 down express from Philadelphia, demolishing two cars and telescoping the two following. The engine of the Reading train became a total wreck, killing the engineer and fatally injuring the fireman, and the car behind also was thrown from the track and many of its occupants killed or injured.

The responsibility of the collision has not yet been placed, but William Thurlow, the operator at the block tower situated at the crossing, has been placed under arrest by order of the coroner.

Leaving this city the tracks of the West Jersey road run parallel to those of the Camden & Atlantic until after they cross the drawbridge, when they switch off to the south, crossing the Reading road at an obtuse angle.

John Greiner, the engineer of the West Jersey train, saw the Reading train approaching the crossing at a swift speed, but as the signals were open for him to proceed on his way he continued. His engine had barely cleared the track of the Reading when the locomotive of the latter train which left Philadelphia at 6:40 struck the first car full in the center, thowing it far off the track into a nearby ditch, and completely submerging it. The second car of the West Jersey train was also carried into the ditch, the third and fourth cars being telescoped. The engine of the Reading train was thrown to the other side of the track, carrying with it the first coach. A few minutes after the collision, to add to the horror of the situation, the boiler of the Reading locomotive exploded, scalding several to death and casting its boiling spray over many of the injured passengers.

As soon as the news reached this city it spread widecast and thousands of people flocked to the scene. The road leading to the place of the collision was a constant procession of hacks, busses and bicycles and all kinds of vehicles, while thousands of pedestrians hurried along the path to render what assistance they could or to satisfy their curiosity.

Darkness fell quickly and the work of rescuing the injured and the dead bodies was carried out under the lurid glare of huge bonfires. It was a gruesome sight presented to onlookers as the mangled and burnt forms of the dead were carried from the wreckage which bound them and laid side by side on the gravel bank near the track with no other pall than the few odd newspapers gathered from the passengers. The wounded were quickly gathered together and carried by train and wagon to the Atlantic City hospital, where six of them died shortly after their arrival.

The old Excursion house at the foot of Mississippi avenue was converted into a morgue and thither the dead were taken. At a late hour Thursday evening there were 29 bodies laid out there, none of whom are as yet identiged. This city is terribly excited over the accident. The streets in the vicinity of the Excursion house and the city hospital, as well as the road leading to the scene of the accident, being packed with people anxious to learn the latest. The Bridgeton and Salem excursionists who escaped injury were brought back to this city and sent home on a special train several hours later in the evening.

James Hoyt, secretary of the department of public safety, immediately, upon learning the extent of the catastrophe, telegraphed for the Philadelphia emergency corys, 150 of whom responded, and hurried to this city on a special train, which left Philadelphia at 10:45 p. m. These surgeons materially aided the volunteer corps of this city, who embraced almost every physician at present within its confines. Many of the injured were taken to hotels as the city hospital soon became overcrowded. About 30 of the wounded had their injuries dressed and were able to proceed on their way. It is expected that fully a dozen of those now lying in the hospital will not survive their injuries.

Mrs. Edward Farr, the wife of the Reading engineer who met death while performing his duty and was found with one hand on the throttle and the other on the brake, when informed of the accident and her husband's tragic death, was unable to withstand the shock and fell to the floor dead.

PHILADELPHIA, July 31.—Advices from Atlantic City to the offices of the Philadelphia & Reading road in this city Friday morning place the number of killed in Thursday night's railroad accident at 43, including the engineer and fireman of the Reading train. There are no new developments regarding the responsibility for the terrible loss of life, but the accident seems to have resulted from the failure of Engineer Farr, of the Reading train, to obey the signals at the block station which, it is generally agreed, were set against his train and required a full stop. Engineer Farr and his fireman were both killed. Engineer Kriner, of the West Jersey, says that as he neared the crossing he saw the Reading train approaching from the opposite direction. A Camden and Atlantic train was also coming toward this city and it seemed to him that both trains were racing.

The signals at the block house were open for him to go on, and, knowing that if such be the case, that the block must be against the Reading train, he expected the latter to stop. Before he realized it he saw a collision was inevitable, and he was about to jump at the point where the Reading engine now lies, but he took a desperate chance and stuck to his post.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 1.—As a result of the terrible collision on the Meadows Thursday evening between the Reading railroad express from Philadelphia and the Bridgeton excursion train out of here, 47 people are dead and 44 are lying in the hospital here more or less seriously hurt. Of the injured in the hospital several are expected to die.

Besides those seriously enough hurt to be in the hospital, a score or more of people were bruised and shaken up and went to cottages. The fearful shock of the collision is illustrated in the fact that of the 47 dead 42 were killed outright. Of the dead, 42 have been identified and the bodies of three women, one man and a boy are lying at the undertaking shops awaiting claimants.

The responsibility for the accident is hard to place at this time, but the burden of it seems to rest upon the dead engineer of the Reading train, Edward Farr, though an official investigation may clear his name.

The list of dead, almost all of whom are from Bridgeton, follows:

Mrs. J. D. Bateman, Chas. Seibert, Joseph Peters and son, Reba M. Loper, Miss Tillie Leeds, Hattie Loper, Mannie Chinney, Wm. Spaulding, Henry Hughes, Wm. P. Rickett, Jos. Cheney, Charles May, Mrs. Sallie Frees, three unknown women, one unknown man, one unknown boy. S. P. Muprhy, Millville, N. J.; J. D. Johnston, Bridgeton; Charles D. Bourroughs, Bridgeton; G. B. Taylor, no address; Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Goldsmith, no address; Samuel Thorne, baggagemaster, Atlantic City; D. E. Wood, Philadelphia; John Grever, Bridgeton; Chas. Eackler, Salem, N. J.; Charles McGear, Bridgeton, F. D. Dubois, Woodruff, N. J.; Mrs. Joshua Earnest, Bridgeton; Mr. and Mrs. Treachard, Bridgeton; Edward Farr, engineer; Samuel Thorm, baggagemaster.; Charles Muta, Bridgeton; H. F. Bell, Bridgeton; W. C. Looper, Bridgeton; Mary Wentzell, Alloway, N. J.; Lidle Carr, Bridgeton; Pearl Muta, Bridgeton; Mrs. Elmer May, Palatine, N. J.; Mrs. H. F. Bell, Bridgeton; Anna Frees, Bridgeton; Charles May, Palatine, N. J.; James M. Bateman, Bridgeton.

The known injured are:

Howard Woodland, Bridgeton; Samuel Mulz, Bridgeton; W. H. Spaulding, Philadelphia; Howard Smalley, Bridgeton; W. C. Hensley, Philadelphia; Lizzie C. Hensley; Mrs. A. E. Abbott, Rhoadestown, N. J.; Lizzie Smalley, Bridgeton; Caroline Smalley, Bridgeton; C. D. Frazier and wife, Bridgeton; Irwin Dubose, Bridgeton; Mrs. M. Keiger, Elmer, N. J.; Jacob Johnson, Shirley, N. J.; Stanley Wenzel, Alloway, N. J.; Fred Sheeney, Bridgeton; Mrs. Susan Johnson, Shirley, N. J.; Mary Shimes, Freesborough, N. J.; Wm. Baughne, Bridgeton; Charles Cryinick, Bridgeton; Violet Alfred, Bridgeton; Wm. Simpkins, Salem, N. J.; Mason Worth, Philadelphia; Albert Taylor, Bridgeton; William Boughton, Bridgeton; Edward Seely, Bridgeton; Chester Burgiss, Bridgeton; Howard Woodlaw, Bridgeton; ex-Judge Jacob Hitchner, Bridgeton; Mrs. Hitchman; Mrs. E. A. Abbott, David Frieze, Bridgeton; Mrs. Job Kegeir, Elmer, N. J.; Thomas F. Morrell, Bridgeton; Charles Horuer, Bridgeton; H. Watson, Yorktown, N. J.; Fred Chenwny, Bridgeton; Mary Pilney, aged 11, Yorktown; Mrs. F. F. Fralinger, Philadelphia; John S. Kelley, Camden, N. J.; Rachel Abbott, Rhoadestown, N. J.

The uninjured and those only slightly hurt among the Bridgeton excursion party were in a frenzy of agony. The train struck was the first section of the excursion train, and those on the second section flocked to the hospital and morgue as the victims were brought in. Two miles out on the Meadows the wrecking crews of the Reading and West Jersey railroads were toiling by the light of huge bonfires to clear away the wreck and splinters of broken cars. By dawn they had practically cleared up the tracks. Broken and battered out of shape, the huge engine of the express lay on its side by the track. Pinned beneath, with his pale, bloodstained face staring into those of the men working was Farr, the engineer.

The scenes as the bodies were identified were sad and pathetic beyond words.

Houser, the operator in the signal tower, certainly set danger signals for the Reading train when he gave the excursion the right of way. The question is, did he set the signal in time for Engineer Farr to see it? Or did he become excited when he saw a collision imminent and set it too late for Farr to stop his train? Farr was an experienced engineer and it seems incredible that he would rush past a danger signal down to a crossing that was being approached by a train he could clearly see.

Further, the Reading has the right of way at the crossing over Pennsylvania trains, and still further, an express has the right of way before an excursion special. Still, in view of the statement of Engineer Greiner, of the excursion train, who was interviewed in Camden Friday, and the position of the signal arms, the burden of the responsibility at present rests with the dead engineer.

Hot in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 1.—Six persons have succumbed to the terrific heat in this city since Thursday evening. The death ratio is increasing at an alarming extent and only cool weather will bring relief. Since six days ago the maximum temperature has registered 99 degrees and the minimum has been 86 degrees at the government office.

Mr. Hanna made his first assignment of republican campaign speakers Wednesday, giving Senator Thurston the opportunity of opening six state campaigns.

LAID TO REST.

Eleven Victims of the Railway Collision Buried.

Day of Mourning and Sorrow in Bridgeton—Hearses Did Treble Duty and Carriages Carried as Many as Four Separate Groups of Mourners.

BRIDGETON, N. J., Aug. 3.—The bodies of 11 victims of the railroad collision at Atlantic City were buried from this city Sunday. One was buried Saturday; Monday there will be four more burials and Tuesday nine. Thus, if no more succumb to their injuries, there will have been 28 deaths from among this city's population.

Those buried Sunday were H. Frazier Bell and his wife; Charles Sooy, sr., and son, Charles; Joshua Ernst, deputy county clerk, Richard W. Trenchard and his wife; Joseph Peters and his son, Morris, and James Bateman and his wife.

There were so many funerals that the facilities for burial were overtaxed. Hearses did treble duty and carriage drivers carried as many as four separate groups of mourners to the cemeteries. Great crowds, largely made up of tearful women, gathered in the streets outside the funeral houses and flocked in groups about the old stone church, Broad street and Overbrook cemeteries, where the internments took place.

There expressions of sorrow for the dead, words of sympathy for the suffering, and ready offers of succor to the bereaved. Fortunately, though, there are very few, if any, cases of real need, so far as known. The victims of the hapless disaster were in almost all cases so situated as to leave no destitution behind, although there may be one or two cases calling for assistance.

In the churches the deepest sorrow, for in almost every case the dead was a member of some one of the churches of the city. The preachers, with choked voices, drew lessons from the fearful wreck, but while one looked upon it as a visitation of Providence, called forth by the wickedness of thousands who were drifting rapidly to perdition, another said nothing more or less than a calamity due to gross carelessness on somebody's part. Another took the middle ground and spoke of the crash as an appalling disaster which carries its own lessons of fortitude and Christian forbearance, and developed the love and sympathy for this community from the wide world.

One of the saddest cases was that of Sooy. The mangled body of the father was left in the hearse, while that of the son was carried into the house while the services were being held. Within the dwelling there were moans and laments from the stricken widow and mother and deep wailings from her seven fatherless children. People wept for sympathy for this sorely afflicted woman, whose deep distress carried sorrow to every heart. Amid it all there arose the soft cooing of an infant, a three-weeks' old child, the youngest of the father's flock. As the white casket containing her boy's remains was carried out to the second hearse, the poor woman, leaning on an elder son, moaned: "Oh, why should it have happened! Oh, can I give them up?"

For many a year Sunday, August 2, 1896, will be rembered in Bridgeton as a day of mourning and sorrow.

A SYMPATHETIC STRIKE

On Account of the Brown Hoisting Company Trouble Urged.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 3.—At a meeting of the representatives of the labor unions of this city Sunday night it was determined to urge upon the Central Labor union, at its meeting Wednesday, the calling of a sympathetic strike on account of the Brown Hoisting company trouble. As the unions reported and those which have already expressed opinion in favor of such a course contribute a large majority of the members of the Central Labor union, a general sympathetic strike is a certainty. The plan is first to call out all iron workers, who number about 20,000, and, if necessary, every union man in the city will be called out later. Four companies of troops are now camped at the Brown works and more will likely be ordered Monday. The situation is the gravest which Cleveland has ever faced. John Prince, the man shot by the "scabs" Saturday, still lies in a critical condition. The union men are now arming, claiming they have the same right to carry pistols as the "scabs."

United States Consul Sparks Dead.

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Aug. 3.—Maj. Jesse W. Sparks, United States consul at Piedras Oogras, Mexico, died suddenly at his room in the International hotel of heart failure. Maj. Sparks was a prominent candidate for governor of Tennessee when appointed consul by President Cleveland. He was vice president of the United American Veterans, an association of united confederate soldiers.

Boy Burned to Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—The plant of the Philadelphia Paving and Construction Co., manufacturers of asphaltum, at Fifty-eighth street and Gibson Point, was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. The loss is $12,000, partially insured. Parnell Dougherty, aged 14, who was sleeping in the boiler house, was burned to death.

Will Prosecute Druggists.

WINCHESTER, O., Aug. 3.—The Anti-Saloon league, recently organized here by Field Secretary S. H. Bartlett, of Cincinnati, and which gained a victory by having council close the saloons at 7 o'clock p. m., and later passing the prohibitory ordinance, is now giving its attention to the druggists. Rev. N. G. Humphreys, a representative of the league, and pastor of the M. E. church, served written notices on the druggists that the league will prosecute them for selling liquor. The druggists will fight the league and their attorney says they can recover damages where their business is injured.

PASSES AWAY.

Ex-President Robert Garrett, of the Old B. & O., Died at Deer Park, Md.

BALTIMORE, July 30.—Robert Garrett, ex-president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., and head of the widely known banking house of Robert Garrett & Sons, died Wednesday morning at Deer Park, Md.

Mr. Garrett went to Deer Park about six months ago and occupied the cottage formerly owened by T. Harrison Garrett. Mrs. Garrett and other relatives were at the bedside when dissolution came at 3 o'clock. The remains will probably be brought to Baltimore and interred in the Garrett plot in Green Mount cemetery.

Robert Garrett was born in this city April 29, 1847, the eldest son of John W. Garrett and grandson of Robert Garrett, the founder of the banking house of Robert Garrett & Sons. He graduated from Princeton college in 1867 and soon entered the banking house of which he was in recent years the sole surviving partner. In 1871 Mr. Garrett was elected president of the Valley railway, a Virginia branch of the B. & O., succeeding Gen. Robt. E. Lee. He became third vice president of the B. & O. Co. in 1879.

Mr. Garrett became identified with many local and outside enterprises. He was an incorporator of the American Union Telegraph Co.; which was eventually sold to the Western Union when the Vanderbilts retired and Jay Gould became the controlling power in the telegraph business of the country. On July 13, 1881, Mr. Garrett was elected first vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio and Samuel Spencer, now president of the Southern railway was at the same time chosen third vice president. Soon after, John W. Garrett died in 1884, and Robert became president.

In directing the affairs of the railroad, Robert Garrett enlarged upon the policy outlined by his father by endeavoring to combine under his management a telegraph system, an express and parlor and sleeping car service. These proved to be expensive adjuncts and, along with other experiments, cost the B. & O. treasury millions of dollars. Under Mr. Garrett's direction the B. & O. secured an entrance into New York and acquired the Staten Island rapid transit system. It was about this time that the financial world was startled by the statement that the meteoric Henry S. Ives had secured an option on certain of the Baltimore and Ohio properties. It became apparent early in 1887 that Mr. Garrett's expensive policy of conducting things would have to be changed by lopping off the collateral undertakings to increase the strength of the railroad proper. Mr. Garrett went to Europe and sold $10,000,000 of B. & O. securities wherewith to pay off the floating debt of the company. The B. & O. telegraph system was sold to the Western Union Telegraph Co during his absence. Mr. Garrett at once resigned the presidency of the B. & O., and, acting under the advice of his physicians, started on a tour round the world, accompanied by a number of relatives and friends. The death by drowning of his brother, T. Harrison Garrett, whose yacht was sunk in the Patapsico river, brought Mr. Garrett home July 15, 1888. Since then Mr. Garrett has spent most of his time in retirement at "Uplands," his country seat, or at his residence in Mount Vernon Place, Baltimore.

WM. G. MORELAND,

Ex-City Attorney of Pittsburgh, Convicted of Embezzlement, Receives His Sentence.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 30.—The criminal court-room was thronged Wednesday morning with spectators, composed principally of members of the Allegheny county bar, who had assembled in anticipation of the passing of sentence upon ex-City Attorney Wm. C. Moreland and his assistant, Wm. P. House.

After a tedious delay of an hour, all other business having been disposed of, the well known defendants were summoned before the bar for sentence. Judges Porter and Kennedy were on the bench. Maj. Moreland was first addressed and sentence was passed by Judge Kennedy, that he should undergo imprisonment in the Western penitentiary for a term of three years, pay a fine of $26,652.74 (the amount of his confessed embezzlement), and costs of the prosecution.

Wm. H. House, Maj. Moreland's assistant during his 14 year terms as legal adviser for the city, was then sentenced to pay $1,000 fine, costs of prosecution and to serve a term of two years and three months' imprisonment in the penitentiary. Maj. Moreland was at once removed to the county jail and preparations begun for his removal to the penitentiary. Mr. House was taken in charge by Sheriff Richards. Strenuous efforts are being made for a stay in his case, pending action of the superior court on an appeal.

Silver Committee Completed.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Charles D. Lane, of California, chairman of the national committee of the national silver party, Wednesday designated Messrs. G. P. Keeney, of New York city; G. S. Nixon, of Nevada; B. O. Flower, of Boston; W. H. (Coin) Harvey, of Chicago, and C. J. Hillyer, of Washington, members of the executive committee. These appointments complete the membership of the committee.

Stage Robber Caught.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., July 30.—One of the three men who participated in the Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek stage robbery last Thursday was captured by a deputy sheriff while leaving a Denver train at this point Monday morning, but for reasons unknown the arrest has been kept a profound secret. Immediately after the hold-up the robbers threw away an old coat which contained the initials of Vic Verbrick, one of the highwaymen and the son of a former Cripple Creek druggist. The police are now searching for the other two robbers, whose identity has been established.

DEMOCRACY'S CHOICE.

Truth and Sterling Worth of William J. Bryan.

"You come to us and tell us that the great cities are in favor of the gold standard. I tell you that the great cities rest upon these broad and fertile prairies. Burn down your cities and leave our farms, and your cities will spring up again as if by magic. But destroy our farms and the grass will grow in the streets of every city in this country. My friends, we shall declare that this nation is able to legislate for its own people on every question without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation on earth."

This is strong, true democratic doctrine. When the democratic nominee for the presidency, William Jennings Bryan, uttered these words on the floor of the convention hall in Chicago he spoke not only for the great majority of the democratic party, but also for the great majority of the plain people of this country. It is true that some years ago these utterances would have been distasteful to the people who now advocate them, but this is essentially a country of progress. With the growth of our great communities in the north, east, south and west have arisen new conditions, and these conditions make new issues; problems of which our forefathers knew nothing rise to demand our solution to-day.

In the van-guard of the leaders of the progress of this great republic are the young men of the west. And in all that broad and fertile section no better democrat may be found than our candidate for the highest office within the gift of any people. The greatness of our republic has made that office the greatest in the world. The greatness of our republic has been made by such men as William Jennings Bryan.

He is the youngest man ever nominated for the office. He is a typical American citizen. He represents the new era in the political history of this country.

His personal character is high above the reach of slander or reproach. In his own state of Nebraska he is admired and respected by men of all shades of political opinion. He is a man of liberal education, broad sympathies and intelligence, and has a will of iron. Once convinced of the righteousness of his cause, nothing can stop or stay him in his fearless fight to the desired end.

Democracy has ever stood for the expression of the will of the majority. The choice of the Chicago convention is the choice of the majority, and should, therefore, receive the hearty support of every true democrat, regardless of petty conditions, without consideration of any sectional issue.

Whatever differences may have divided the democratic party before the public expression of its will in open convention should be forgotten now. The old order changes, giving way to the new. It is fitting it should be represented by young blood, rich in enthusiasm, strong in faith. In response to its bugle call, our candidate should receive the vote of every young man in the country.—Tammany Times.

Republican Rot.

New York papers reproduce such trash as this from the Montgomery Advertiser: "The platform is not only populistic; it is full of socialism. It is designed to arraign the farming classes against the well-to-do and the rich." This is the same old lie. The men who framed the Chicago platform and those who ratified it in convention assembled were farmers, merchants, workmen. They were for the most part men who have earned by honest labor every dollar they own. They do not covet any man's wealth. But they are determined that trusts and syndicates shall no longer swindle the people of their just earnings. They will begin by putting the currency on a broad, liberal, equitable basis. This will take one prop away from the plutocrats and oligarchs. The democracy will put in the white house a president who will see that the laws are faithfully executed. They will put only honest men on guard in congress. They will make war on corruption in legislatures. They will denounce bribery on the bench as well as in the legislature. If this be "socialism," the more we have of it the betetr. The democrats desire union, not strife. They are opposed to that odious traffic between opposing parties by which the people are cheated by men who profess to be devoted to their interests.—N. Y. Mercury.

——If every man votes for McKinley whose wages were raised during the existence of the McKinley act, and everyone votes against him whose wages were lowered, he will not carry a single one of the manufacturing states.—Kansas City Times.

RETRIBUTION IN STORE.

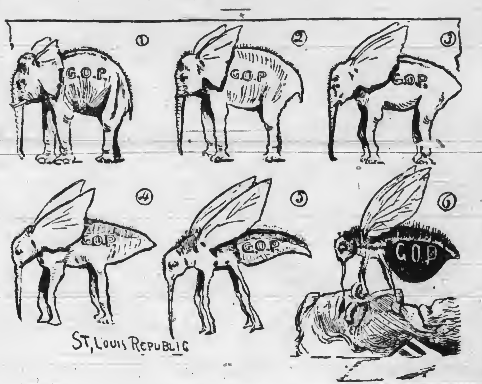
The Mining State Revolt May Be the Means of Defeating McKinley.

It would be a singular, and yet in some sense, a retributive outcome of the present contest should the revolt of the western mining states from the standard of McKinleyism decide the election adversely to Mr. McKinley. Considerations of republican party expediency, for the most part having to do with the maintenance of the system of high protectionism, has more weight than any consideration of fitness for statehood in the admission to the union of Nevada, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Washington and the two Dakotas. Some of them have since grown to proportions such as to make them credible accessions to the roll of states; some are growing, and will in time deserve statehood on their actual merits; one, Nevada, is decreasing in population, and is less entitled to statehood to-day than ever; but not one of the lot was admitted originally without a cold calculation of the votes it would contribute to the republicans in the electoral college and in the senate.

Of these nine states admitted to bolster the waning popular strength of the republicans, through the operations of the electoral college and the constitutional system of representation obtaining in the United States senate, Nevada, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah and North Dakota may as well be conceded to Mr. Bryan to start with. In the other two, Washington and South Dakota, the contest is more doubtful, but with the chances far better of his carrying all the nine states than of McKinley's carrying a third of them.

In the aggregate these nine states control 28 electoral votes, a number sufficient, if unitedly transferred to the defeated candidate, to have changed the result of any recent presidential contest except that of 1892.—Albany Argus.

EVOLUTION OF THE G. O. P.



From Elephant to Blood Sucker.

HOBART AND HIS TRUSTS.

The Republican Candidate for Vice President Is a Monopolist.

According to the news columns of Mr. Hobart's leading local organ, the "coal syndicate has started out on a regular system of advances and we are to have another 25-cent increase in September, with another of the same amount by January, making an advance of $1 a ton within six months."

As pool arbitrator for roads engaged in the coal syndicate Mr. Hobart has had full opportunities to inform himself intimately concerning the operation of the "regular system" through which these unnatural profits are extorted. When he takes the field he will not be able to find a topic in which the public is more interested, nor will he find any other way in which he can do his party greater service than by convincing the public that his own connection with trusts, pools and monopolies has not rendered him unfit for the vice presidency.

And when he does take the stump Mr. Hobart ought to tell as soon as possible to what extent he thinks the anti-trust law should be enforced against all who violate it, more especially against those who out of the proceeds of the violation contribute to his campaign fund.—N. Y. World.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——Thomas Brackett Reed is apparently enjoying another period of study and introspection in the woods.—Chicago Chronicle.

——It is clear from every speech which McKinley makes that the mortgage manacles extend even to his tongue.—St. Louis Republic.

——The very latest utterances of McKinley furnish excellent reasons why he should not receive the votes of democrats. He clings to McKinleyism, notwithstanding the platform adopted at St. Louis.—N. Y. Journal.

——Populists who say they think Bryan all right, but fear the democratic party, talk nonsense. With Bryan in the presidency the only thing necessary to carry out the democratic platform is a favorable congress. The senate is now favorable to silver, and the house will be elected by the people. The next administration will be exactly what the people make it.—St. Louis Republic.

——Mr. Bryan is a man of the people—of the plain common people of the country—and his nomination is the direct result of the spontaneous uprising of the American people in protest against the rapidly increasing influence of the money power. His candidacy will receive the hearty support of all the reform forces of the country, and it will be impossible for the gold power to prevent his election.—Albuquerque (N. M.) Democrat.

EVENING SHADES.

When the Life Rays of Sunshine Fall Aslant

And Deepen to the Twilight of Death's Night Repentance to the Heart Comes —Talmage's Sermon the Shadows That Close Round at the End.

Dr. Talmage's subject Sunday lights up the sorrows of this life and sounds the Gospel of good cheer for all who will receive it. His text was Luke xxiv. 29: "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

Two villagers, having concluded their errand in Jerusalem, have started out at the city gate and are on their way to Emmaus, the place of their residence. They go with a sad heart. Jesus, who had been their admiration and their joy, had been basely massacred and entombed. As with sad face and broken heart they pass on their way, a stranger accosts them. They tell him their anxieties and bitterness of soul. He in turn talks to them, mightily expounding the Scriptures. He throws over them the fascination of intelligent conversation. They forget the time, and notice not the objects they pass, and before they are aware, have come up in front of their house. They pause before the entrance and attempted to persuade the stranger to tarry with them. They press upon him their hospitalities. Night is coming on, and he may meet a prowling wild beast, or be obliged to lie unsheltered from the dew. He can not go much further now. Why not stop there, and continue their pleasant conversation? They take him by the arm and insist upon his coming in, addressing him in the words: "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The candles are lighted, the table is spread, pleasant socialities are enkindled. They rejoice in the presence of the stranger guest. He asks a blessing upon the bread they eat, and he hands a piece of it to each. Suddenly and with overwhelming power the thought flashes upon the astonished people—it is the Lord! And as they sit in breathless wonder, looking upon the resurrected body of Jesus, He vanished. The interview was ended. He was gone.

With many of us it is a bright, sunshiny day of prosperity. There is not a cloud in the sky, not a leaf rustling in the forest. No chill in the air. But we can not expect all this to last. He is not an intelligent man who expects perpetual daylight of joy. The sun will after a while near the horizon. The shadows will lengthen. While I speak many of us stand in the very hour described in the text, "for it is toward evening." The request of the text is appropriate for some before me, for with them it is toward the evening of old age. They have passed the meridian of life. They are sometimes startled to think how old they are. They do not, however, like to have others to remark upon it. If others suggest their approximation toward venerable appearance, they say, "Why, I'm not so old, after all." They do, indeed, notice that they can not lift quite so much as once. They can not walk quite so fast. They can not read quite so well without spectacles. They can not so easily recover from a cough or an occasional ailment. They have lost their taste for merriment. They are surprised at the quick passage of the year. They say that it seems only a little while ago that they were boys. They are going a little down hill. There is something in their health, something in their vision, something in their walk, something in their changing associations, something above, something beneath, something within, to remind them that it is toward evening.

The great want of all such is to have Jesus abide with them. It is a dismal thing to be getting old without the rejuvenating influence of religion. When we step on the down grade of life and see that it dips to the verge of the cold river, we want to behold some one near who will help us across it. When the sight loses its power to glance and gather up, we need the faith that can illumine. When we feel the failure of the ear, we need the clear tones of that voice which in olden times broke up the silence of the deaf with cadences of mercy. When the ax men of death hew down whole forests of strength and beauty around us and we are left in solitude, we need the dove of divine mercy to sing in our branches. When the shadows begin to fall and we feel that the day is far spent, we need most of all to supplicate the strong, beneficent Jesus in the prayer of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The request of the text is an appropriate exclamation for all those who are approached in the gloomy hour of temptation. There is nothing easier than to be good-natured when everything pleases, or to be humble when there is nothing to oppose us, or forgiving when we have no inducement to fraud. But you have felt the grapple of some temptation. Your nature at some time quaked and groaned under the infernal force. You felt that the devil was after you. You saw your Christian graces retreating. You feared that you would fall in the awful wrestle with sin and be thrown into the dust. The gloom thickened. The first indications of the night were seen in all the trembling of your soul; in all the infernal suggestions of Satan, in all the surging up of tumultuous passions and excitements you felt with awful emphasis that it was toward evening. In the tempted hour you need to ask Jesus to abide with you. You can beat back the monster that would devour you. You can unhorse the sin that would ride you down. You can sharpen the battle-ax with which you split the head of helmeted abomination! Who helped Paul shake the brazen-gated heart of Felix? Who acted like a good sailor when all the crew howled in the Mediterranean shipwreck? Who helped the martyrs to be firm when one word of recantation would have unfastened the withes of the stakes, and put out the kindling fires. When the night of the soul came on and all the denizens of darkness came riding upon the winds of perdition—who gave strength to the soul? Who gave calmness to the heart? Who broke the spell of infernal enchantment? He who heard the request of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

One of the forts of France was attacked and the outworks were taken before night. The besieging army lay down thinking there was but little to do in the morning, and that the soldiery in the fort could be easily made to surrender. But during the night, through a back stairs, they escaped into the country. In the morning the besieged army sprang upon the battlements, but found that their prey was gone. So, when we are assaulted in temptation, there is always some secret stair by which we might get off. God will not allow us to be tempted above what we are able, but with every temptation will bring a way of escape that we may be able to bear it.

The prayer of the text is appropriate for all who are anticipating sorrow. The greatest folly that ever grew on this planet is the tendency to borrow trouble; but there are times when approaching sorrow is so evident that we need to be making special preparation for its coming.

One of your children has recently become a favorite. The cry of that child strikes deeper into the heart than the cry of all the others. You think more about it. You give it more attention, not because it is any more of a treasure than the others, but because it is becoming frail. There is something in the cheek, in the eye and in the walk that makes you quite sure that the leaves of the flower are going to be scattered. The utmost nursing and medical attendance are ineffectual. The pulse becomes feeble, the complexion lighter, the step weaker, the laugh fainter. No more romping for that one through hall and parlor. The nursery is darkened by an approaching calamity. The heart feels with mournful anticipation that the sun is going down. Night speeds on. It is toward evening.

You have long rejoiced in the care of a mother. You have done everything to make her last days happy. You have run with quick feet to wait upon her every want. Her presence has been a perpetual blessing in the household. But the fruit gatherers are looking wistfully at that tree. Her soul is ripe for Heaven. The gates are ready to flash open for her entrance. But your soul sinks at the thought of a separation. You can not bear to think that soon you will be called to take the last look at that face which from the first hour has looked upon you with affection unchangeable. But you see that life is ebbing and the grave will soon hide her from your sight. You sit quiet. You feel heavy hearted. The light is fading from the sky. The air is chilly. It is toward evening.

You had a considerable estate, and felt independent. In five minutes on one fair balance sheet you could see just how you stood in the world. But there came complications. Something that you imagined impossible happened. The best friend you had proved traitor to your interests. A sudden crash of national misfortunes prostrated your credit. You may to-day be on in business, but you feel anxious about where you are standing, and fear that the next turning of the wheel will bring you prostrate. You foresee what you consider certain defalcation. You think of the anguish of telling your friends you are not worth a dollar. You know not how you will ever bring your children home from school. You wonder how you will stand the selling of your library or the moving into a plainer house. The misfortunes of life have accumulated. You wonder what makes the sky so dark. It is toward evening.

Trouble is an apothecary that mixes a great many draughts, bitter and sour and nauseous, and you must drink some one of them. There is no scandal so thick and well-adjusted but some thorn will strike through it. In this swift shuttle of the human heart some of the threads must break. The journey from Jerusalem to Emmaus will soon be ended. Our Bible, our common sense, our observation reiterate in tones that we can not mistake, and ought not to disregard. It is toward evening.

Oh, then, for Jesus to abide with us. He sweetens the cup. He extracts the thorn. He wipes the tear. He hushes the tempest. He soothes the soul that flies to him for shelter. Let the night swoop and the euroclydon cross the sea. Let the thunders roar—soon all will be well. Christ in the ship to soothe his friends. Christ on the sea to stop its tumult. Christ the grave to scatter the darkness. Christ in the Heavens to lead the way. Blessed all such. His arms will enclose them, His grace comfort them, His light cheer them, His sacrifice free them, His glory enchant them. If earthly estate takes wings, He will be an incorruptible treasure. If friends die, He will be their resurrection. Standing with us in the morning of our joy and in the noonday of our prosperity He will not forsake us when the luster has faded and it is toward evening.

Listen to Paul's battle shout with misfortune. Hark to mounting Latimer's fire song. Look at the glory that has left the dungeon and filled the earth and heavens with the crash of the falling manacles of despotism. And then look at those who have tried to cure themselves by human prescriptions, attempting to heal gangrene with a patch of court plaster and to stop the plague of dying empires with the quackery of earthly wisdom. Nothing can speak peace to the soul. Nothing can unstrap our crushing burdens, nothing can overcome our spiritual foes, nothing can open our eyes to see the surrounding horses and chariots of salvation that fill all the mountains, but the voice and command of Him who stopped one night at Emmaus

The words of the text are pertinent to us all, from the fact that we are nearing the evening of death. I have heard it said that we ought to live as though each moment was to be our last. I do not believe that theory. As far as preparation is concerned, we ought always be ready; but we can not always be thinking of death, for we have duties in life that demand our attention. When a man is selling goods it is his business to think of the bargain he is making. When a man is pleading in the courts it is his duty to think of the interests of his clients. When a clerk is adding up his accounts it is his duty to keep his mind upon the column of figures. He who fills up his life with thoughts of death is far from being the highest style of Christian. I knew a man who used often to say at night: "I wish I might die before morning!" He became an infidel.

But there are times when we can and ought to give ourselves to the contemplation of that solemn moment when to the soul time ends and eternity begins. We must go through that one pass. There is no roundabout way, no by path, no circuitous route. Die we must, and it will be to us a shameful occurrence or a time of admirable behavior. Our friends may stretch out their hands to keep us back, but no imploration on their part can hinder us. They might offer large retainers but death would not take the fee. The breath will fail, and the eyes will close, and the heart will stop. You may hang the couch with gorgeous tapestry, but what does death care for beautiful curtains? You may hang the room with finest works of art, but what does death care for pictures? You may fill the house with the wailings of widowhood and orphanage, does death mind weeping?

This ought not to be a depressing theme. Who wants to live here forever? The world has always treated me well, and every day I feel less and less like scolding and complaining. But yet I would not want to make this my eternal residence. I love to watch the clouds and bathe my soul in the blue sea of Heaven, but I expect, when the firmament is rolled away as a scroll, to see a new Heaven, grander, higher and more glorious. You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable; that limps with the stonebruises or festers with the thorn or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an incorruptible body and an eye that blinks not before the jasper gates and the great white throne. But between that and this there is an hour about which no man should be reckless or foolhardy. I doubt not your courage, but I tell you that you will want something better than a strong arm, a good aim and a trusty sword when you come to your last battle. You will need a better robe than any you have in your wardrobe to keep you warm in that place.

Circumstances do not make so much difference. It may be a bright day when you push off from the planet or it may be a dark night, and while the owl is hooting from the forest. It may be spring, and your soul may go out among the blossoms, apple orchards swinging their censers in the way. It may be winter and the earth in a snow shroud. It may be autumn, and the forests set on fire by the retreating year—dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your wife's hand in your hand, or you may be in a strange hotel with a servant faithful to the last. It may be in a railroad train shot off the switch and tumbling in long reverberation down the embankment—crash! crash! I know not the time. I know not the mode, but the days of our life are being subtracted away, and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours—three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left—five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute. Then only seconds left—four seconds, three seconds, one second. Gone! The chapter of life ended! The book closed! The pulses at rest! The feet through with the journey! The hands closed from all work. No word on the lips. No breath in the nostrils. Hair combed back to lie undisheveled by any human hands. The muscles still. The nerves still. The lungs still. The tongue still. All still. You might put the stethoscope to the breast and hear no sound. You might put a speaking trumpet to the ear, but you could not wake the deafness. No motion, no throb, no life. Still! Still!

So death comes to the disciple! What if the sun of life is about to set? Jesus is the day-spring from on high, the perpetual morning of every ransomed spirit. What if the darkness comes? Jesus is the light of the world and of Heaven. What though this earthly house does crumble? Jesus has prepared a house of many mansions. Jesus is the anchor that always holds. Jesus is the light that is never eclipsed.

You are almost through with the abuse and backbiting of enemies. They will call you no more by evil names. Your good deeds will no longer be misinterpreted nor your honor filched. The troubles of earth will end in the felicities! Toward evening! The bereavements of earth will soon be lifted. You will not much longer stand pouring your grief in the tomb, like Rachel weeping for her children or David mourning for Absalom. Broken hearts bound up. Wounds healed. Tears wiped away. Sorrows terminated. No more sounding of the death march. Toward evening. Death will come, sweet as slumber to the eyelids of the babe, as full rations to a starving soldier, as evening hour to the exhausted workman. The sky will take on its sunset glow, every cloud a fire-psalm, every lake a glassy mirror; the forests transfigured; delicate mists climbing the air. Your friends will announce it; your pulses will beat it; your joys will ring it; your lips will whisper it: "Toward evening!"

ST. PETER'S EVE.

Pope Leo Goes to Pray at the Tomb of the Chief Apostle.

From time immemorial the well containing the marble staircase which leads down to the tomb of St. Peter has been called the "Confession." The word, I believe, is properly applied to the altar-rail, from the ancient practice of repeating there the General Confession immediately after receiving the communion, a custom now somewhat modified. But I may be wrong in giving this derivation. Indeed, a marble balustrade follows the horseshoe shape of the well, and upon it are placed 95 gilded lamps, which burn perpetually. There is said to be no special significance in the number, and they produce very little effect by daylight.

But on the eve of St. Peter's day, and perhaps at some other seasons, the pope has been known to come down to the church by the secret staircase leading into the Chapel of the Sacrament, to pray at the apostle's tomb. On such occasions a few great candlesticks with wax torches are placed on the floor of the church, two and two, between the chapel and the confession. The pope attended only by a few chamberlains and noble guards, and dressed in the customary white cassock, passes swiftly along in the dim light and descends the steps of the gilded gate beneath the high altar. A marble pope kneels there too, Pius VI., of the Braschi family, his stone draperies less white than Pope Leo's cassock, his marble face scarcely whiter than the living pontiff's alabaster features.

Those are sights which few are privileged to see. There is a sort of centralization of mystery, if one may couple such words, in the private pilgrimage of the head of the church to the tomb of the chief apostle, by night, on the eve of the day which tradition has kept as the anniversary of St. Peter's martyrdom from the earliest times. The whole Catholic world, if it might, would follow Leo XIII. down those marble steps, and 200,000,000 voices would repeat the prayer he says alone.

Many and solemn scenes have been acted out by night in the vast gloom of the enormous church, and if events do not actually leave an essence of themselves in places, as some have believed, yet the knowledge that they have happened where we stand and recall them has a mysterious power to thrill the heart.—Martin Crawford, in Century.

INFLUENCE OF GLASS ON WINE.

A Singular and Almost Incredible Story About Bottles.

Probably 99 persons out of every 100, taken at random, would ridicule the idea that the quality of the glass of which a bottle may be made can have any influence on the taste or keeping qualities of its contents. And yet that it does do so we have the best of evidence. We are not alluding to the influence of light shining through flasks and its action on the substance contained, but the direct chemical reaction occurring within the glass and the material within the flask.

Very recently the following case occurred in France: A wealthy retired merchant bought a lot of very costly and rare wine in casks, samples of the wine from each cask being given him by the wine merchant. The wine was delivered, and the new owner proceeded to have it racked off and bottled. Some time afterwards some of the wine was brought to the table, and on tasting it the host detected a strange, unpleasant taste, which was also noticed by the guests. A fresh bottle was found to be similarly affected, and bottle after bottle was opened with the same result. An examination of the stock in the cellar developed the fact that every bottle of the recent purchase was spoiled. A suit was brought against the wine merchant, who declared that he had delivered the article exactly according to the samples furnished. On examining these latter they were found in excellent condition.

It is unnecessary to go into details, but during the course of the action of the law some of the bottles were produced in court, when it was found that the glass had become opaque. The bottles were handed over to a chemist, along with one of the lot purchased for bottling the wine, which had never been used. This is what the chemist found in the glass of the unused bottle: Silicic acid 52.4, potash and soda 4.4, lime 32.1, argillaceous matter, iron, etc., 11.1. In the examination of the bottles that had been used, while the silicic acid and argillaceous material remained constant, or nearly so, the lime, potash and soda were very much diminished, and it was made evident that they had passed into the solution, forming compounds with the acid ingredients of the wine, decomposing the latter and rendering it unfit to drink.—National Druggist.

Photographing Thought.

Thought has been photographed by Dr. Baraduc, a Roumanian; at least that is what he tells the Paris Academie de Medicine, backing up his assertion by many photographs. These are said to be rather cloudy, though a few are distinct, representing persons and things. The method employed is for the person whose thought is to be photographed to enter a dark room, place his hand on a photographic plate, and think intently on the object to be reproduced. Dr. Baraduc asserts that it is possible to produce a photographic image at a great distance, and instances the case of Dr. Istrate and Mr. Hasdeu. Dr. Istrate, before going to Campina, 180 miles from Bucharest, told his friend, Mr. Hasdeu, that he would appear on one of his photographic plates in Bucharest. On a specified night Mr. Hasdeu went to bed at Bucharest with a photographic plate at his feet and another at his head, while Dr. Istrate went to bed at Campina, willing with all his might that his image should appear on his friend's plate. Persons who have seen the plate say that there is on it a luminous spot in the middle of which a man's profile can be made out.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NOT AFTER JINNY.

This Settled, the Traveler Was Made Welcome.

I was riding along a country road in the vicinity of Memphis, when I came to a newly-painted frame house which gave such shining evidence of prosperity that it was an attraction to the barren landscape around it. A long, lean man, stoop-shouldered and ungainly, sat on a post in front of the spic-and-span doorstep, and held an old rifle across his knees, at the same time that he peered from under his shaggy brows in all directions, as if he were in ambush and expected to be surprised.

I wanted several favors at this man's hands, if possible, one of them being supper, another an invigorating draught of moonshine whisky, and finally, and the only demand I was certain of, a route to Memphis by that particular road.

"Evening," I said in as jocular a tone as I could assume. "Guarding the new paint?"

"Evenin', stranger," he answered, as short as pie crust.

"Could you tell me how to reach Memphis to-night?" I asked.

"Foller yer nose!"

"Then I am on the right road?"

"Git!"

He leveled his rifle at me, and my horse shied at the sudden movement. At the same time I heard a cackling laugh through the half-open front door.

I was disconcerted, but hardly alarmed, as it was evident that the man was nothing worse than a crank, so I assumed an air of injured innocence and asked:

"Do you take me for a sheriff or a revenue officer, because I am neither one nor the other?"

"No, young feller, I take you for one of them silly gentry as want ter come courtin' my gal Jinny, since they heerd tell that her mother's stepuncle, Job Morrill, left her a hundred dollars in his will!"

At this moment the door opened wide, and the homeliest girl I ever saw in my life filled the space with her ample circumference. She smiled at me so sweetly that I felt it imperative to hasten on my journey or let the old man shoot me on the spot.

"Pop, you needn't be afeard of that un; he's sassy enough to look out fer hisself," she chirped.

"So be, mister, ef Jinny favors yer, and et ain't her money you be arter, come rite in and take suthin'."

Again my intelligent horse shied, and before I could control him I was half way to Memphis, and out of reach of the old man's gun and the inhospitable imputation of wanting "Jinny's" money.—M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

WERE THEY MARRIED?

A Young Couple Duly Dissected and Talked Over.

They were coming away from the theater and they fell to discussing the young couple who sat in front of them.

"They are evidently married," said the girl in the Persian waist; "I noticed that they didn't exchange a word while the curtain was down."

"Nonsense; they are merely engaged," said the girl in the black gown; "I heard him tell her that he did not consider the leading lady even pretty."

"Perhaps they are merely brother and sister," suggested the young man of the party.

"No, they weren't," said the girl in the Persian waist; "he'd have gone out between the acts if he was only her brother, while an engaged man wouldn't want to leave her, and—"

"A newly-married man would not dare to," broke in the girl in the black gown.

"She took off her hat as soon as she came in," remarked the young man. "That looks as if she was married and in the habit of consulting the feelings of some one else."

"Or that they were not really engaged yet and she wanted to show him how considerate she could be," said the girl in the black gown.

"Or that she was merely conscious of having pretty hair," said the girl in the Persian waist. "Will you wager a box of chocolates that they are not married?"

"I—I'd rather you ladies would settle it between you," said the young man, hastily. "You have so much more insight in such matters, you know."

"There they come now," said the girl in the Persian waist. "Let us notice what they do and perhaps we can decide. If they are merely friends they will stop for cream soda and—"

"If they are engaged she will tell him how hungry she is, and they will stop for supper," said the young man, bitterly.

"While if they are married," went on the girl in the Persian waist, "he—there what did I tell you?"

The couple paused before a cigar shop and he went in, while she waited at the door.

"You were right," said the girl in the black gown, "they are married."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Pineapple Pancakes.

The Germans make these by adding stewed pineapple to a plain pancake batter of eggs, flour, and milk. Pour out the batter into a buttered frying pan that is large enough to cook it all. The pan should be not less than 12 inches in diameter, and the batter thin. When the batter has been poured into the pan, cover it at once with stewed pineapples and dredge them with powdered sugar. Put the pan in a quick oven and bake seven minutes; cut the cake in to triangular pieces, like pie, when served.—Good Housekeeping.

WONDERS OF BIRD MIGRATION.

Some Fly During the Day and Others at Night.

The manner of travel differs greatly among the birds. Nearly everybody has seen or heard the flocks of wild geese passing over in the night, making tremendous leaps, so to speak, across the country on their way south. That the shore birds bound to Patagonia travel in like fashion has already been told. Probably the great majority of birds travel south in great flocks at tremendous height from the earth. They are thus able in pleasant weather at least to see the landscape and so direct their way unvaryingly. In storms and fogs they lose their way, become confused, plunge about among the tree tops, fly through the streets of cities and dash themselves to death against the windows of lighthouses. To my mind this gathering of timid birds like the thrush—birds that live the summer through close to the ground and are never seen 100 feet above the soil—the gathering, I say, of birds like these in great flocks that go careening high in air for vast distances over the land by night is the greatest marvel of migration. It seems a matter of course that swallows should do so, for they are tireless.

On the other hand there are birds that are seen by day in "a ceaseless tide of migration." "They pass leisurely from tree to tree, gleaning as they go," says one observer writing on the characteristics of warblers. It is worth noting that the birds who migrate in this fashion are peculiar in their habits as workers—they never waste any time in play. The robins, the orioles, the bobolinks make a picnic excursion of their annual flight, but the plodders of the feathered race must needs carry their knitting to camp meeting. It has been supposed that the birds who migrate by night do so to escape the attacks of predatory birds, but these plodding migrants are quite as subject to attacks as any. Besides, on the clear nights when the night flyers go they are certainly subject to attacks from owls. There are so many things we do not know about the habits of birds that it seems worth while to call attention to points that may be disputed in the hope that some who seek knowledge out of pure love of it may turn their attention to this most interesting part of life in nature.—Colette Smiley, in Chautauquan.

Wonderful Suns.

Astronomers are not yet all agreed as to the causes of the variations of color and brilliancy which are exhibited by many stars. In the constellation Cepheus, in the northern sky, there is a star named Delta Cephei, which in the course of about three days alternately gains and loses a large part of its light. The spectroscope has proved that Delta Cephei consists of two stars revolving around one another in a very elliptical orbit, although they never get far enough apart to be separately visible from the earth. Even when viewed with a telescope their light is blended into a single star disk, although if we could go near enough to them we should find that they are, in reality, millions of miles apart. When brightest, the united light of the twin stars is two or three times greater than when faintest. One of the explanations recently offered by astronomers to account for these changes is that one of the stars composing Delta Cephei has a very thick atmospheric veil, consisting of clouds of condensed metallic vapors, and that when the stars draw near one another in their orbital motion the increase of heat dissipates the obscuring veil, and permits the star to which it belongs to shine with a splendor that it cannot obtain when its rays are interrupted by its envelope of clouds. It is hard to believe that the inhabited worlds could exist in the neighborhood of such a pair of suns as that.—Youth's Companion.

Water from Solid Rock.

A most interesting fact has been discovered by a Swedish scientist. It is that water can be found by boring into granite and other crystalline rocks to a depth of 100 to 700 feet. A well was sunk in the Island of Akro, off the Swedish coast, not long ago, and at a depth of 110 feet fresh water was tapped, providing an apparently inexhaustible supply.—Chicago Tribune.

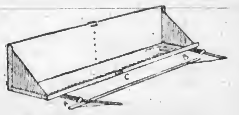
GRASSHOPPER TRAP.

A Device That Saved Many Crops in the State of Minnesota.

We told our readers last fall about the serious outbreak of grasshoppers in Minnesota, and the efforts made to destroy them. Among other devices employed was the hopper-dozier, a picture of which is shown. A bulletin of the Minnesota Experiment station gives the following account of the making of a hopper-dozier:

A sheet of ordinary sheet-iron, such as is used for making stovepipes, was turned up 1½ inch around the edges, and riveted at the corners. This made a shallow pan about 8 feet long, 2 feet broad and 1½ inch deep. To the bottom of this were riveted the six small strips which could be fastened to the three runners on which the pan rested. To the rear side of the pan was screwed a light, wooden frame, as long as the pan and 1½ foot high. Over this frame a piece of canvas was stretched. This frame served the important office of throwing back all those grasshoppers that otherwise would jump clean over the pan and throw them into the oil.



HOMEMADE 'HOPPER DOZIER.

The runners on which the pan stood were usually made of saplings or small pieces of board having an upward curve in front to prevent them from catching in the ground. The front ends of the runners were all fastened by screws to a cross-piece, which was, in turn, drawn by two ropes, one at each end. These ropes were joined in front and fastened to a single-tree. Sometimes two hopper-doziers were fastened to a long pole by means of short ropes; this was very easily drawn by one horse. Just in front of the pan was fastened a piece of rope which swept the ground a few inches in advance, and served to stir up the hoppers and make them jump into the pans. In the pan was laid a piece of cloth which was first saturated with water. About a pint of kerosene was then thrown in and the upright sheet or sail of canvas moistened with oil. The machine was then drawn over the pasture, or wherever the hoppers were thickest. In a short time it was usually seen to be partially filled with dead and dying insects.

The slightest touch of kerosene, either from the pan or from the canvas sheet, means death to the hopper, for the oil spreads over its body in the same way that a single drop will spread over a large surface of water. It seems to produce paralysis, which is first shown by the stiffening of the legs. A very large proportion of the hoppers that came in contact with the oil in the pan, immediately jumped out again, but they invariably died in the course of a few seconds or minutes.

Hundreds of these machines were made and drawn over the meadows and pastures, with the result that millions of the "hoppers" were killed, and this work, added to the fact that the season was unfavorable to the insects, saved many crops. Last year we had several requests from readers in the eastern states as to how these "hopper-doziers" are made, and so we print this information early in the season.—Rural New Yorker.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

In farming it is better to raise a thing or an animal than to buy it.

Usually the farmer that drives his cows with dogs saves time, but loses butter.

Fertility in an available form is the basis of all successful production from the soil.

Generally it takes longer to develop a heavy built animal than it does a light built one.

The most profitable pig is the one that makes the fastest growth from birth to maturity.

There is no economy in investing money in good blood unless it can be followed up by good attention.

It will aid materially in maintaining good health with the stock if care is taken to provide them with plenty of pure, fresh water daily.—Farmers' Union.

Effective Cure for Roup.

One of the best, cheapest and most cleanly cures for roup in fowls is said to be sulphur, alum and magnesia, equal parts, in the form of a powder. We have had no experience with it, but give it as it was tried by a poultry raiser and found to be very effective. He got a sort of dry powder sprayer, such as is used in applying insect powder, and applied the mixture to a hen having the roup. The effect was a cure, and he has since recommended his remedy. The powder should be blown over the head of the fowl, and into the eyes, throat and nostrils. When there is canker in the fowl, the cankerous growth should be removed with a blunt stick and the powder applied over the affected parts thoroughly. This will effect a cure.—Dakota Field and Farm.

One Way to Save Moisture.

How to save as much of the moisture as possible is a matter which has received the consideration of scientists and farmers. There are methods by which water may be stored for future use, but such are not practicable on all farms. There is one way to partially prevent loss, which is familiar to all farmers, and that is to keep the surface of the ground which is occupied by a crop always loose. If a shower comes much of the water will flow off the hard ground, but if the soil is loose the water will more easily go down. Constant stirring of the soil also prevents loss of a large portion of the moisture already in the soil.

STEPS IN BEEKEEPING.

How to Avoid the Rocks on Which Beginners Usually Split.

The first step is to get a good text book on bee-keeping and study it thoroughly. Then get another one and study that. Perhaps a third could be profitably added to the list. If a beekeepers' convention should be held near by, attend that; if not, visit neighboring beekeepers and "talk bees" with them —perhaps this would be better than the ordinary bee conventions, though both are good. After this, if it is the intention to make of beekeeping a special business, much time may be saved by spending at least one season with some professional apiarist. If this cannot be done, the best way will be to begin at home with a few colonies, and allow the bees and the knowledge to keep pace one with the other. The beginner is quite likely to make some mistakes, and it is better to make them with a small number of colonies. Perhaps ten colonies would be sufficient to begin with. Many recommend buying cheap colonies of blacks in box hives, transferring them to moveable frames, and Italianizing them; but transferring as usually done is a very disagreeable job, requiring some nerve, patience and skill, and seems scarcely the proper work at which to set a novice. In Italianizing there is also a risk of losing queens, particularly if the work is done by an inexperienced person. Still, if one has plenty of determination and little money this course may be advisable. It is much more pleasant, however, for the beginner to begin with Italians in movable comb hives.

Spring is the best time to buy bees, and it is better to get them as near home as possible, as express charges are very heavy, and long journeys are likely to injure the colonies. I would advise even a beginner to buy black bees in box hives near home, and then transfer and Italianize, rather than have bees shipped many hundreds of miles.

The cost of beginning in bee-keeping might be estimated something as follows:

Bee literature	5.00
Bee-smoker and veil	1.50
Ten colonies of bees at $5	50.00
New hives for swarms	10.00
Sections and comb foundations	10.00
Total	$76.50

It might be well for the beginner to produce extracted honey at first, in which case an extractor would be needed. This costs about ten dollars, but no sections would be needed, nor so much foundations, though there would be needed some vessels in which to store the honey. The one thing that the beginner needs to avoid in producing extracted honey is extracting too closely, taking away too much honey and leaving the bees short of stores. No honey should be taken from the brood nest.

Another rock upon which the beginner is likely to split, is dividing colonies too early, too frequently or too late. To allow each colony to swarm once, if it will, and prevent after-swarming, would be a safe plan for a beginner to follow.—Country Gentleman.

SOFT-SHELLED EGGS.

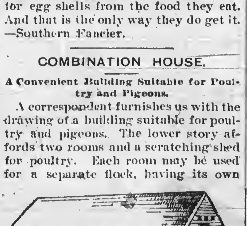
An Explanation of a Number of Theories on This Subject.

There are various theories on this subject, and the cause can only be guessed at. Lewis Wright says that soft-shelled eggs are caused by over-feeding, or want of lime which is best supplied by calcined and pounded oyster shells. Sometimes, he says, it is occasioned by fright, in which case the hens will be all right in a day or two. Filthy nests and vermin, he thinks, may have something to do with the fault. We believe that when a fowl habitually lays soft-shelled eggs, as some do, that some functional disorder is the cause, and not lack of lime, which has become a stereotyped phrase in this connection. Such hens should be put in a coop by themselves and experimented with. We have never seen a soft-shelled egg here in Georgia, where there is no limestone, and where our water is free-stone. But we have had soft-shelled eggs in Tennessee, where the water is all limestone, except the mineral springs. When a hen lays soft-shelled eggs occasionally, she is simply out of condition some way, and lack of lime may have nothing to do with the trouble. If the lime theory is worth anything, not only one hen, but the entire flock would lay soft-shelled eggs when lime was lacking. Yet such a thing never happens. Fowls get lime for egg shells from the food they eat. And that is the only way they do get it. —Southern Fancier.

COMBINATION HOUSE.

A Convenient Building Suitable for Poultry and Pigeons.

A correspondent furnishes us with the drawing of a building suitable for poultry and pigeons. The lower story affords two rooms and a scratching shed for poultry. Each room may be used for a separate flock, having its own yard, or one may be kept for a laying room and the other for the roosting room.



COMBINATION HOUSE.

The upper story is intended for pigeons, and has an entrance for the attendant opening from the shed below. It would be better to have a small room in the upper story reserved for the storage of feed.

The dimensions of this house are not stated, but the principle may be adapted to any size and to the requirements of the builder. In any case the corner posts should not be less than 12 feet.—Farm Journal.

Honey just after being taken from the hives should be put into open vessels, and allowed to ripen before storing away.

SUMMER COMPLAINT.

A Paper of Interest to Mothers Watching the Health of Their Babies.

Rather more than 15 per cent. of all who are born into this world leave it within a year, and more than 25 per cent. before they have reached their third anniversary. These deaths occurring with such relative frequency in the warmer months have given rise to a germ summer complaint, which, in its most typical form, is a cholera; in other words, an inflammation of the small intestines, whose conspicuous symptom is colliquative diarrhea. Except from the frequency and severity of this disease—or, rather, group of diseases—in the case of young children there is nothing to justify the special use of the term "cholera infantum," since it is nothing but cholera nostrum occurring in infants.

The wise physician suspects the stomach in every case of intestinal catarrh or indigestion. Not that there is necessarily or even frequent or antecedent organic lesion of the stomach, but because the most common and most tangible source of intestinal disorders is the entrance of a fermenting mass of improperly prepared chyme.

Cholera infantum is due to bacteria, but not to any specific bacterium. Fenton B. Turck, of Chicago believes that he has demonstrated at least half a dozen kinds that will produce lactic acid fermentation alone. A dozen or more germs are found in the mouth at all times, while the intestine teems with the bacillus coli communi and a number of other varieties. Except that the antiseptic action of hydrochloric acid renders the stomach reasonably sterile during the height of digestion, the entire alimentary canal is a long culture tube from the time when the new-born baby inspires, screams and swallows till the organic matter of the body has been destroyed by decay or fire. Hence, the rapid development of saprophytes and other germs, the consequent irritation of the mucous membrane of the small intestines—and very likely of that of the stomach and colon as well—and the poisoning of the entire system through the absorption of ptomaines and leucomaines indicate not a total change from the normal condition, but merely a heightened degree of bacterial activity.

Bad sanitation, and especially crowded and imperfectly ventilated and poorly drained apartments, have long been recognized as prolific sources of cholera infantum. The disease, therefore, is essentially one of cities, and preeminently of the slums. There must be considered not so much the absolute population of a city as the density of its population, the absence of breathing space in the shape of yards and parks, the existence of a contaminated water supply, and the lack of sufficient control of tenement architecture, of food and milk supplies, and of garbage collections. It is impossible to select any one factor of slum life as a sole or principal predisposing cause of cholera infantum. It may be that the parents, debilitated by poverty, hard work, poor food or disease, or by all combined, have brought forth children predestined to a physical damnation. It may be that the child is weakened, not so much by heredity as by confinement in the stifling atmosphere of a room that is at once kitchen, parlor and chamber, or by recent contact with contagious disease, or that has directly irritated its stomach by delving in the swill tub or by drinking the dregs from a beer glass. Whether breast-fed or bottle-fed, it must be remembered that the baby's draughts of milk are meals, and that they must be taken regularly. Ordinary cleanliness must be observed with regard to the child's mouth and the source of nourishment. In the case of bottle-fed children partial sterilization should be insisted upon. Milk fully sterilized by boiling, however, loses much of its nutritive power. The long tube of the nursing bottle has slain its thousands, and must give way to the simple nipple fitting over the top of the bottle.

Much can be done to diminish infant mortality if the obstetrician will bear in mind that he has not completed his duty until he has instituted a regimen for the child which shall include cleanliness, proper clothing—neither too warm, too cold nor too tight—proper exercise and outdoor life, and, most important of all, regular feeding. After some experience with babies who have been subjected to such a regimen, whether at the breast or on the bottle, we feel justified in declaring that cholera infantum is largely a preventable disease.—Medical and Surgical Reporter.

The Newest Gowns.

The craze for blue and white has extended to muslin gowns. The latest and most chic show blue figures in white grounds and are profusely trimmed with lace.

The deep corselet waist band and the short bolero are features of many chic gowns and have the merit of being almost universally becoming.

A novelty in sleeves shows diaphanous material unlined from the elbow to the wrist. Above it is made bouffant and is caught together in the center of the arm at the top.

Daring combinations of color seem to multiply as the season advances. A light transparent gray linen is made up over apple-green and finished with pink belt and collar.

Pique appears to be the one formidable rival to grass linen. Not only is it employed for the making of whole gowns, but it makes also revers, capes and collars for silk gowns and is encircled by trimmings of real Irish crochet.—Chicago News.

A Face Refresher.

To refresh the face when tired and weary after a day's outing or traveling, it is a mistake to plunge the face into cold water, which really acts as an irritant, whereas tepid water produces quite a contrary effect. After washing off the dust on face and ears, a little buttermilk, or, failing that, rose-water, dabbed on will heal and whiten the skin and take away all feeling of irritation.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A RICH STRIKE.

Pioneer of Black Hills Discovers a Gold Mine in Mexico.

Jeff McDermott Is the Lucky Man and He Is Likely to Become a Millionaire—Preparing to Work the Mine.

Jeff McDermott, one of the pioneers of the Black Hills region, is likely to become a millionaire. Some time ago he went to old Mexico, and in a camp known as Baborigame met Gad Freeman, an old-time friend who had become a Mexican in mode of life. Freeman had a valuable concession of mineral land from the government, embracing a scope of country 30 miles in length and several miles in width. He took McDermott in as a partner, and the latter at once commenced prospecting for quartz. He soon discovered a ledge 16 feet wide of high-grade ore. The ledge was stripped for 1,000 feet of its length and samples of the ore sent to St. Louis for a test. The returns were so rich that an expert, accompanied by other interested parties, started at once for the camp. They made a thorough examination and took a complete sample from the vein to Denver for the purpose of having it assayed. A number of assays were made, all with the same result, the values ranging from $4,000 to $8,000 gold a ton. The final test was one load of 50 pounds, and this yielded gold to the amount of $22.65. A sale was at once made of a sixty-fourth interest in the property to the St. Louis parties in consideration of $200,000 and the erection of a mill on the property. The $22.65 button was presented to Mrs. McDermott, who was in Denver at the time the assays were made. The certificate shows the metal to be almost pure. McDermott writes to his friends in South Dakota that Mexico is a great country. The mines have been worked in a slipshod manner by the natives, who have no knowledge of modern methods of mining.

PAID BRYAN HIS FIRST WAGES.

Cincinnati Man Tells How the Nominee Began Work as a Water Boy.

J. W. Patrick, now a freight clerk at Cincinnati, O., said the other day in speaking of the democratic presidential nominee:

"I paid Billy Bryan the first money he ever earned. I used to live in Salem, Ill., and was well acquainted with the Bryans. I was in the hay business then. North of Judge Bryan's farm were 240 acres, which he wanted to get for his boys. Billy, who was the oldest, he thought might make a lawyer, but he was sure the others would be farmers. Finally the judge backed me and I leased the farm. The first season I had 240 acres of wheat. Just as I was beginning harvest that year—it was 1873—Judge Bryan rode out with Billy and told me to make a hand of him and pay him what he was worth.

The boy was just out of school. I needed a water boy, so I took Judge Bryan's old buggy horse, tied two gallon water jugs with a rope and hoisted them and Billy on the horse's back. During that harvest young Bryan followed the machines around the field on the horse's back. Even then that boy would discuss politics at noon time.

ELOPERS RESORT TO A TANDEM.

Kentucky Couple Married Without Leaving the Saddles.

An elopement somewhat out of the ordinary created some excitement at Jeffersonville, Ind., the other evening. John Parsons and Miss Anna Black, of Oldham county, Ky., astride of a tandem, reached Louisville in the afternoon, and at once started, via the Big Fur bridge, followed by a mutual friend on a wheel, for Jeffersonville. They halted under the Indiana approach and waited until their friend sought the services of Magistrate Keigwin, who guided them to the county clerk's office for the license. This procured, Keigwin and his companion repaired to the bridge, where the couple to be married were in waiting. Instead of going to the magistrate's office to be united, the twain decided to be married in the saddles of the tandem, supported by the friend on one side and Keigwin on the other, who also served in the capacity of officiating magistrate. The novel marriage was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic crowd.

THE GREAT NURSERIES.

Louisiana, Mo., Rockport, Ills.—Visited by Gov. Colman, Ex-Sec'y Agr'l and the Hort. Ed., Judge Miller.

"Oh, how insignificant all my fifty years of nursery business seems, all combined, when compared with this stupendous establishment, where they count by millions," said Judge Miller, that veteran horticulturist, as he, in company with the writer, were being driven to the various departments of this vast nursery.

In an experience of over forty years we do not remember to have passed through an establishment where so large a number of hands were employed whose duties were so thoroughly systemized, and where business capacity of a higher order was manifested.

It is not in the soil of every farm that one finds qualities essential to the growth of the different kinds of Nursery stock, hence it has devolved upon these gentlemen, who were born to the Nursery business, to select from among the hills and valleys of the two Pikes such portions as are adapted to their purposes. But in this very fact of selection of soil, we see their exceeding care for the future success of their stock.

Missouri and Illinois have no more worthy institutions than the Stark Nurseries, and surely no better or more representative men than the proprietors. The business is growing on their hands as it deserves to grow.

They have a system of 40,000 acres of commercial test orchards located in great fruit growing regions.

The canvassing force is being increased, 5,000 fine outfits ready. Stark Nurseries always have room for more active workers because they have millions of Stark trees to sell.—Colman's Rural World.

STRANGER—"Is there a law in this town against selling liquor on Sunday?" Old Resident—"Yes; but don't let that worry you, my friend; there's no law against buying it."—Roxbury Gazette.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

BIG AND GOOD.

Battle Ax PLUG

Sometimes quality is sacrificed in the effort to give big quantity for little money.

No doubt about that.

But once in a while it isn't.

For instance, there's "BATTLE AX."

The piece is bigger than you ever saw before for 5 cents. And the quality is, as many a man has said, "mighty good."

There's no guess work in this statement.

It is just a plain fact.

You can prove it by investing 5 cents in "BATTLE AX."

STATE NEWS.

Potatoes are rotting in the ground in many localities.

A deer swimming in the river was caught at Catlettsburg.

In some neighborhoods tobacco is from three to five weeks earlier than usual.

Hay rides and fishing parties are quite popular with Georgetown young people.

At Middleburg, Luther Lucas, aged 16, and Myra Deek, aged 13, were wedded.

The heavy rains last week did an immense amount of damage throughout the State.

The postoffice at Ulysses, Lawrence county, was robbed and burnt last Thursday night.

Warden Nell will hereafter not allow a prisoner beyond the walls of the penitentiary.

The appropriation of $83,000 for the Kentucky river was made immediately available.

Mrs. Lucy Nield has entered upon a ten days' temperance campaign in Scott county.

While bathing in Dix river Robert Hammond was attacked and badly bitten by a large water mocasin.

The baggage wagon has been substituted for the electric cars in Georgetown. The electric generator is n. g.

Now that the Compulsory Education law has gone into effect, some of the country school houses will have to be enlarged.

Greenup county has taken up the $15,000 worth of bonds issued some years ago to aid the building of the C. & O. and issued new ones in place of them.

An incendiary fire destroyed the barn and 40 hogsheads of tobacco and the dwelling of James Whallen of Woodford county. Loss, $6,500; insurance, $5,000.

The record in the case of Scott Jackson convicted of the murder of Pearl Bryan, has been filed in the Court of Appeals and will be heard early in the fall session of that court.

Bourbon County, this State, has 137 white men who are from six feet three inches to six feet eight inches in height, and of this number forty-six have the Christian name William.

At Lancaster Miss Mary Grimes went into the parlor to pull down a blind, when a big black snake, three feet in length, fell from the curtain upon her shoulder. She didn't faint but the snake did after several licks.

The impression seems to be growing that Gov. Bradley will assemble the legislature in special session. We have never asked a favor of the Governor and had no idea that we would, but in such an emergency as this we would respectfully petition his excellency to save the State and people from such a calamity.—Commonwealth.

Ben Kays, a well driller, and Doc Young, a colored laborer, of Danville, were thirty teet into a well attempting to dislodge a drill, when there was an unexpected explosion of a dynamite blast and both men terribly mangled. Both had eyes torn out, fingers blown off and received other serious wounds. Their recovery is doubtful.

The residence of Colonel Jerry E. Delph, at "Cold Stream," the famous blue grass stud, was almost demolished by lightning this afternoon about 4 o'clock. Colonel Delph, his wife and daughter were in the house at the time and, though they miraculously escaped death, they were severely shocked as to cause them to be prostrated.

Inquiries are again being made by several leading diamond importing houses of the East concerning the queer deposits of supposed diamond bearing clay in rocky watersheds of the Rowan county hills, where spring the headwaters of Tripletts creek. The existence of this peculiar formation has been known for years, and many attempts have been made to secure samples of the earth by both New York and Cincinnati diamond dealers.

Building contractors have "let out a holler" against the Governor and other Sinking Fund Commissioners for letting the contract for building the new penitentiary shops without asking for bids. The work will cost something like $50,000, and the contractors say there is something unusual at least in letting out a contract of this magnitude without giving any notice or asking for bids on any part of the material even.

The Sunday camp-meeting at High Bridge developed its usual quota of cutting affrays and general all round scraps. As a promoter of religion, this famous resort has long been a failure and it is a wicked imposition upon the Christian faith that the money making scheme is still permitted to masquerade under the name of a religious gathering. It should be plainly denominated what it has largely come to be—an outing for toughs.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Any person using, operating or moving any traction or portable engine along or on any highway or private passway or lane in this State, that is moved in whole or in part by steam power, shall send, and keep at least two hundred yards in advance of said engine, a messenger, whose duty it shall be to warn all persons of its approach, and render such assistance as shall be necessary to secure the safety of all such persons; and any person failing to comply with the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than ten or more than fifty dollars for each offense.

After having made the campaign last year practically on the platform of turning the Mason Ford Company out, and branded them as a set of robbers, Gov. Bradley and his associates in the Sinking Fund Commission have closed a lease with their old enemies for the employment of 500 convicts at the Frankfort penitentiary. This movement has started many tongues to wagging in the Democratic party, and the action of the Commissioners will no doubt be received with hearty disapproval by Kentucky Republicans, who thought when they elected the present State officers they were at the same time sounding the death knell of the Mason Ford Company.

Tobacco worms are as thick as fleas on a dog.

There are not hogs enough in Scott county to eat up the growing corn crop.

The Kentucky Swine Breeders Association will meet at Danville August 11-12.

A number of fat cattle have been contracted for in Fayette county for export at 4 cents.

The finest lemon orchards in the world are those in Sicily, where an acre of lemons is worth $1500.

Georgetown people are still pining for the cheap peaches they read about in some of the papers.

Texas boasts of a hog that weighs over 1,400 pounds and that is still young. The animal eats 50 ears of corn at each meal.

The high waters of the Ohio have destroyed nearly all the tobacco in the low lands and greatly damaged the corn crop.—Brackin Chronicle.

George J. Ballard, of Clark county, has recently bought a number of good mare mule colts at about $40 each. He has faith in the future of good mules.

Lambs are higher than they have been for a year or two: cattle have advanced to 4 cents; stock hogs have gone up from 3 to 3¼ cts. and a better feeling prevails in almost all other articles of produce.—Lexington Gazette.

The excessive rains have damaged tobacco in this county to the extent of hundreds of acres. Some growers will lose nearly their whole crops, and but few will escape without some damage. The bottom lands suffered the worst. However on the tops of hills, especially where the blue clay is near the surface, the tobacco is scalded out. Also, the tobacco hanging in the barns is much damaged by the moist air; in fact, a good deal of it has rotted. Corn is scalded out in a great many places in the low lands. The oats crop has been much injured, a good portion being ruined in the shock. Unthreshed wheat is considerably injured; meadows also. The old adage, "Make hay while the sun shines" could not be observed last week, for it rained nearly every day. Fall grass will be very good, which will go far towards wintering stock.—Owingsville Outlook.

[Salt Lake City Tribune, Rep.]

1. There is not one free coinage country in the world to-day that is not enjoying unexampled prosperity, the only drawback being a foreign debt contracted on the gold basis.

2. There is not a gold standard country in the world to-day the property of which has not shrunken from 35 to 60 per cent. during the last 21 years: not one in which there is not unexampled depression, distress and sorrow.

3. There is not a silver standard country in the world to-day that has any need of gold money except to settle foreign balances, and there is not a gold standard country in all the world to-day that the bulk of all the gold is not locked up in the treasury or in the banks, and the people are suffering from "sound money" asphyxia.

4. There is not a silver standard country in the world to-day where there are any idle deposits lying in the banks, all the money being in active circulation and drawing large interest, and the circulation per capita in the United States of real money is just about what it in Mexico, nearly all the money of ultimate redemption being hid away in the vaults of the treasury and national banks.

5. There is not a silver standard country in the world to day where the laboring man is not receiving full pay and more regular work than he ever received before. There is not a gold country in the world to-day where a vast proportion of the people are not idle, and where wages are above the rates of 1849, except where they have been maintained by the stubborn persistence of the labor unions.

6. There is not a silver standard country in the world to-day where the people are not doing better than ever before. There is not a gold standard country where the people are not in more distress and suffering more loss and more apprehension than ever before.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The tobacco trade has shown no material change the past week. The prices have gradually reached a point that appears to be permanent for the present at least. There are some fluctuations in prices on different days, but not enough to be noticed only by a careful observer. The sales have been quite large the first three sale days, but small on Friday. There is a firm demand for colory goods of all grades, and while the offerings of these goods have been more liberal, still the demand holds the price very firm.

Offerings of old tobacco have not been very large this week, but has met with a good demand at prices paid for the new, but there is still a disposition to hold on a while longer, which we consider a continuation of the error made one year ago, and while the old tobacco, on account of its color, when sweet, is in demand, and the holders should dispose of the same and not hold until it has more competition.

The nondescripts remain very low, especially when they have a green tinge, also the medium dark is doing no better, but the best quality of the red leat is firm. Red tips are still taken for the French contract, and remain at about the same figures.

The reports from the country are more favorable the past week, and with clear skies the next few days we can expect a large crop, although many are under the impression it will be large and bony. The most favorable reports are from the old districts.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

OWEN COUNTY.
[Herald.]

The new Baptist church will be a beauty.

The teachers' institute was a big success.

Doc Baker, a farm hand, who has been stealing horses in this county was captured over in Ohio and brought back: He will be sent up.

Death in a horrible form came to Mrs. Charles Murray, the wife of a well-to-do farmer of the Christianburg neighborhood on the 19th. While the family were at the Sunday dinner the house was discovered to be on fire, and every one set to work to save the household effects. Mrs. Murray, in the excitement, rushed upstairs to save some valuables. She had just gained the upstairs room when the roof fell in the unfortunate woman perishing in the flames. Mrs. Murray was fifty years of age, and besides a husband leaves two children.

The new Methodist church is nearly completed.

The people of Owen county want a primary election for nominating candidates for Congress.

The teachers took more interest than usual in the subjects presented at the institute.

The yield of small grain is far below the average.

A large crowd attended W. R. Sebree's sale.

The Methodist church will be ready for occupancy Sept. 1.

Uncle Hal Moore, one of Owen county's oldest citizens was in town Monday. He is an old Jacksonian Democrat, and is delighted with the nomination of Bryan and a free silver platform. He says he voted for Andrew Jackson 63 years ago in a little red hotel in the town of Owenton that stands on the spot occupied by the residence of Mrs. Annette Rigg. He then lived in Warsaw and came through Owenton on election day. He went up and told them that he had not voted and was allowed to vote. Since then he has made a straight record. He is now 84 years of age.

The hard rains of a week ago caved in the old well in the court house yard and part of the sidewalk in front of the house came near going with it.

Joe Glascock attended County court at Owenton last Monday. He says that candidates in Owen are so plentiful that they make life a burden, even for the stranger while in that city.

Mr. Al Smith, of Louisville, traveling agent for John P. Morton & Co., was in town Saturday and Saturday night. He reports the political situation over the State as very much mixed. Says he can not yet tell on which side the cat is going to jump.

Miss Katie White, who has been engaged in business in Chicago for the past year, is at home with her father's family on a ten days vacation. She says she likes the windy city for a place in which to do business but would not like to live there permanently.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1896. NO. 43.

THE following from the London Financial News shows what interest England is taking in the financial question that is agitating this country, and how exceedingly anxious that country is that the single gold standard shall obtain in the United States. High protection has no horrors for England as compared with the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and the following English argument in opposition to bimetallism is prolific with reasons why every voter in the United States should favor it and vote for the nominees of the Chicago convention, as they stand for bimetallism. The Financial News says:

"The financial situation in the United States is very serious, and it demands immediate attention of British financiers and statesmen. The trade of the world is now in our hands, but it will not long remain there if the United States goes to a bimetallic basis with the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

"With the addition of silver to the volume of money everything in America would take on a new face; labor and industry would gain new life. The grip of the gold standard on the products of the world would be loosened and prices would rise. Great Britain would lose her markets in South Africa, Asia and Europe, and American ships would not be long in capturing the carrying trade of the world.

"British creditors must now apply themselves quickly to the American money problem. The American people are now thoroughly aroused and educated on the power and use of money, and made desperate by debt and depression, they are for free silver as the main issue.

"Great Britain need feel no fear nor injury to her trade or investments if the Republican party can force protection tariff as the main issue in the coming presidential campaign, but if free silver dominates the American mind and carries at the polls it will bring about a change in England that will be ruinous from its suddenness and severity. The damage that can be done British manufacturers by a protective tariff is slight compared with the disasters that would be entailed by a change from a single gold standard to a complete bimetallic standard.

"The success of free coinage will bring down the rate of interest on money and cause an immediate rise in the price of all commodities. When silver becomes primary money the American mines will pour their products into the mints, and an era similar to that produced by the issue of greenbacks during the civil war will begin. Gold will leave the banks and enter into competition with silver in the avenues of trades, and the manufactories of the United States which have been shut down or crippled since 1892 will again resume their fight for the English markets.

"It matters not to Great Britain which party succeeds if the gold standard is maintained, but either of the old parties or a new party which goes into power pledged to free coinage will be inimical or prejudicial to English manufactories and trades.

"The American people are massing now on free silver. When that comes fairly before the American people England will regret her apathy and adherence to the single gold standard."

THE Democratic Congressional Committee for this district met at Sanders, Carroll county, last Thursday. Campbell and Kenton counties controlled the committee and decided how the other counties should select their delegates, but made no arrangements for the selection of delegates in Campbell and Kenton. If these two counties are allowed to speak for themselves in this matter the other six counties should have been accorded the same privilege. The country Democrats have demonstrated that they are able to preserve a harmonious organization, but as much cannot be said for Campbell and Kenton.

WHY has not Boone, Gallatin, Carroll, Trimble, Grant or Pendleton county as much right to say how they will select their delegates to the Congressional convention as Campbell or Kenton county has to say how they will select theirs. The country portion of the district does not belong to Newport and Covington, and the other counties should have been accorded the same privileges as Campbell and Kenton were..

MR. BRYAN will enter upon an active campaign about the first of September, and will make many speeches between that time and November.

COMMITTEE

Of the Sixth Congressional District Meets,

And Designate Manner, Time and Place for Nominating a Candidate.

It Looks Like Mr. Hodge Tried to Pack the Cards for His Own Nomination.

The Country has Had No Voice In the Matter, So Far, but will be Heard From Later On.

The Democratic Committee met at Sanders last Thursday to consider the matter of holding a convention for nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress. After a conference and an informal discussion of the matter, the following resolutions were offered by John T. Hodge, of Campbell, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That a Delegate Convention of the Democratic voters of the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky be held at Williamstown, Grant County, Kentucky, on Oct. 8 at 11 a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent the Democratic party as nominee for Congress from said district. And the delegates of said convention shall be chosen by a primary election of the Democratic voters of the counties of Boone, Grant, Gallatin, Trimble, Pendleton and Carroll in each voting precinct in said counties between the hours to be fixed, by the respective County Executive Committees, on the 3d day of October, 1896, at which delegates shall be selected on the basis of one delegate for every 25 votes and fraction over 12, as cast at the Presidential election in said counties in 1892.

"And that the delegates so selected shall in each county on the 6th day of October, 1896, meet at the county seats of said respective counties at 12 o'clock and there select Congressional delegates on a basis of one for each 200 votes or fraction over 100 cast for the Presidential Electors in said counties at the election of 1892, and said delegates so selected are ordered to meet at Williamstown, Grant County, Ky., in convention on the 8th day of October, 1896, to select a Democratic candidate for Congress."

"And that in the counties of Campbell and Kenton, on Oct. 6, 1896, between the hours of 11 a. m. and 1 p. m., Congressional delegates are directed to be chosen on a basis of one delegate for each 200 votes cast for Presidential Electors at the elections in 1892 and one additional delegate for each fraction over 100 votes so cast. That said delegates shall be chosen in said counties of Campbell and Kenton in such a manner as the respective legislative committees of said counties shall designate and determine by a three-fourths vote."

Those attending the meeting were John T. Hodge, of Campbell, with the vote of Dr. J. J. Youtsey and proxy of the same county; Judge J. Elliston, of Kenton County, to cast the vote of that county by proxy. The other members present were Bob Brown and Wood, of Gallatin county.

WHEN the Republicans nominated Richard P. Ernst as their candidate for Congress in this district, they put up their strongest man, and the Democrats will have to make a fight if they defeat him. Mr. Ernst is a fine business man and as clever a gentleman as is in the Sixth District, but he is an intense Republican, just such as the Democrats here have heretofore taken great pleasure in snowing under.

ONE of the members of the Covington Republican Aid Society, was in Burlington, last week, and ascertained what it would cost the society to have the poll-books of this county copied for its use in the distribution of single gold standard literature among the voters of the county. The society, which is composed of Democrats who refuse to support the nominees of the Chicago Democratic convention, proposes to flood this county with gold-bug literature, and thereby contribute as far as possible to the defeat of Bryan and Sewall and to the election of McKinley and Hobart. If you receive a lot of gold-standard literature you may know from whence it comes.

COME to town next Saturday and join the Democratic club.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The Commonwealth's docket was disposed of as follows:

The following prosecutions were continued, and alias process ordered to issue in each: Commonwealth vs John H. Foster; same vs Bud Hensley; same vs James Craig; same vs John Slayback (2); same vs John Horton, (2); same vs Pleasant Lamb; same vs Dennis Craig; same vs Frank Henderson; same vs Frank Staley.

The following prosecutions were filed away: Commonwealth vs Jack Henaur; same vs Charles Aylor, (2); same vs Alfred Aylor; same vs Henry Barlow.

In the prosecution against W. H. Bowman, for selling liquor to a minor, the proof showed that he was indicted for selling to the wrong man, and the indictment was dismissed.

The prosecutions against Colonel and Ada Carrier, for breach of the peace, and against Henry Shafer &c., for hunting on Sunday, were continued.

The Bullittsville and Dry Creek Turnpike Company was fined $25 in each of the two cases for suffering its road to become unfit for public travel.

Marce Rice, for attempted assault, was fined $20.

Henry Barlow was fined $25 in each of two cases for giving liquor to a minor.

Duke Rice, for carrying a pistol, was fined $25 and 10 days in jail.

The case of the Commonwealth against James A. O'Hara was called Friday morning, and the parties announced themselves ready for trial, and the work of getting the jury was begun. The regular panel was exhausted before noon, and the following ten jurors had qualified: S. S. McWethy, H. H. Grant, B. H. Stephens, A. C. Souther, John McElroy, H. C. McNeal, John Deck, G. G. Rue, Robt. Rouse, Adam Hoffman. The jurors were admonished by the court and placed in charge of the Sheriff. J. F. Blyth and Jas. L. Clore were sworn in to assist the Sheriff in summoning jurors.

The court then drew from the wheel the names of 90 jurors, and ordered them summoned to appear in court at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

The jurors ordered summoned on Friday, commenced arriving at an early hour Monday morning. They came from every neighborhood in the county. It was 10 o'clock when the work of securing the jury in the O'Hara case was begun. The panel was completed at 11 o'clock 10 jurors having been examined, B. F. Norman and Jacob Reib qualifying. The examination was continued until the special venire was exhausted, when the following jurors had been accepted: G. T. Rue, S. S. McWethey, Adam Hoffman, A. C. Souther, Charles Balsley, H. J. Aylor, Jacob Reib, John Deck W. H. Marshall. W. D. Rector and O. Ryle had qualified but had not been accepted. The venire being exhausted, the Judge then drew from the jury wheel 81 names, which exhausted the names in the wheel. The Sheriff was ordered to summon these 81 jurors to appear in court this (Wednesday) morning at 9 o'clock. The Sheriff was ordered to summon, also the jury Commissioners to appear in court this morning to replemish the jury wheel. One hundred and four jurors have been examined with the above result, and the probability is the O'Hara trial will consume a portion of next week.

The defense is represented by A. G. DeJarnett, O'Hara & Rouse J. W. Bryan, J. M. Lassing and D. E. Castleman. The prosecution is represented by M. D. Gray alone.

COURT NOTES.

W. T. German waited on the grand jury.

Four divorces have been granted at this term.

Quite a number of judgments by default were taken.

Nannie Cloud was granted a divorce from R. E. Cloud.

The heat so far this term has been very trying on the legal talent.

The regular jurors who did not qualify in the O'Hara case were finally discharged.

The jurors do not take well to the idea of having to wait indefinitely for their pay.

The attendance at court last week was confined, principally, to litigants and witnesses.

The special venire of 90 men drawn in the O'Hara case was scattered all over the county.

The slander suits of Chas. Stevenson against George B. Murphy, and Mary A. Murphy were continued.

Edith Rouse was granted a divorce from Hubert Rouse, and restored to her maiden name, Kendall.

Leeota Barnes was divorced from Charles Barns and restored to her maiden name, Ryle. Mr. Barns has custody of the children.

Maggie Wilson was divorced from William Wilson and adjudged $3 per month alimony. She has custody of the two children.

Gov. Bryan came out last Friday. He is one of the attorneys for the defense in the O'Hara case. The Governor is looking unusually well.

D. M. Hewitt proposes organizing a bald-headed free silver club, each member of the club to have tattooed on his bald head the insignia 16 to 1.

Town of Florence vs T. L. Swetnams' bond as treasurer of the town of Florence is void as to the trustees on account of the irregularity of his election.

Friday afternoon the grand jury made its report, returning 13 indictments. It also filed a written report, which is in words and figures, viz.:

Col. Dyas, of Covington, was on hand long enough last Friday to make a vigorous fight against a motion to strike out the major portion of one of his petitions.

In the suit of Ida Helms against Harrison Clore, the plaintiff made an effort to secure a change of venue, but the motion was overruled and the cause continued until next term.

A notice reading, "gentlemen will please keep outside of the bar," was posted at one entrance to the bar Friday morning, but it was noticed that all the attorneys were at their places on the forbidden territory.

One day last week the Judge wanted a drink when the jailer gave him a glass full of nice, cool Big Bone water. Not being famliar with Big Bone water the Judge did not know what kind of a decotion Cy was putting on him, and from the contortion of countenance it was presumed that the offending official came very near having to take himself into custody.

To the Hon. John W. Green, Judge
Fifteenth Judicial District:

We, your grand jury, would most respectfully report that we have been in session five days, have examined forty witnesses and found thirteen indictments.

We have examined all of the public buildings and find them in good repair and well kept. We recommend that the walls and ceilings of the County Infirmary, where the plastering is off, be repaired, and that the walls and ceilings be whitened and the inside wood work be painted, and that the roof be repaired where it leaks.

Complaint is made that the public roads in the county in many places are being worked too narrow and we recommend that the overseers be instructed to work their roads not less than 15 feet wide and 20 feet where practicable between ditches, and that all roads be put out of creeks and branches.

We had three witnesses, viz: Jno. Venable, Tom Woodford and Harry Dean subpoenaed and they refused to appear, and we recommend that that they be brought before the next grand jury.

The iron fence around the court house needs a coat of paint and we recommend that it be painted with black paint.

All of which is respectfully reported. J. J. RUCKER, Foreman.

THERE was no meeting of bolting Democrats held here last Saturday. There are several Democrats in this county who do not agree with the Chicago platform on the money question, but they are, nevertheless, Democrats and will vote for the nominees of their party.

HON. W. J. BRYAN'S speech at Madison Square Garden, New York, was a masterly effort. There was no attempt at oratory. It was a plain, inpassionate, unanswerable presentation of the Democratic side of the issue now before the country.

WHAT right have those who will hold that convention in Indianapolis on September 2, to call themselves the "National Democratic party?" They have deserted the Democratic party and should give their organization some other name.

THE gold bugs did a good deal of boasting as to how they would control the Chicago convention, but it turned out that they were overwhelmingly in the minority. Now they are asserting that they will have a tremendous national convention at Indianapolis, and in that they will no doubt be successful if every bolting Democrat in the United States is made a delegate, and he attends.

IT is claimed that when the Hart county Democrats held the convention for the selection of candidates to the State convention Gen. S. B. Buckner introduced a resolution pledging support to the nominees of the Chicago convention, he believing at that time that the gold men would control the convention. The resolution was adopted at Gen. Buckner's instance, but he now ignores the pledge he look at his county convention, and is a king bee among the bolters. A short memory is very convenient to the General in as much as things did not go his way at Chicago.

THE Covington bolters propose to undertake to educate Boone county Democrats on the financial question, hoping to increase the number of bolters in the State by capturing some Democrats out here, and to that end the McKinley Aid Society recently organized in Covington will flood this county with "sound money" literature.

ARMY AND NAVY.

Unusual Economies Exercised In These Departments.

The Term of Imprisonment of Two Soldiers Reduced One-Half—Full Dress Uniforms for Members of the Hospital Corps Discontinued.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Unusual economies seem to be exercised by military and naval officials. Last week Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo remitted eleven months of the year's imprisonment which was imposed upon Machinist Dunphy, of the ram Katahdin, dismissal to follow on the ground that it is too expensive to keep him in prison that long.

General orders just issued by Gen. Otis, in command of the department of the Columbia, seem to show that the same policy is to be followed in the army. Two soldiers were sentenced to dismissal, following a year's imprisonment for desertion. Reviewing the report of the court-martial Gen. Otis approves the sentence, after reducing the term of imprisonment six months.

Similar remission of punishment is also made by Gen. Forsythe, department of California. Orders from the same headquarters relating to the transfer of horses and mules from one point to another require the transfers to be made without cost for transportation.

The following order has been issued by the president:

Executive Mansion, Washington, Aug. 10, 1896.—To the present schedule of punishment for enlisted men established under act of congress, approved September 27, 1890, is announced in executive orders of March 20, 1895, as promulgated in general order No. 16, of 1895, from the headquarters of the army, is added:

First class privates of engineers and ordnance may be reduced to second class privates of those corps respectively, in all cases where, for like offenses on the part of non-commissioned officers, their reduction in grade is now authorized.

(Signed) GROVER CLEVELAND.

Maj. Gen. Miles has promulgated the following:

By direction of the secretary of war, the issue of full dress uniforms to hospital stewards, acting hospital stewards and privates of the hospital corps, will be discontinued and an equivalent allowed in money value of white cotton duck clothing will be made instead.

NAVAL MANOEUVERS

To Test the Strategic Value of the Baltic-North Sea Canal.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—The plan in connection with the German naval manoeuvers to test the strategic value of the Baltic-North Sea canal has been carried out without a hitch. Thirty-nine war ships have traversed the canal in 30 hours, without an accident of any kind. This performance, in view of the adverse foreign comment upon the capacity of the canal, is regarded as a feat that greatly enhances the use of the waterway, showing as it does the rapidity with which war ships can pass from one sea to the other. Emperor William is delighted with the result of the manoeuvres and is particularly pleased with the successful passage of the war ships.

One Man and Two Women Drowned.

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 17.—Two men, Arthur Walker and Robert E. Lee, and two women, Viola French and Margaret Curry, were with a picnic party that went to Dog river early Sunday morning to spend the day. While in bathing at the mouth of the river, Walker and the two women were swept off their feet by the tide and all were drowned before the eyes of Lee, who was powerless to render assistance. Lee swam with the tide and after a desperate struggle of 30 minutes, was rescued alive.

Found Dead in His Store.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 17.—E. Caswell, of the firm of Caswell Bros., one of the leading grain and commission merchants, was found dead in his store Sunday night. Beside him was a box containg one morphine pill. He had just had all his teeth out and had been taking morphine to ease the pain. The coroner is unable to tell as yet whether it was suicide or not. Deceased was 42 years old and unmarried. He leaves a brother and mother.

Discouraging Crop Report.

COLUMBUS, Miss., Aug. 7.—Crop reports from this and adjoining counties in Alabama are most discouraging. For many weeks no rain has fallen, and the excessive heat has caused the bloom to drop from the cotton plant. Young bolls are opening prematurely, and the yield will be short. The consensus of opinion is that the cotton crop is 50 per cent. short of last year.

Two Girls Killed by Lightning.

NAPANEE, Ont., Aug. 17.—During a heavy thunderstorm Sunday morning, three little girls were crossing the river in a rowboat on their way to Sunday school, when lightning struck and killed two of them and rendered the other unconscious. They were all under 13 years of age. The two killed were named Lindsay and Ellis.

Saloonkeeper Killed by a Woman.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 17.—P. R. Lines, a saloonkeeper, was shot and killed at midnight Sunday night by Mrs. C. E. Rentz. Mrs. Rentz was a divorcee and a liason existed between her and Lines. QUEEN VICTORIA

Delivers Her Speech Proroguing the English Parliament.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The queen's speech proroguing parliament was delivered to the house of commons at 6:15 o'clock Friday evening. The speech says:

"My relations with the powers continue to be friendly. By my advice and sanction an expedition has undertaken to restore to the government of the Khedive, as far as Dongola, the territory that was lost a decade ago. The operations of the expedition are proceeding, and by the brilliant action at Farket a large proportion of the territory has already been recovered.

The conditional operations of Turkey continue to cause anxiety, and at present Crete is the principal center of the disturbance. I have observed strict neutrality, but in conjunction with the powers, I endeavored to reconcile the contestants by proposing a system of government which should be equitable and equally acceptable to Christians and Mussulmans.

"I regret that a serious rebellion, signalized with cruel murders, has broken out in Matabeleland, the rising having extended to Mashonaland. The work of defense and repression has been undertaken, the settlers displaying great courage. They have since been reinforced by imperial and other troops."

The speech refers to the Matabele country and expresses hope that the rebels will shortly accept the clemency which has been offered to them.

Referring to the matter of delimination of the Italian frontier, the speech says that the agreements between the shah of Persia and the ameer of Afghanistan upon the subject are friendly to the Chitrals.

Her majesty expresses her thanks to the house of commons for their provisions and services for the year, and concludes by saying that she has given her consent with pleasure to the measures for naval defenses, for lessening the agricultural taxes, for the protection of the cattle imports from disease and measures for various other purposes, including the Irish land bill.

In bidding farewell to the members of the house her majesty prays that they may receive the blessings of providence and rest from their labors.

POLITICAL MENTION.

It was announced Friday that one fare rate for the round trip has been secured for those who will attend the convention of the national democratic party in Indianapolis September 2. The sale of tickets at half rates will begin August 29, and end September 1. The tickets will be good for leaving Indianapolis as late as the midnight of September 17.

Robert P. Keating, for 16 years Nevada's representative on the national democratic committee, died at Virginia City from hemorrhage of the stomach. He was well known in national democratic circles.

After a deadlock of two days and one of the closest political contests of recent years, Judge John F. Rixey, of Culpepper, Va., was nominated as choice for congress of the democrats of the Eighth district of Virginia.

The deadlock in the Eleventh Michigan district republican convention was broken early Friday morning when W. T. Mesick, of Antrim, was nominated on the 363d ballot. Avery's strength was thrown to the successful candidate.

The Monticello club, the democratic club of New Haven, Ct., has closed its doors. It is said the club is in financial straits and that there is a conflict in the club's management between the gold and silver elements of the party. Judge Lynde Harrison is president of the club.

Alex Troup, editor of the New Haven Union, had a conference with Mr. Bryan in reference to a Bryan day at Hew Haven, Ct. Mr. Troup says that Mr. Bryan told him that the campaign managers insisted that he take a rest of ten days; that he go to sea on a yacht where no one could get at him and where absolute rest could be certain.

A call has been issued by Dr. R. A. Mosely, of Birmingham, Ala., state chairman of the Reed faction of the Alabama republicans, for a state convention of his faction of the republican party, to be held in Montgomery, September 5, for the purpose of nominating a republican electoral ticket in opposition to the ticket nominated by the McKinley faction of the party.

The democratic congressional convention at Salem, Mo., nominated Hon. Edward Robb, of Perry county, as candidate for congress in the Thirteenth district.

The Bourbon News, democratic, of Paris, Ky., Friday bolted the nominees and platform of the Chicago democratic convention.

It is not at all unlikely that a combination ticket will be put in the field by the republicans, national democrats and populists in some of the southern states. The executive committee of the national democracy is in receipt of propositions looking to this.

The Lynching of Those Italians.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The state department has not received from the governor of Louisiana his report on the Italian lynching nor is it expected for some days. It appears, however, that the Italian government is so far aroused that Baron Fava has had to terminate his vacation and is now on his way from Bar Harbor to Washington in order to see the report as early as possible and commence negotiations to secure redress.

Skirmishes Between Soldiers and Indians.

NOGALES, Ariz., Aug. 15.—Ranchers returning to this city report that several predatory bands of Indians are securing the range country and stampeding cattle. There have been many minor skirmishes between Mexican soldiers and Yaquis, but no fatalities are reported.

National Democratic Headquarters.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Gov. Stone, member of the national committee from Missouri, is of the opinion that the democratic campaign headquarters will be in Chicago, with branches in New York and Washington.

DR. NANSEN'S STORY.

His Terrible Experiences in the Ice Floes of the Arctic Regions.

His Vessel Frozen in Thirty Feet of Ice and Subject to Terrible Pressure—He Leaves the Boat to Explore Regions Unknown—Loses His Bearings.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—The Chronicle, Saturday morning, publishes the story of Fritjof Nansen of his expedition to the Arctic sea. Dr. Nansen arrived at Vardo, Norway, Thursday, and says:

"The Fram left Jugor strait August 4, 1893. We had to force our way through much ice along the Siberian coast. We discovered an island in the Kara sea and a great number of islands along the coast of Cape Cheljuskin. In several places we found evidences of a glacial epoch, during which northern Siberia must have been covered by an island to a great extent.

"We passed the New Siberian islands September 22. We made fast to a floe in latitude 78 degrees 50 minutes north, and in longitude 137 degrees 37 minutes east. We then allowed the ship to be closed in by the ice.

"As anticipated, we were gradually drifted north and northwestward during the autumn and winter from the constantly exposed and violent ice pressures, but she (the Fram) surpassed our expectations, being superior to any strain. During weeks the mercury was frozen. The lowest temperature was 62 degrees below zero. Every man on board was in perfect health during the whole voyage.

"We saw no land and no open water, except narrow cracks, in any direction. As anticipated, our drift northwestward was most rapid during the winter and spring, while the northerly winds stopped or drifted us backward during the summer. On June 18, 1894, we were 81 degrees 52 minutes north.

"On Christmas evening, 1894, latitude 83 degrees north was reached, and a few days later 83 degrees 24 minutes, the farthest north latitude previsously reached by man.

"On January 4 and 5 the Fram was exposed to the most violent ice pressure we experienced. She was then firmly frozen in ice of more than 30 feet of measured thickness. This floe was overridden by great ice masses, which were pressed against the port side with irresistible force and threatened to bury, if not to crush her. The necessary provisions with the canvas kayaks and other equipments, had been placed in safety upon the ice. Every man was ready to leave the ship if necessary, and was prepared to continue with the drift, living on the floe. But the Fram proved even stronger than our trust in her. When the pressure rose to the highest and the ice was piled up high above the bulwarks, she was broken loose and slowly lifted out of the bed in which she had been frozen, but not the slightest sign of a split was to be discovered anywhere in her. After that experience I considered the Fram almost equal to anything in the way of ice pressure. Afterward we experienced nothing of the kind, but our drift was rapidly continued north and northwestward.

"As I now with certainty anticipated that the Fram would soon reach her highest latitude north of Franz Josef Land, and that she would not easily fail to carry out the programme of the expedition, viz: to cross the unknown Polar basin, I decided to leave the ship in order to explore the sea north of her route. Lieut. Johnson volunteered to join me and I could not easily have found a better companion in every respect. The leadership of the expedition on board the Fram I left to Capt. Severdrup.

"On March 3 we reached 84 degrees 4 minutes north. Johnson and I left the Fram on March 14, 1895, at 83 degrees 59 minutes north and 102 degrees 27 minutes east. Our purpose was to explore the sea to the north and reach the highest latitude possible, and then to go to Spitzbergen, via Frans Josef Land, where we felt certain to find a ship. We had twenty-eight dogs, two sledges and two kayaks for possible open water. The dog food was calculated for 20 days, and our provisions for 100 days. We found the ice in the beginning tolerably good travelling, and so made good distances, and the ice did not appear drifting much. On March 22 we were at 85 degrees 10 minutes north. Although the dogs were less enduring than we hoped, still they were tolerably good. The ice now became rougher and the drift contrary. On March 25 we had only reached 85 degrees 19 minutes north, and on March 29, 85 degrees 30 minutes.

"On April 8 we began our march towards Franz Josef Land. On April 12 our watches ran down, owing to the unusual length of the day's march. After that date we were uncertain as to our longitude, but hoped that our dead reckoning was fairly correct. As we came south we met many cracks which greatly retarded our progress. The provisions were rapidly decreasing. The dogs were killed one after the other to feed the rest.

"On July 22 we continued our journey over tolerably good snow. On July 24, when about 82 degrees north, we sighted unknown land at last, but the ice was everywhere broken into small floes, the water between being filled with crushed ice, in which the use of the kayaks was impossible. We therefore had to make our way by balancing from one ice piece to another, and we did not reach land until August 6, at 81 degrees 38 minutes north, and about 63 east longitude.

"On August 28 we reached a spot in the 81:13 north and 56 east, evidently well suited to wintering, and it is now too late for the voyage to Spitzbergen, I considered it wisest to stop and prepare for winter. We shot bears and walruses and built a hut of stones, earth and moss, making the roof of walrus hide tied down with rope and covered with snow. We used the blubber for cooking, light and heat. The bear meat and the blubber were our only food for ten months. The bear skins formed our beds and sleeping bag. The winter, however, passed well and we were both in perfect health. Spring came with sunshine and with much open water to the southwest.

"We hoped to have an easy voyage to Spitzbergen over the floe of ice and the open water. We were obliged to manufacture new clothes from blankets and a new sleeping bag of bear skin. Our provisions were raw bear meat and blubber.

"On May 19 we were at last ready to start. We came to open water on May 23 in 81 degrees 5 minutes north latitude, but were retarded by storms until June 3. A little south of 81 degrees we found land extending westward and open water which reached west-northwest along its north coast. But we preferred to travel southward over the ice through a broad sound.

"We came on June 12 to the south side of the the island and found much open water trending westward. We sailed and paddled in this direction in order to proceed across to Spitzbergen from the most westward cape, but Payer's map was misleading."

Dr. Nansen then tells of his accidental meeting with Capt. Jackson, in command of the British north pole expedition on June 17 three miles out on a floe, S. S. E. of Cape Flora. Nansen remained at Jackson's quarters about six weeks till the steamer Windward arrived with supplies for the English expedition.

"We left Franz Josef Land in the steamer Windwar, on Aug. 7, and had a short and very pleasant passage, thanks to the masterly way in which Capt. Brown brought his ship through the ice, and thence in the open sea to Vardo."

Centenarian Club Funeral.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 17.—Jacob White, a member of Lexington's Centenarian club, was buried here Sunday afternoon by the Odd Fellows. The deceased was 90 years old, and for 60 years had been a member in good standing of the Friendship lodge, No. 5, I. O. O. F., of this city. The Centenarian club is composed of six remaining members, including Mrs. Graves, mother of Cashier James M. Graves, of the City national bank; Mrs. Robinson, Mr. Sutterwhite of this county, and three others. Mr. White was one of the youngest members of the club, the eldest being 94.

PITCHED BATTLE

Takes Place Between Strikers and Non-Union Men—Two Mortally and Two Seriously Wounded.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 15.—In a pitched battle Friday evening between striking employes of the Brown hoisting works and a party of nine workmen returning home, four men were shot—two fatally.

The fatally injured are: George Plumb, one of the Brown Co.'s workmen; George Larsen, a striker.

Those less seriously hurt are: Al Caldwell, an employe, shot in the right leg and shoulder; Hixley, striker, shot in the left shoulder.

Several bystanders were hit by the flying bullets, but their names have not been learned.

The outrage was one of the culminating features of the great strike inaugurated by the employes of the Brown Hoisting and Conveying Machine Co. June 25 last. Two lives had already been sacrificed in the trouble, and for weeks the works have been run under military and police protection, and the 300 non-union men escorted to their homes by armed officers to prevent murder. The striking workmen put up a big fight to beat the Brown company, but failed.

Friday night a party of ten strikers went to the corner of Wade Park and East Madison street, and laid in wait for the workmen who came by on their way home from the Brown works. There were nine men in the little group of workmen with their dinner pails. Without a moment's warning the strikers rushed from behind a saloon, where they were in hiding, and, with a cry of "Scab," began shooting into the crowd. A few of the workmen were armed and returned the fire.

The battle lasted about three minutes, in which about thirty shots were fired, when the strikers fled. When the police arrived, in response to a riot call, several arrests were made among the strikers.

Ever since the trouble began the strikers and their sympathizers have carried on a guerrilla warfare against the men who took their places. They have assaulted them, stoned their houses and boycotted them at the stores.

About a week ago the five companies of militia were withdrawn from the Brown works and the police protection taken away. The strikers applied for court injunction and were refused and since then have become doubly revengeful.

ARTHUR GARDINER

Breaks the World's Record for One Mile—Time 2:01.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 15.—The races of the National L. A. W. meet Friday in the finishes and the time bordered on the sensational. One of the most important world's records, the one mile competition, was broken. The one mile national championship was decided so far as the present progress of the circuit is concerned. It was won by Tom Cooper.

Arthur Gardiner did the record-breaking in the mile open, paced by John S. Johnson and J. W. Parsons, the Australian champion, with 13 starters in the race. Gardiner rode the mile in 2:01, beating the record of 2:01 4-5, established by Bald just a week ago at Buffalo. He won by a phenomenal sprint in the stretch, which he entered ten lengths behind Sanger, who led the field. Chairman Gideon stated afterward that it was the most rapid burst of speed that he had ever seen or heard of. Cooper was not entered in this race.

In the mile national championship, Cooper, who won, had the closest call of the year. He beat Owen Kimble across the tape only half the diameter of his front wheel. Bald was third, a length behind Kimble, the others being bunched behind. The first serious accident of the meet occurred in the five mile state championship. J. C. Mitchell's chain broke and he fell. Karl Thome, the Kentucky one mile champion, fell over him and landed three others on Mitchell before he could rise. The latter's collar bone was fractured in two places.

VENEZUELA DISPUTE.

An Agreement on the Question of Arbitration May Be Reached Before Next December.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The dispatch of Secretary Olney to Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador, referred to in the house of commons debate Friday, was considered by many the most important document in the arbitration correspondence between this country and Great Britain.

The dispatch was devoted to a discussion of proposals submitted by Lord Salisbury for the settlement of the Venezuelan boundary dispute, and concluded with counter proposals which Mr. Balfour said Friday were regarded by the foreign office as opening the way for an equitable settlement of the difficulty.

State department officials are highly gratified with the tone of Mr. Balfour's reply to Sir Wm. Harcourt's query about the effect on the government of the dispatch, and while in the absence of Secretary Olney, who has been exclusively in charge of the negotiations, nothing definite can be learned of the succeeding correspondence, if any, that has passed, confidence is expressed that an agreement will be reached before next December for an exhaustive arbitration of the Venezuelan-Guianan boundary controversy.

The object of the company is to extend North American trade into Central and South American countries.

BRYAN ACCEPTS.

The Democratic Candidates Are Officially Notified of Their Nomination.

Enthusiastic Greeting Is Tendered the Chosen Standard-Bearers of Democracy.

Bryan and Sewall Both Accept the Honor and Pledge Fidelity to the Cause.

The Nebraskan's Answer to Arguments Against Free Coinage—An Appeal to Eastern Voters.

New York, Aug. 13.—At Madison Square Garden Wednesday night Hon. William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and Hon. Arthur Sewall, of Maine, were formally notified of their nomination as candidates for president and vice president of the United States, respectively, by the democratic national convention at its recent session in Chicago.

The doors were opened at seven o'clock and the great crowd which blockaded the streets made a desperate rush to gain entrance. During the turmoil several women fainted. At last by a vigorous use of clubs the police were able to secure a semblance of order. From floor to roof the garden was soon crowded with human beings. The heat was intense. When Mrs. Bryan entered, a few minutes before her husband came, a scene of enthusiasm followed which was not ended until the lady arose from her seat and acknowledged the ovation extended her.

Ovation to the Candidate.

When Mr. Bryan stepped on the stand and was recognized by many in the audience, a great cheer went up. "Bryan, Bryan, Bryan" was the shout of those who knew him, and, as others in the crowd realized that the hero of the evening had come, the cheering became louder and threatened not to stop. But it did stop at last, and those who timed it said that the ovation had lasted six minutes. It was the first tribute of the enthusiastic. The crowd was reserving itself for the event of the evening.

Notified by Gov. Stone.

Senator Jones introduced Elliott Danforth as chairman of the meeting, and he in turn presented Gov. Stone, of Missouri, who made the formal speeches of notification.

After Gov. Stone had spoken at considerable length, he presented to Mr. Bryan an engrossed copy of the resolution of notification adopted by the notification committee. Referring to the circumstance attending the nomination, the resolution stated that the nominee was selected as the party leader because of his integrity, patriotism and ability, and that his election means the maintenance of an honest government administered for the benefit of all, and controlled only by intelligence conscientiously directed.

Great Demonstration.

When Gov. Stone concluded with the notification of his nomination to Mr. Bryan, a man began to wave a big American flag over the latter's head. The crowd went wild with enthusiasm and rose as a man when Chairman Danforth stepped forward and introduced Mr. Bryan. Then came a demonstration that far exceeded those that had followed the mention of Mr. Bryan's name previously in the evening.

Bryan Reads His Speech.

Mr. Bryan rose and stepped to the front and center of the speaker's platform. In his hand he had a manuscript copy of his speech. His face was pale, but he was cool and calm. His voice was firm, but showed signs of hoarseness.

MR. BRYAN'S SPEECH.

Following are the most telling points in Mr. Bryan's speech:

Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen of the Committee and Fellow Citizens: I shall at a future day and in a formal letter accept the nomination which is now tendered by the notification committee, and I shall at that time touch upon the issues presented by the platform. It is fitting, however, that at this time, in the presence of those here assembled, I speak at some length in regard to the campaign upon which we are now entering. We do not underestimate the forces arrayed against us, nor are we unmindful of the importance of the struggle in which we are engaged; but, relying for success upon the righteousness of our cause, we shall defend with all possible vigor the positions taken by our party. We are not surprised that some of our opponents, in the absence of better argument, resort to abusive epithets, but they may rest assured that no language, however violent, no invectives, however vehement, will lead us to depart a single hair's breadth from the course marked out by the national convention. The citizen, either public or private, who assails the character and questions the patriotism of the delegates assembled in the Chicago convention assails the character and questions the patriotism of the millions who have arrayed themselves under the banner there raised.

Platform Not a Menace.

It has been charged by men standing high in business and political circles that our platform is a menace to private security and public safety; and it has been asserted that those whom I have the honor, for the time being, to represent, not only meditate an attack upon the rights of property, but are the foes both of social order and national honor.

Those who stand upon the Chicago platform are prepared to make known and to defend every motive which influences them, every purpose which animates them and every hope which inspires them. They understand the genius of our institutions, they are staunch supporters of the form of government under which we live and they build their faith upon foundations laid by the fathers. Andrew Jackson has stated, with admirable clearness and with an emphasis which cannot be surpassed, both the duty and sphere of government. He said:

"Distinctions in society will always exist under every just government. Equality of talents, of education or of wealth cannot be produced by human institutions. In the full enjoyment of the gifts of Heaven and the fruits of superior industry, economy and virtue, every man is equally entitled to protection by law."

Equality Must Prevail.

We yield to none in our devotion to the doctrine just enunciated. Our campaign has not for its object the reconstruction of society. We cannot insure to the vicious the fruits of a virtuous life. We would not invade the home of the provident in order to supply the wants of the spendthrift; we do not propose to transfer the rewards of industry to the lap of indolence. Property is and will remain the stimulus to endeavor and the compensation for toil. We believe, as asserted in the declaration of independence, that all men are created equal; but that does not mean that all men are or can be equal in possessions, in ability or merit; it simply means officials shall not, in making, constructing or enforcing the law, discriminate between citizens.

Safe in the People's Hands.

I assert that property rights, as well as the rights of persons, are safe in the hands of the common people. Abraham Lincoln, in his message sent to congress in December, 1861, said: "No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up from poverty; none less inclined to take or touch aught which they have not honestly earned." I repeat his language with unqualified approval, and join with him in the warning which he added, namely: "Let them beware of surrendering a political power which they already possess, and which power, if surrendered, will surely be used to close the doors of advancement against such as they, and to fix new disabilities and burdens upon them, till all of liberty shall be lost." Those who daily follow the injunction: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," are now, as they have ever been, the bulwark of law and order—the source of our nation's greatness in time of peace, and its surest defenders in time of war.

But I have only read a part of Jackson's utterance—let me give you his conclusion: "But when the laws undertake to add to those natural and just advantages artificial distinctions—to grant titles, gratuities and exclusive privileges—to make the rich richer and the potent more powerful—the humble members of society—the farmers, mechanics and the day laborers—who have neither the time nor the means of securing like favors for themselves, have a right to complain of the injustice of their government." Those who support the Chicago platform indorses all the quotation from Jackson—the latter part as well as the former part.

Character of the Opposition.

We are not surprised, said Mr. Bryan, to find arrayed against us those who are the beneficiaries of government favoritism—they have read our platform—nor to learn that we must in this campaign face the hostility of those who find a pecuniary advantage in advocating the doctrine of non-interference when great aggregations of wealth are trespassing upon the rights of individuals. Such opposition is the highest indorsement which could be bestowed upon us.

We are content, he said, to have the cooperation of those who desire to have the government administered without fear or favor. It is not the wish of the general public that trusts should spring into existence and override the weaker members of society; it is not the wish of the general public that these trusts should destroy competition and then collect such tax as they will from those who are at their mercy; nor is it the fault of the general public that the instrumentalities of government have been so often prostituted to purposes of private gain. Those who stand upon the Chicago platform believe that the government should not only avoid wrong-doing, but that it should also prevent wrong-doing; and they believe that the law should be enforced alike against all enemies of the public weal.

Not a Disloyal Pledge.

The Chicago platform has been condemned by some because it dissents from an opinion rendered by the supreme court declaring the income tax law unconstitutional. Our critics even go so far as to apply the name anarchist to those who stand upon that plank of the platform. It must be remembered that we expressly recognize the binding force of the decision so long as it stands as a part of the law of the land. There is in the platform no suggestion of an attempt to dispute the authority of the supreme court. The party is simply pledged to "use all the constitutional power which remains after that decision, or which may come from its reversal by the court, as it may hereafter be constituted." Is there any disloyalty in that pledge?

Has No Apology to Offer.

When courts allow rehearings, he said, they admit that error is possible; the late decision against the income tax was rendered by a majority of one after a rehearing. While the money question overshadows all other questions in importance, I desire it distinctly understood, continued Mr. Bryan, that I shall offer no apology for the income tax plank of the Chicago platform. The last income tax sought to apportion the burdens of government more equitably among those who enjoy the protection of the government. At present the expenses of the federal government, collected through internal revenue taxes and import duties, are especially burdensome upon the poorer classes of society. A law which collects from some citizens more than their share of the taxes and collects from other citizens less than their share is simply an indirect means of transferring one man's property to another man's pocket, and while the process my be quite satisfactory to the men who escape just taxation, it can never be satisfactory to those who are overburdened. Not only shall I refuse to apologize for the advocacy of an income tax law by the national convention, but I shall also refuse to apologize for the exercise by it of the right to dissent from a decision of the supreme court. In a government like ours, every public official is a public servant, and the people have a right to criticise his official acts. No public official who conscientiously discharges his duty will desire to deny to those he serves the right to discuss his official conduct.

All Favor Bimetallism.

Then, entering upon what he declared the paramount question of the campaign—the money question—Mr. Bryan said: It is scarcely necessary to defend the principle of bimetallism. No national party during the entire history of the United States has ever declared against it, and no party in this campaign has had the temerity to oppose it. Three parties—the democratic, populist and silver parties—have not only declared for bimetallism, but have outlined the specific legislation necessary to restore silver to its ancient position by the side of gold. The republican platform expressly declares that bimetallism is desirable when it pledges the republican party to aid in securing it as soon as the assistance of certain foreign nations can be obtained. Those who represented the minority sentiment in the Chicago convention opposed the free coinage of silver by the United States by independent action, on the ground that in their judgment it would retard or entirely prevent the establishment of international bimetallism, to which the efforts of the government should be steadily directed. When they asserted that the efforts should be steadily directed toward the establishment of international bimetallism, they condemned monometallism.

Found Wanting.

The gold standard has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Take from it the powerful support of the money-owning and the money-changing classes and it cannot stand for one day in any nation in the world. It was fastened upon the United States without discussion before the people, and its friends have never yet been willing to risk a verdict before the voters upon that issue. There can be no sympathy or no cooperation between the advocates of a universal gold standard and the advocates of bimetallism. Between bimetallism—whether independent or international—and the gold standard there is an impassable gulf.

Are They Sincere?

Is this quadriennial agitation in favor of international bimetallism conducted in good faith, or do our opponents really desire to maintain the gold standard permanently? Are they willing to confess the superiority of a double standard when joined in by the leading nations of the world, or do they still insist that gold is the only metal suitable for standard money among civilized nations? If they are, in fact, desirous of securing bimetallism, we may expect them to point out the evils of a gold standard and defend bimetallism as a system. If, on the other hand, they are bending their energies toward the permanent establishment of a gold standard under cover of a declaration in favor of international bimetallism, I am justified in suggesting that honest money cannot be expected at the hands of those who deal dishonestly with the American people.

Test of Honesty in Money.

The test of honesty in money, he said, must be plainly found in the purchasing power of the dollar. An absolutely honest dollar would not vary in its general purchasing power; it would be absolutely stable when measured by average prices. A dollar which increases in purchasing power is just as dishonest as a dollar which decreases in purchasing power. It cannot be successfully claimed that monometallism or bimetallism, or any other system, gives an absolutely just standard of value. Under both monometallism and bimetallism the government fixes the weight and fineness of the dollar, invests it with legal tender qualities, and then opens the mints to its unrestricted coinage, leaving the purchasing power of the dollar to be determined by the number of dollars. Bimetallism is better than monometallism, not because it gives us a perfect dollar—that is, a dollar absolutely unvarying in its general purchasing power—but because it makes a nearer approach to stability, to honesty, to justice, than a gold standard possibly can. Prior to 1873, when there were enough open mints to permit all the gold and silver available for coinage to find entrance into the world's volume of standard money, the United States might have maintained a gold standard with less injury to the people of this country, but now, when each step toward a universal gold standard enhances the purchasing power of gold, depresses prices and transfers to the pockets of the creditor class an unearned increment, the influence of this great nation must be thrown upon the side of gold unless we are prepared to accept the natural and legitimate consequences of such an act. Any legislation which lessens the world's stock of standard money increases the exchangeable value of the dollar; therefore, the crusade against silver must inevitably raise the purchasing power of money and lower the money value of all other forms of property.

Our opponents sometimes admit that it was a mistake to demonetize silver, but insist that we should submit to present conditions rather than return to the bimetallic system. They err in supposing that we have reached the end of the evil results of a gold standard; we have not reached the end. The injury is a continuing one and no person can say how long the world is to suffer from the attempt to make gold the only standard money. The same influences which are now operating to destroy silver in the United States will, if successful here, be turned against other silver using countries, and each new convert to the gold standard will add to the general distress. So long as the scramble for gold continues, prices must fall, and a general fall in prices is but another definition of hard times.

Our opponents, while claiming entire disinterestedness for themselves, have appealed to the selfishness of nearly every class of society. Recognizing the disposition of the individual voters to consider the effect of any proposed legislation upon himself, we present to the American people the financial policy outlined in the Chicago platform, believing that it will result in the greatest good to the greatest number.

Why Farmers Oppose Gold Standard.

The farmers are opposed to the gold standard because they have felt its effects. Since they sell at wholesale and buy at retail, they have lost more than they have gained by falling prices, and, besides this, they have found that certain fixed charges have not fallen at all. Taxes have not been perceptibly decreased, although it requires more of farm products now than formerly to secure the money with which to pay taxes. Debts have not fallen. The farmer who owed $1,000 is still compelled to pay $1,000, although it may be twice as difficult as formerly to obtain the dollars with which to pay the debt. Railroad rates have not been reduced to keep pace with falling prices, and, besides these items, there are many more. The farmer has thus found it more and more difficult to live. Has he not a just complaint against the gold standard?

Bad for the Wage-Earner.

The wage-earners have been injured by a gold standard and have expressed themselves upon the subject with great emphasis. In February, 1895, a petition asking for the immediate restoration of the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at sixteen to one was signed by the representatives of all, or nearly all, of the leading labor organizations and presented to congress. Wage-earners know that while a gold standard raised the purchasing power of the dollar, it also makes it more difficult to obtain possession of the dollar; they know that employment is less permanent, loss of work more probable and reemployment less certain.

A gold standard encourages the hoarding of money because money is rising; it also discourages enterprise and paralyzes industry. On the other hand, the restoration of bimetallism will discourage hoarding, because, when prices are steady or rising, money cannot afford to lie idle in the bank vaults. The farmers and wage-earners together constitute a considerable majority of the people of the country. Why should their interests be ignored in considering financial legislation? A monetary system which is peculiarly advantageous to a few syndicates has far less to commend it than a system which would give hope and encouragement to those who create the nation's wealth.

Ruinous to Merchants and Manufacturers.

Mr. Bryan said it was only necessary to note the increasing number of failures in order to show that a gold standard is ruinous to merchants and manufacturers. Salaries in business occupations, he said, depend upon business conditions and the gold standard both lessens the amount and threatens a permanency of such salaries

Dangerous for Others.

Our opponents have made a special appeal to those who hold fire and life insurance policies, but these policy holders know that, since the total premiums received exceed the total losses paid, a rising standard must be of more benefit to the companies than to the policy holders.

Much solicitude has been expressed by our opponents for the depositors in savings banks. They constantly parade before these depositors the advantages of a gold standard, but these appeals will be in vain, because savings bank depositors know that under a gold standard there is increasing danger that they will lose their deposits because of the inability of the banks to collect their assets; and they still further know that, if the gold standard is to continue indefinitely, they may be compelled to withdraw their deposits in order to pay living expenses.

Those who hold, as a permanent investment, the stock of railroads or other enterprises—I do not include those who speculate in stocks or use stock holdings as a means of obtaining an inside advantage in construction contracts—are injured by a gold standard. The rising dollar destroys the earning power of these enterprises without reducing their liabilities, and, as dividends cannot be paid until salaries and fixed charges have been satisfied, the stockholders must bear the burden of hard times.

The professional classes—in the main—receive their support from the producing classes, and can only enjoy prosperity when there is prosperity among those who create wealth.

Mr. Bryan said that the assertion of the opposition that a bank belongs to the debtor class is not true of any solvent bank. Every statement published by a solvent bank shows that the assets exceed the liabilities, and, he continued, when a dollar is rising in value slowly a bank may, by making short-time loans and taking good security, avoid loss; but, when prices are falling rapidly, the bank is apt to lose more because of bad debts than it can gain by the increase in the purchasing power of its capital and surplus.

Beneficiaries of a Gold Standard.

Passing briefly over this point, Mr. Bryan said: Let me say a word now in regard to certain persons who are peculiarly benefited by a gold standard and who favor it, not from a desire to trespass upon the rights of others, but because the circumstances which surround them blind them to the effect of the gold standard upon others. I shall ask you to consider the language of two gentlemen whose long public service and high standing in the party to which they belong will protect them from adverse criticism by our opponents. In 1869 Senator Sherman said:

It must be admitted, however, that some bankers combine the business of a bond broker with the ordinary banking business and these may make enough in the negotiation of loans to offset the losses arising in legitimate banking business. As long as human nature remains as it is, there will always be danger that, unless restrained by the public opinion or legal enactment, those who see a pecuniary profit for themselves in a certain condition may yield to the temptation to bring about that condition. Jefferson has stated that one of the main duties of government is to prevent men from injuring one another, and never was that duty more important than it is to-day. It is not strange that those who have made a profit by furnishing gold to the government in the hour of its extremity favor a financial policy which will keep the government dependent upon them. I believe, however, that I speak the sentiment of the vast majority of the people of the United States when I say that a wise financial policy administered in behalf of all the people would make our government independent of any combination of financiers, foreign or domestic.

What Sherman Said.

"The contraction of the currency is a far more distressing operation than senators suppose. Our own and other nations have gone through that operation before. It is not possible to take that voyage without the sorest distress. To every person, except a capitalist out of debt, or a salaried officer or annuitant, it is a period of loss, danger, lassitude of trade, fall of wages, suspension of enterprise, bankruptcy and disaster. It means ruin to all dealers whose debts are twice their business capital, though one-third less than their actual property. It means the fall of all agricultural production without any great reduction of taxes. What prudent man would care to build a house, a railroad, a factory or a barn with this certain fact before him?"

Mr. Bryan continued: As I have said before, the salaried officer referred to must be the man whose salary is fixed for life, and not the man whose salary depends upon business conditions. When Mr. Sherman describes contraction of the currency as disastrous to all the people except the capitalist out of debt and those who stand in a position similar to his, he is stating a truth which must be apparent to every person who will give the matter careful consideration. Mr. Sherman was at that time speaking of the contraction of the volume of paper currency, but the principle which he set forth applies, if there is a contraction of the volume of standard money of the world.

Blaine's View.

Mr. Blaine discussed the same principle in connection with the demonetization of silver. Speaking in the house of representatives on the 7th of February, 1878, he said: "I believe the struggle now going on in this country and other countries for a single gold standard would, if successful, produce widespread disaster in and throughout the commercial world. The destruction of silver as money, and the establishing of gold as the sole unit of value must have a ruinous effect on all forms of property, except those invested which yield a fixed return in money. These would be enormously enhanced in value and would gain a disproportionate and unfair advantage over every other species of property."

Is it strange that the "holders of investments which yield a fixed return in money" can regard the destruction of silver with complacency? May we not expect the holders of other forms of property to protest against giving to money a "disproportionate and unfair advantage over every other species of property?" If the relatively few whose wealth consists largely in fixed investments have a right to use the ballot to enhance the value of their investments, have not the rest of the people the right to use the ballot to protect themselves from the disastrous consequences of a rising standard?

Dollars That Grow Not Wanted.

What shall it profit us to have a dollar which grows more valuable every day, if such a dollar lowers the standard of civilization and brings distress to the people? What shall it profit us if, in trying to raise our credit by increasing the purchasing power of one dollar, we destroy our ability to pay the debts already contracted by lowering the purchasing power of the products with which these debts must be paid?

Will No Longer Be Borrowers.

If it is asserted, as it constantly is asserted, that the gold standard will enable us to borrow more money from abroad, I reply that the restoration of bimetallism will restore the parity between money and property and thus permit an era of prosperity which will enable the American people to become loaners of money instead of perpetual borrowers.

What Free Coinage Means.

As against the maintenance of a gold standard, either permanently or until other nations can be united for its overthrow, the Chicago platform presents a clear and emphatic demand for the immediate restoration of the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the present legal ratio of sixteen to one, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation. We are not asking that a new experiment be tried; we are insisting upon a return to a financial policy approved by the experience of history and supported by all the prominent statesmen of our nation from the days of the first president down to 1873.

When we ask that our mints be opened to the free and unlimited coinage of silver into full legal tender money we are simply asking that the same mint privileges be accorded to silver that are now accorded to gold. When we ask that this coinage be at the ratio of sixteen to one we simply ask that our gold coins and the standard silver dollar—which, be it remembered, contains the same amount of pure silver as the first silver dollar coined at our mints—retain their present weight and fineness.

The theoretical advantage of the bimetallic system is best stated by a European writer on political economy, who suggests the following illustration: A river fed from two sources is more uniform in volume than a river fed from one source—the reason being that when one of the feeders is swollen the other may be low; whereas, a river which has but one feeder must rise or fall with that feeder. So, in the case of bimetallism, the volume of metallic money receives contributions from both the gold mines and the silver mines, and therefore varies less; and the dollar resting upon two metals is less changeable in its purchasing power than the dollar which rests on one metal only.

Actual Necessity for Bimetallism.

There is an actual necessity for bimetallism, said Mr. Bryan, as well as a theoretical defense of it. During the last 23 years legislation has been creating an additional demand for gold, and this law-created demand has resulted in increasing the purchasing power of each ounce of gold. The restoration of bimetallism in the United States will take away from gold just so much of its purchasing power as was added to it by the demonetization of silver by the United States. The silver dollar's now held up to the gold dollar by legal-tender laws and not by redemption in gold, because the standard silver dollars are not now redeemable in gold either in law or by administrative policy. We contend that free and unlimited coinage by the United States alone will raise the bullion value of silver to its coinage value, and thus make silver bullion worth $1.29 per ounce in gold throughout the world.

International Bimetallism.

Mr. Bryan devoted much attention to the subject of international bimetallism. International bimetallists, he said, believe that several nations by entering into an agreement to coin at a fixed ratio all the gold and silver presented, can maintain the bullion value of the metals at the mint ratio. When a mint price is thus established it regulates the bullion price, because any person desiring coin may have the bullion converted into coin at that price, and any person desiring bullion can secure it by melting the coin. The only question upon which international bimetallists and independent bimetallists differ is: Can the United States by the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the present legal ratio create a demand for silver which, taken in connection with the demand already in existence, will be sufficient to utilize all the silver that will be presented at the mints? They agree in their defense of the metallic principle and they agree in unalterable opposition to the gold standard. International bimetallists cannot complain that free coinage gives a benefit to the mine owner, because international bimetallism gives to the owner of silver all the advantages offered by independent bimetallism at the same ratio. International bimetallists cannot accuse the advocates of free silver of being "bullion owners who desire to raise the value of their bullion;" or debtors who desire to pay their debts in cheap dollars;" or demagogues who desire to curry favor with the people. They must rest their opposition upon one ground only, namely: That the supply of silver available for coinage is too large to be utilized by the United States.

In discussing this question we must consider the capacity of our people to use silver and the quantity of silver which can come to our mints. It must be remembered that we live in a country only partially developed, and that our people far surpass any equal number of people in the world in their power to consume and produce. Our extensive railroad development and enormous internal commerce must be taken into consideration. Now, how much silver can come here? Not the coined silver of the world, because almost all of it is more valuable at this time in other lands than it will be at our mints under free coinage. If our mints are opened to free and unlimited coinage at the present ratio, merchandise silver cannot come here, because the labor applied to it is worth more in the form of merchandise than it will be worth at our mints. We cannot expect any of the annual product of silver, because India, China, Japan, Mexico and all other silver-using countries must satisfy their annual needs from the annual product; the arts will require a large amount, and the gold-standard countries will need a considerable quantity for subsidiary coinage. We will be required to coin only that which is not needed elsewhere; but if we stand ready to take and utilize all of it, other nations will be compelled to buy at the price which we fix. Many fear that the opening of our mints will be followed by an enormous increase in the annual production of silver. This is conjecture. Silver has been used as money for thousands of years, and during all of that time the world has never suffered from an over-production.

Coinage Requirements Under Silver.

We will be required to coin only that which is not needed elsewhere; but if we stand ready to take and utilize all of it, other nations will be compelled to buy at the price which we fix. Many fear that the opening of our mints will be followed by an enormous increase in the annual production of silver. This is conjecture. Silver has been used as money for thousands of years, and during all of that time the world has never suffered from any overproduction. If, for any reason, the supply of gold or silver in the future ever exceeds the requirements of the arts and the need of commerce we confidently hope that the intelligence of the people will be sufficient to devise and enact any legislation necessary for the protection of the public.

It is folly to refuse to the people the money which they now need for fear they may hereafter have more than they need. I am firmly convinced that by opening our mints to free and unlimited coinage at the present ratio we can create a demand for silver which will keep the price of silver bullion at $1.29 per ounce, measured by gold.

Some of our opponents attribute the fall in the value of silver when measured by gold to the fact that during the last quarter of a century the world's supply of silver has increased more rapidly than the world's supply of gold. This argument is entirely answered by the fact that during the last five years the annual production of gold has increased more rapidly than the annual production of silver.

Our opponents cannot ignore the fact that gold is now going abroad in spite of all legislation intended to prevent it, and no silver is being coined to take its place. Not only is gold going abroad now, but it must continue to go abroad as long as the present financial policy is adhered to, unless we continue to borrow from across the ocean, and even then we simply postpone the evil, because the amount borrowed, together with the interest upon it, must be repaid in appreciated dollars.

Not Advocating Fifty-Cent Dollars.

Following in an earnest argument favoring the restoration of bimetallism, Mr. Bryan said: Perhaps the most persistent misrepresentation that we have to meet is the charge that we are advocating the payment of debts in 50-cent dollars. At the present time and under present laws a silver dollar, when melted, loses nearly half its value, but that will not be true when we again establish a mint price for silver and leave no surplus silver upon the market to drag down the price of bullion. Under bimetallism silver bullion will be worth as much as silver coin, just as gold bullion is now worth as much as gold coin, and we believe that a silver dollar will be worth as much as a gold dollar.

Those who deny the ability of the United States to maintain the parity between gold and silver at the present legal ratio without foreign aid, point to Mexico, and assert that the opening of our mints will reduce us to a silver basis and raise gold to a premium. It is no reflection upon our sister republic to remind our people that the United States is much greater than Mexico in area, in population and in commercial strength. It is absurd to assert that the United States is not able to do anything which Mexico has failed to accomplish.

The one thing necessary in order to maintain the parity is to furnish a demand great enough to utilize all the silver which will come to the mints. That Mexico failed to do this is not proof that the United States would also fail. In response to the argument that improved machinery has lessened the cost of producing silver, Mr. Bryan said it sufficed to say that the same is true of the production of gold, and notwithstanding that gold has risen in value.

Arguments Against Silver Answered.

He replied in detail to numerous arguments against silver. If it is asserted, he said, that the free coinage of silver is intended only for the benefit of the mine owners, it must be remembered that free coinage cannot restore to the mine owners any more than demonetization took away; and it must also be remembered that the loss which the demonetization of silver has brought to the mine owners is insignificant compared to the loss which this policy has brought to the rest of the people. The restoration of silver will bring to the people generally many times as much advantage as the mine owners can obtain from it. While it is not the purpose of free coinage to specially aid any particular class, yet those who believe that the restoration of silver is needed by the whole people should not be deterred because an incidental benefit will come to the mine owner. The erection of forts, the deepening of harbors, the improvement of rivers, the erection of public buildings—all these confer incidental benefits upon individuals and communities, and yet these incidental benefits do not deter us from making appropriations for these purposes whenever such appropriations are necessary for the public good.

Debtor Should Have the Option.

If there are two kinds of money the option must rest either with the debtor or with the creditor. Assuming that their rights are equal, we must look at the interests of society in general in order to determine to which side the option should be given. Under the bimetallic system gold and silver are linked together by law at a fixed ratio, and any person or persons owning any quantity of either metal can have the same converted into full legal tender. If the creditor has the right to choose the metal in which payment shall be made, it is reasonable to suppose that he will require the debtor to pay in the dearer metal if there is any perceptible difference between the bullion values of the metals. This new demand created for the dearer metal will make that metal dearer still, while the decreased demand for the cheaper metal will make that metal cheaper still.

If, on the other hand, the debtor exercises the option, it is reasonable to suppose that he will pay in the cheaper metal if one may be perceptibly cheaper than the other, but the demand thus created for the cheaper metal will raise its price, while the lessened demand for the dearer metal will lower its price.

In other words, when the creditor has the option, the metals are drawn apart; whereas, when the debtor has the option, the metals are held together approximately at the ratio fixed by law; provided the demand created is sufficient to absorb all of both metals presented at the mint. Society is, therefore, interested in having the option exercised by the debtor.

The right of the debtor to choose the coin in which payment shall be made extends to obligations due from the government as well as to contracts between individuals. A government obligation is simply a debt due from all the people to one of the people, and it is impossible to justify a policy which makes the interests of the one person who holds the obligation superior to the rights of the many who must be taxed to pay it. When, prior to 1873, silver was at a premium, it was never contended that national honor required the payment of government obligations in silver, and the Matthews' resolution, adopted by congress in 1878, expressly asserted the right of the United States to redeem coin obligations in standard silver dollars as well as in gold coin. Upon this subject the Chicago platform reads: "We are opposed to the policy and practice of surrendering to the holders of the obligations of the United States the option reserved by law to the government of redeeming such obligations in either silver coin or gold coin."

Cause of the Drain on the Reserve.

It is constantly assumed by some that the United States notes, commonly called greenbacks, and the treasury notes issued under the act of 1890, are responsible for the recent drain upon the gold reserve, but this assumption is entirely without foundation. In support of this assertion Mr. Bryan quoted from testimony of Secretary Carlisle before the committee on appropriations, January 21, 1895, in which the secretary said if the policy of reserving to the government at the beginning of resumption the option of redeeming in gold or silver all its paper presented had been adopted he thought it would have worked beneficially. But the secretaries of the treasury, from the beginning of resumption, had pursued a policy of redeeming in gold or silver, at the option of the holder of the paper, and if any secretary had afterward attempted to change the policy and force silver upon a man who wanted gold and gold upon a man who wanted silver his judgment was that it would have been very disastrous.

This, Mr. Bryan argued, showed that the fault does not lie with the greenbacks and treasury notes, but rather with the executive officers who have seen fit to surrender a right which should have been exercised for the protection of the interests of the people. If the government should retire its paper and throw upon the banks the necessity of furnishing coin redemption the banks would exercise the right to furnish either gold or silver; in other words, they would exercise the option just as the government ought to exercise it now.

It may be further answered that our opponents have suggested no feasible plan for avoiding the dangers which they fear. The retirement of the greenbacks and treasury notes would not protect the treasury, because the same policy which now leads the secretary of the treasury to redeem all government paper in gold, when gold is demanded, will require the redemption of all silver dollars and silver certificates in gold if the greenbacks and treasury notes are withdrawn from circulation. More than this, if the government should retire its paper and throw upon the banks the necessity of furnishing coin redemption the banks would exercise the right to furnish either gold or silver. In other words they would exercise the option, just as the government ought to exercise it now. The government must either exercise the right to redeem its obligations in silver when silver is more convenient, or it must retire all the silver and silver certificates from circulation and leave nothing but gold as legal tender money. Are our opponents willing to outline a financial system which will carry out their policy to its legitimate conclusion, or will they continue to cloak their designs in ambiguous phrases?

The argument that a silver dollar is heavier than a gold dollar, and that, therefore, silver is less convenient to carry in large quantities, is, he said, completely answered by the silver certificate, which is as easily carried as the gold certificate, or any other kind of paper money. There was much elaboration and illustration in the points presented in this part of Mr. Bryan's speech.

When Gold Goes Abroad

In answer to the charge that gold will go abroad it must be remembered that no gold can leave this country until the owner of the gold receives something in return for it which he would rather have. In other words, when gold leaves the country, those who formerly owned it will be benefited. There is no process by which we can be compelled to part with our gold against our will, nor is there any process by which silver can be forced upon us without our consent. Exchanges are matters of agreement, and if silver comes to this country under free coinage it will be at the invitation of some one in this country who will give something in exchange for it.

We are told that a restoration of bimetallism would be a hardship upon those who have entered into contracts payable in gold coin, but this is a mistake. It will be easier to obtain the gold with which to meet a gold contract when most of the people can use silver than it is now, when everyone is trying to procure gold.

A New and Vital Issue.

There is another argument to which I ask your attention. Some of the more zealous opponents of free coinage point to the fact that certain months must elapse between the election and the first regular session of congress, and assert that during that time, in case people declare themselves in favor of free coinage, all loans will be withdrawn and all mortgages foreclosed. If these are merely prophecies indulged in by those who have forgotten the provisions of the constitution, it will be sufficient to remind them that the president is empowered to convene congress in extraordinary session whenever the public good requires such action. If in November the people by their ballots declare themselves in favor of the immediate restoration of bimetallism the system can be inaugurated within a few months.

If, however, the assertion that loans will be withdrawn and mortgages foreclosed is made to prevent such political action as the people may believe to be necessary for the preservation of their rights, then a new and vital issue is raised. Whenever it is necessary for the people as a whole to obtain consent from the owners of money and the changers of money before they can legislate upon financial questions, we shall have passed from a democracy to a plutocracy. But that time has not yet arrived. Threats and intimidation will be of no avail. The people who, in 1776, rejected the doctrine that kings rule by right divine will not, in this generation, subscribe to a doctrine that money is omnipotent.

Not Opposed to International Agreement.

Concluding with a reference to international bimetallism, Mr. Bryan said: We are not opposed to an international agreement looking to the restoration of bimetallism throughout the world. The advocates of free coinage have on all occasions shown their willingness to cooperate with other nations in the reinstatement of silver, but they are not willing to await the pleasure of other governments when immediate relief is needed by the people of the United States, and they further believe that independent action offers better assurance of international bimetallism than servile dependence upon foreign aid.

We shall not offend other nations when we declare the right of the American people to govern themselves, and, without let or hindrance from without, decide upon every question presented for their consideration. In taking this position, we simply maintain the dignity of 70,000,000 citizens who are second to none in their capacity for self-government.

The gold standard has compelled the American people to pay an ever increasing tribute to the creditor nations of the world—a tribute which no one dares to defend. I assert that national honor requires the United States to secure justice for all its citizens as well as do justice to all its creditors. For a people like ours, blest with natural resources of surpassing richness, to proclaim themselves impotent to frame a financial system suited to their own needs, is humiliating beyond the power of language to describe. We cannot inforce respect for our foreign policy so long as we confess ourselves unable to frame our own financial policy.

Appeal to Citizens.

Citizens of New York: I have traveled from the center of the continent to the seaboard that I might in the very beginning of the campaign bring you greeting from the people of the west and south and assure you that their desire is not to destroy, but to build up. They invite you to accept the principles of a living faith rather than listen to those who teach the gospel of despair and advise endurance of the ills you have. The advocates of free coinage believe that in striving to secure the immediate restoration of bimetallism they are laboring in your behalf as well as in their own behalf. A few of your people may prosper under present conditions, but the permanent welfare of New York rests upon the producers of wealth. This great city is built upon the commerce of the nation and must suffer if that commerce is impaired. You cannot sell unless the people have money with which to buy, and they cannot obtain the money with which to buy unless they are able to sell their products at remunerative prices. Production of wealth goes before the exchange of wealth; those who create must secure a profit before they have anything to share with others. You cannot afford to join the money changers in supporting a financial policy which, by destroying the purchasing power of the products of toil, must in the end discourage the creation of wealth.

I ask, I expect your cooperation. It is true that a few of your financiers would fashion a new figure—a figure representing Columbia, her hands bound fast with fetters of gold and her face turned toward the east, appealing for assistance to those who live beyond the sea—but this figure can never express your idea of this nation. You will rather turn for inspiration to the heroic statue which guards the entrance to your city—a statue as patriotic in conception as it is colossal in proportions; it was the gracious gift of a sister republic and stands upon a pedestal which was built by the American people. That figure—Liberty enlightening the world—is emblematic of the mission of our nation among other nations of the earth. With a government which derives its powers from the consent of the governed, secures to all the people freedom of conscience, freedom of thought and freedom of speech, guarantees equal rights to all, promises special privileges to none, the United States should be an example in all that is good and the leading spirit in every movement which has for its object the uplifting of the human race.

Sewall Notified.

Gov. Stone, at the conclusion, turned to Mr. Arthur Sewall, the vice presidential candidate, and in a few words formally notified him of his nomination. Mr. Sewall responded briefly, accepting the honor. At the conclusion of his remarks the meeting adjourned.

Mr. Sewall's Address.

Mr. Sewall, in his address replying to the notification of his nomination, referred to the Chicago convention as the most earnest in the history of the party, and closer and more in touch with the people. The demand for reform in our existing monetary system, he said, was the overshadowing issue before the country, made dominant by the distressed condition prevailing throughout the land. The democratic party, and, he believed the great majority of the American people, are convinced that the demonetization of silver was a wrong which should and must be righted. The single gold standard has so narrowed the base of our monetary structure that it is unstable, unsafe and is dwarfed in its power to furnish the necessary financial blood to the nation that commercial and industrial paralysis has followed. What we must have is the broad and expanding foundation of both gold and silver to support a monetary system capable of meeting the demands of a growing country, and an industrious, energetic and enterprising people, a system that will not be weakened and panic-stricken at every foreign draft upon us, a system that will maintain a parity of just values and protect us from the frequent fluctuations so disastrous to every business and industry. In free and unlimited coinage of silver and in bimetallism he saw the only remedy for existing evils. Return to silver its money function and it will appreciate and its purchasing power will increase. Take from gold its monopoly, its value will be reduced, and in due course the parity of the two metals will again obtain under natural causes. We will then have a broad and unlimited foundation for a monetary system commensurate with our country's needs and future development. To this reform the democratic party has given its pledge. Our opponents admit the wisdom of the principle but ask us to await the permission and cooperation of other nations. Our people will not wait, nor will they ask permission of any nation on earth to relieve themselves of the cause of their distress. In conclusion Mr. Sewall accepted the nomination as vice president.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Big Bone M. E. Church met at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Elstun, who entertained all who came under their roof in true Ky. style.

Despite the extreme heat, your humble q. p., who had been in training for the event in anticipation of what he knew was sure to come about noon, was early on the ground, where were found the friends and members of the society to the number of about 60. Bro. Elstun had swung some nice hammocks and made other preparations for the event, which added to the lucious fruit contributed much to the enjoyment of his guests. At the hour appointed the society was called to order by the president, Mrs. G. W Baker, and after a prayer, proceeded to transact the business of the society.

At noon the society adjourned, when baskets, which were laden with all manner of edibles calculated to satisfy the craving of the inner man, were brought forth and their contents spread before some of Big Bone's most noted eaters, prominent among whom were M. C. Carroll, Ed Williams, Dr. Smith and Wm. Rhodes. Ed had to be carried from the table, Rhodes and Carroll couldn't be moved and Smith, well he just went off and layed down "till it kinder wore off."

Dinner being over sometime was spent in pleasant conversation, some of the party going out on Bald Point and viewing some of its picturesque scenery. Later in the afternoon a prayer and song service, led by Dr. Smith, was held, after which we bade Mr. and Mrs. Elstun goodbye, all feeling the day to have been one of pleasure as well as profit, and hoping that we may meet at some not far distant date, to repeat the experiences we that day enjoyed.

THE gold Democrats are elated over the showing they made in the county conventions they held in this State last Saturday. They see that they can turn Kentucky over to the Republicans again this fall, unless the silver Democrats roll up their sleeves and prosecute one of the most vigorous campaigns ever conducted in Kentucky. Of course the prospect of being able to deliver Kentucky's electoral vote to Major McKinly this fall ought to make every Democrat's heart swell with pride.

ON an inside page is the great speech of W. J. Bryan, delivered in New York last week. It is worth reading several times.

Chairman of Committee.

Mr. Robt. Adams, of Sherman, Grant county, called in to see us, last Friday morning. He said he never saw such tremendous crops of tobacco and corn as are growing in his neighborhood, and that some of the farmers are predicting that corn will not be worth more than 75 cents a barrel this fall. On Wednesday night someone stole a cart and set of harness from Mr. Adams' barn, leaving in their stead a good riding bridle. The cart went toward the city, and Mr. Adams believes that the party who took it had stolen a horse.

[Rising Sun Local.]

Two valuable horses were stolen Wednesday night, one from Treasurer M. L. Harris and the other from Mr. Wm. Spaulding, who lives near North's Landing. The thief brought the horses here and shipped them to Cincinnati. Messrs. Chas. Stegemiller and John Scoopmire, who were passengers on the packet recognized Mr. Harris' horse and when they reached the city followed the fellow to the sales-stables of Frank Fox, where they tipped the thief off. Fox telegraphed Mr. Harris to know whether he had lost a horse. An answer was sent in the affirmative and a description given. Later word war received that the thief was under arrest. Mr. Harris and Wharfmaster Shafer started at once for Cincinnati to identify the thief and horse. Mr. Spaulding who had been looking for his horse came to Rising Sun and wired a description to Cincinnati. Both horses were brought back Thursday night by Mr. Shafer, Mr. Harris remaining awaiting the arrival of Sheriff Collins with a warrant for the thief, who gave his name as Tom Scott, of East Enterprise. Scott beat the Scranton House out of a dinner Wednesday. He registered there as M. Schuman, Burlington, Ky. He is either a novice at the business or else has an unlimited amount of nerve.

BRYAN IN THE EAST.

Crowds Swarm to Hear the Democratic Nominee at Pittsburgh.

Enthusiasm of the People Over the Presidential Candidate's Talk on the Money Question—A Strong Appeal to the People.

The wildest enthusiasm prevailed among the people of Pittsburgh upon the arrival of W. J. Bryan, the democratic nominee for president, on Monday, August 10. Mr. Bryan spoke twice within a few hours as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Ladies and Gentlemen: Fellow citizens, I thought it might be necessary in coming so far toward the east to bring a few of our people to keep up the enthusiasm, while I presented the truths set forth in the democratic platform. [Loud cheering.] But after I have seen a few audiences like this I wondered whether I might not take back a few of you to set an example of enthusiasm to the people of the west. [Laughter and cheering.] There is no more 'wild west.' It is 'wild east.' [Tremendous cheering and laughter and catcalls. A voice: 'You're a brick.' Cheers and renewed laughter.]

"I am not expected to enter into a discussion of the issues of the campaign, because it is not considerate to discuss the campaign—at least for a candidate to do so until he has been formally notified of the nomination. Therefore, I am going to leave those who come after me the discussion of such questions as may be pertinent at this time, and I shall simply thank you for the extraordinary and unexpected manifestation of interest.

In the Enemy's Country.

"When I left home I told them that I was coming upon a campaign in what was now considered the enemy's country, and which we hoped— [A voice, interrupting: 'Go east, young man, go east.' Laughter and cheering.]

"But which we hoped would be our country before the campaign closed. ['Right, right,' and applause.] Therefore, I have been more than gratified to find that it was not necessary to open the campaign in the east. It has already been opened there. [Cheers and laughter.] But I shall promise you this—that in the progress of this campaign not a single private in the ranks will stand nearer the enemy's guns than he in whose hands is the standard. [Cheers.] We are prepared to defend our platform. It presents, as we believe, those policies which are for the best interests of all the people, and we are not terrified because our enemies have sought to apply to us epithets and hard names when they find it impossible to oppose the positions which we have taken. [Applause.] They shall not be permitted to put us in the attitude of opponents to government, but we shall show that there is a difference between defending a government and defending the vicious legislation inaugurated by the government for private ends. [Tremendous cheering.]

Tribute to Andrew Jackson.

"Andrew Jackson, than whom there never was a truer, braver democrat, has expressed it well in these words: 'There are no necessary evils in government; its evils exist only in its abuse.' It is true, my friends, that what we attack is the abuse of the government, and not the government itself. ['That's right,' and cheering.] The worst enemy of this country is the man who seeks unjust legislation or defends unjust legislation after it has been obtained. He is the best friend of the government who in the first place seeks to prevent unjust legislation, and, if unjust legislation has been enacted, seeks to erase it from the statute book. Who is the best friend of government? Not the man who secures vicious legislation because of the pecuniary profit which it brings him, but the man who loves his government so well that he would make it so good that it would deserve the love of every citizen in it. [Applause.]

"My friends, in this campaign, there is only one great issue. If that is settled it will not give us a government perfect in all its details, but that one question must be settled first before other questions can be settled. A nation that is not able to adopt its own financial policy is too impotent to legislate on any question where the people are concerned. [Cheers.]

Opponents Not Insincere.

"We do not say that our opponents are insincere; we do not say that they are less honest than we, but we do say that when they attempt to say to the American people that we must be dependent upon the legislative act of some other government, we say it matters not how honest they may be, we dare not intrust legislation in their hands. [Loud cheering.]

"I have said that in this contest we have a repetition of the contest of 1776, and that in this campaign, as in that, a line will be drawn between the patriot and the tory. And when I say it, I do not say it, my friends, to criticise the man who believes that this nation is not great enough to legislate for its own people. He believes it honestly, and I recall your attention to the fact that in the struggle of our forefathers for liberty there were those who honestly believed that we ought to continue in this land the political supremacy of Great Britain. [Loud cheering.] In this they were but mistaken, and if you go to the cemeteries, you will find no monument reared by a grateful people to commemorate the names of those who thought English domination should continue. [Applause.] There are people to-day who believe that the nation is not strong enough to legislate for our people, and there are people who honestly believe that an attempt to do so would bring distress and many evils. We may respect their honesty, and must we enter into a life-and-death struggle with them because we assert here that the financial domination by a foreign power is as dangerous to the liberties of the people as political domination? [Cheers.]

"But I must not talk. [Cries of 'Go on.' 'Yes, you must.' 'Yes, yes, go on.'] I desire to thank you for the interest you have shown in the very beginning of this campaign. I have no fear that your interest will be allowed to die. Not a bit. I believe the toiling masses of this country—those who have achieved and who must achieve its greatness—are willing to risk their all in this republic, and rise and fall with it; and that to them we appeal in this campaign with a confident assurance that when the vote is counted an enormous majority of the American people will declare in favor of the American system of finances for the American people, administered by Americans." [Loud and continuous cheering.]

Bryan's Second Speech.

At the meeting in the Avenue theater Mr. Bryan was introduced to the audience by Joseph Holley, the chairman of the democratic county committee, as the next president of the United States. Mr. Bryan was received with great applause, and spoke as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen and Fellow-Citizens: I do not consider the enthusiasm which has been manifested all along the road has aught in it of personal nature. It simply proves that respect which people feel for those who stand in positions of authority, or stand before the people as candidates for those positions. We are a people who love government, who recognize its necessity, and stand ready to defend it at all times. And no matter how much we may differ with those who for the time being may, under the forms of law, make, decide or execute our laws, we sustain them in authority until we can change them and make them to accede to our purposes. It shows the capacity of our people for self-government. It is the best evidence that we are a people that can be trusted on large matters as well as small to do those things which are necessary.

"I have an abiding faith in the love of country, and in the honest purpose of the American people to secure that which is best. We differ very much; we wrangle, we quarrel, we present our views with all the ability and all the vigor that we have, but yet when it is all done we bow to the will of the majority. [Applause.]

Most Interesting Campaign.

"We are entering upon a campaign which will exceed in interest and intensity any campaign through which we have passed. I see before me the faces of young men—young men who, like myself, have grown up since the war. We have been fighting those war questions, and too often the bitterness of a quarter of a century ago has lingered to cloud our judgment and to darken our understanding. But we have reached a new era. We have come upon a period when all war questions are settled, and when the people come face to face with great industrial problems; when people come face to face with great economic questions. Every political question must, if it remains before the public long, be based upon economic truths, and every economic question is at last a moral question, a question of right or wrong, and no question has ever been settled until it has been settled upon the basis of what is right.

"Thomas Jefferson never said a truer thing than when he said that the art of government is the art of being honest, and that to discern right from wrong requires not the help of many counselors. He was right. The great principles of right and wrong are easily observed, and that is why the people are competent to settle every question that can arise in a government like ours.

Not Too Deep for the People.

"And when I find people who say that this is a great question, a complicated question, as they say the money question is, I find that they conclude by saying that they have made a study of complicated questions. [Laughter.] When I see a person who says it is too deep for the people I find some one who says it is just about deep enough for him. [Applause and laughter.] No question is too deep for the American people [great applause], and 70,000,000 people, acting as a great jury, must finally decide, and they alone can decide every public question. [Applause.]

"I read the other day in a little pamphlet sent by some of the advocates of the gold standard, who call themselves advocates of 'sound money,' and it contained this paragraph, that all of the financiers and capitalists, the only people who are competent to express an opinion on the subject, are in favor of the gold standard. [Great applause and laughter.] It first appeared in an article in the Forum, written by a distinguished Frenchman, and was then reproduced and scattered over the country as literature by the advocates of the gold standard, and, therefore, we must suppose that it expresses their idea that only capitalists and financiers are competent to express an opinion upon this subject. And they are not slow to express their contempt for the intelligence and patriotism of all the rest of the people, whom they would exclude from participation in the settlement of this question." [Great applause and laughter.]

A Voice—But they can't do it.

Each Man the Best Judge.

Mr. Bryan—My friends, I believe that each man, whether he be high or low, rich or poor, is the best judge of the effect of any proposition upon himself. [Great applause.] And he alone has the right to say how his vote shall be cast and on which side his influence shall be thrown. My friends, it is the principle of the broadest democracy that these questions must be settled by the common people, and that this government has never created a particular class to legislate for others. [Tremendous applause.] When I say that no man can accuse me of attempting to deny the capitalist or the financier the right to have his views and to have his opinion, and express that opinion, I simply deny to him the exclusive right to think upon these subjects; I deny to him the right to act for anybody but himself. [Great applause.]

"We stand upon the declaration contained in that immortal document penned by the greatest constructive statesman the world has ever seen, the Declaration of Independence. [Applause.] We stand upon the proposition therein laid down, and would apply those propositions to every act of the legislature as proposed. That declaration says 'all men are created equal' [great applause], and I challenge you to search the constitution, founded upon that declaration—search it if you will, and point to a single sentence that gives to any class of society superior rights or privileges to any other class of society. [Applause and cheers.]

Not Preaching a New Doctrine.

"Now, my friends, we are not preaching a new doctrine; we are not preaching a new idea. We are simply asserting that the principles that underlie this government should apply to new conditions as they arise, and that you can find out what ought to be done by measuring every proposed public act by the propositions contained in the Declaration of Independence and by the provisions of the constitution which is based upon that declaration. That is all we ask. We simply mean this, that legislative government shall know no distinction, that there shall be known by government no difference between men because of birth, because of position in society, or because of the manner in which they worship God. [Long and continued applause.] That is the substance of the declaration. That is the substance of the constitution, and those principles must underlie our government while it continues in its present form.

Have a Right to Speak.

"You, as citizens, have a right to speak upon this subject. I care not what your past party connections may have been. Party is but an instrument by which the citizen serves his country. You tell me you owe something to your party; I tell you that your party owes a higher duty to you than you can owe to it. [Great applause.]

"I would not say one word that would lessen the esteem which any one of you may have for the achievements of the party to which you have belonged, but I say that such parties cannot live upon the past. Parties must face the present. Parties must be prepared to meet and solve every issue as it arises, and the party that does not care enough to meet an issue is not great enough to govern the United States. [Great applause.] Parties do not make issues. Issues make and unmake parties. [Great applause, and cries of 'Right you are.']

"An issue has arisen. It was forced upon this people. For 20 years it has been growing, and during the last three years its growth has been more rapid than in any three years before this issue was presented to the American people. The republican party met in convention. It had its opportunity. When Abraham Lincoln was the idol of the republican party the republican party was willing to meet the issues of the day. [Great applause.]

Not Willing to Meet Issues.

"The republican party at St. Louis was not willing to meet the great issues of the day. [Applause.] The people were suffering from a gold standard. The leaders of that party knew it. In the platform they declared that the gold standard is a bad thing, because they said they wanted to get rid of it as soon as they could. [Applause.] If any republican tells you that the gold standard is a good thing tell him to look at his platform. [Applause and laughter.] His platform says that the republican party will substitute bimetallism for gold monometallism whenever some other nation will help us do it. [Applause and laughter.]

"I have said and I expect to keep on saying that there are two questions which will drive the republican party from the field. The first is: If the gold standard is a good thing, why not keep it? If it is a bad thing, why should we keep it? [Great applause.] If it is a good thing, why try to get other nations to help us to deny to our people the benefits of it? [Applause.] If it is a bad thing, who dares to say that the American people shall suffer for a bad thing? [Great applause.]

"Now, my friends, I did not intend to make a speech. [Cries of 'Go on; go on.'] I must stop now."

A Voice—Tell us about sixteen to one.

What Sixteen to One Means.

Mr. Bryan—There are several definitions of sixteen to one. I will give you some of them. [Applause.] Some think that sixteen to one means that the government will coin sixteen silver dollars every time it coins one gold dollar. [Laughter.] Some think it means that the government will give sixteen silver dollars for every gold dollar. [Laughter.] It does not mean that. [Laughter.] Some think it means that under free coinage it will be as easy to get sixteen dollars as it is to get one dollar under the gold standard. [Laughter.] That may approach the truth. [Laughter and applause.] Sixteen to one simply means that, according to law, the debt-paying power of one ounce of gold when coined shall be equal to the debt-paying power of sixteen ounces of silver when coined. It simply means that the silver dollar is sixteen times as large as the gold dollar. That is what sixteen to one means.

Power of the Silver Dollar.

"When we say we are in favor of the present ratio of sixteen to one, we simply say that we are in favor of having the silver dollar remain the size it is now, and having the gold dollar remain the size as it is now. That is what we mean. [Applause.] We mean that is the ratio. That has been so since the days of Andrew Jackson, that it shall be the ratio at which the mints shall be opened to the free and unlimited coinage of silver. [Applause.] It means this, that if you owe a debt you can go into the market and buy silver and have it coined and use that silver to pay your debts. Already you can go out into the market and buy gold and pay your debts after it is coined, and when you have the right to use either one, if they attempt to corner one metal you can use the other. [Long and continued applause.] Whereas, if you have but one metal which you convert into money and that metal is cornered, you are at the mercy of those who are managing the corner. [Applause.]

"Now, just one word more. I hear people talk about the great advantage it would be if we had the free coinage laws so that men could go out and buy silver for 50 cents and have it coined into 100 cents and make the difference. I have known men to spend time speculating upon how much could be made under such system.

Uses Donnelly Illustration.

"I am going to illustrate that proposition by a story told of Ignatius Donnelly. Mr. Donnelly observed two men discussing the question in a car, and one gentleman said to the other free-coinage man: 'Don't you think it is wrong for the government to say by law that any man could go and buy silver for 50 cents and after it was coined could sell it for 100 cents and make the difference?' and the advocate of free coinage said to this person: 'Under free coinage any person who holds 412½ grains of standard silver can take that silver to the mint and have it coined into a dollar at any time. Now, if that is true, who,' he asked, 'under the free coinage of silver would sell his silver for 50 cents?' [Great applause.] There was silence for a moment, and then some one says: 'I would.' The free-silver advocate went to see where the voice came from, and he found that it came from a sallow-faced young fellow sitting by his mother, and the mother said: 'Don't pay any attention to the boy; he is an idiot.'" [Great applause and laughter.]

"Now, whenever one person can understand free coinage, everybody can, and if everybody can do that, I cannot for the life of me see where the profit is going to be. I cannot see who is going to sell silver for less than what he can get for it coined, but yet there are people who are speculating as to the amount that can be made by buying it at half price." [Applause.]

A Voice—Wouldn't the silver mine owners have a monopoly?

Mr. Bryan—The mine owners are the only people who produce silver, just as the gold mine owners are the only people who produce gold. [Tremendous applause and cheering.] The silver, when produced, is of no use to the man who produces it until he either exchanges it for money or converts it into money for his own use, and the moment he brings that silver from the mine and converts it into money that money is in use to buy the commodities produced by the toilers of this country. [Applause.] And until that money is brought into existence there is no money to buy the things which people produce. Therefore, when we legislate to prevent money coming into existence we legislate against the interest of those who have muscle to sell or products to sell and cannot sell them until there is money to buy them. [Great applause.]

"You must pardon me for going into this subject at all. I did not intend to do it, but the eagerness of this audience and the attention which they have given has tempted me beyond my power to resist. Permit me to thank you for the kindly greetings you have extended and to thank you for the interest which you manifest, and I beg you take this question and study it for yourselves, and then exercise your own judgment when the time comes to pass upon it." [Applause.]

Heated Glass.

If glass be heated to the melting point of aluminium, the adhesion of the metal is very marked. It is possible to spread the aluminium over the surface of the glass with an iron spatula. It is suggested that this property may be utilized for cementing together the parts of glass apparatus used in laboratories. Magnesium also adheres much more readily when heated, but the facility with which it is oxidized renders it less suitable for the purpose; and the same may be said of cadmium. Zinc, at moderately high temperatures, possesses similar properties. Ordinary plumbers' solder, alloyed with a small percentage of magnesium, can be spread upon hot glass like sealing wax; but unfortunately these alloys are speedily attacked by the moisture of the atmosphere. Tin alloyed with ten per cent. of aluminium spreads easily, and is more stable, but requires a higher temperature for its use; and an alloy of tin with from two to five per cent. of zinc was found to work well. It is advisable not to raise the temperature too high, otherwise oxidation becomes energetic. An ordinary soldering iron may be used, but an aluminium bit is preferable. No flux is required, but the glass must be perfectly clean.—N. Y. Ledger.

A Questionable Compliment.

Charley Chumpleigh—Ah, Miss Nightingale, that "Winter Song" was charming; it carried me back to the days of my childhood.

Miss Nightingale—I am so glad you like it.

"Why, I could actually hear the cattle bellowing, the old windmill creaking and the discordant winds howling about the door."—Washington Times.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Whosoever Hath Anything to Offer in this Great Trial

Of Conscience Let Him Step Forth and Give Testimony—God is Plaintiff and the Soul is Defendant—The Issues at Stake Tremendous.

The illustrations of this sermon are drawn from the scenes in a courtroom with which Dr. Talmage became familiar when he was studying law, before he studied for the ministry. The text is: I. John ii., 1: "We have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

Standing in a courtroom, you say to yourself: "At this bar crime has often been arraigned; at this witness stand the oath has often been taken; at this juror's bench the verdict has been rendered; at this judge's desk sentence has been pronounced." But I have to tell you to-day of a trial higher than any oyer and terminer or circuit or supreme or chancery. It is the trial of every Christian man for the life of his soul. This trial is different from any other in the fact that it is both civil and criminal.

The issues at stake are tremendous, and I shall in my sermon show you, first, what are the grounds of complaint; then, who are the witnesses in the cause, and lastly, who are the advocates.

When a trial is called on the first thing is to have the indictment read. Stand up then, O Christian man, and hear the indictment of the Court of high Heaven against thy soul. It is an indictment of ten counts, for thou hast directly or indirectly broken all the ten commandments. You know how it thundered on Sinai, and when God came down how the mountain rocked and the smoke ascended as from a smoldering furnace, and the darkness gathered thick, and the loud, deep trumpet uttered the words: "The soul that sinneth it shall die!" Are you guilty or not guilty? Do not put in a negative plea too quick, for I have to announce that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." There is none that doeth good; no, not one. Whosoever shall keep the whole law, yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Do not, therefore, be too hasty in pronouncing yourself not guilty.

This lawsuit before us also charges you with the breaking of a solemn contract. Many a time did we promise to be the Lord's. We got down on our knees and said: "O, Lord, I am Thine now and forever." Did you keep the promise? Have you stood up to the contract? I go back to your first communion. You remember it as well as if it were yesterday. You know how the vision of the cross rose before you. You remember how from the head and the hands and the side and the feet there came bleeding forth these two words: "Remember Me." You recall how the cup of communion trembled in your hand when you first took it; and as in a seashell you may hear, or think you hear, the roaring of the surf even after the shell has been taken from the beach, so you lifted the cup of communion and you heard in it the surging of the great ocean of a Saviour's agony; and you came forth from that communion service with face shining as though you had been on the Mount of Transfiguration; and the very air seemed tremulous with the love of Jesus, and the woods and the leaves and the grass and the birds were brighter and sweeter-voiced than ever before, and you said down in the very depths of your soul: "Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee." Have you kept the bargain, O Christian man? Have you not sometimes faltered when you ought to have been true? Have you not been proud when you ought to have been humble? Have you not played the coward when you ought to have been a hero? I charge it upon you and I charge it upon myself—we have broken the contract.

Still further: this lawsuit claims damages at your hands. The greatest slander on the Christian religion is an inconsistent professor. The Bible says religion is one thing; we, by our inconsistency, say religion is some other thing, and what is more deplorable about it is that people can see faults in others while they can not see any in themselves. If you shall at any time find some miserable old gossip, with imperfections from the crown of her head to the sole of her foot, a perfect blotch of sin herself, she will go tattling, tattling, tattling, all the years of her life about the inconsistencies of others, having no idea that she is inconsistent herself. God save the world from the gossip, female and male! I think the males are the worst! Now the chariot of Christ's salvation goes on through the world, but it is our inconsistencies, my brethren, that block up the wheels, while all along the line there ought to have been cast nothing but palm branches, and the shout should have been lifted: "Hosanna to the Son of David!"

Now, you have heard the indictment read. Are you ready to plead guilty or not guilty? Perhaps you are not ready yet to plead. Then the trial will go on. The witnesses will be called and we shall have the matter decided. In the name of God I now make proclamation: Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! whosoever hath anything to offer in this trial in which God is the plaintiff and the Christian soul the defendant, let him now step forth and give testimony in this solemn trial.

The first witness I call upon the stand in behalf of the prosecution is the World—all critical and observant of Christian character. You know that there are people around you who perpetually banquet on the frailties of God's children. You may know, if you have lived in the country, that a crow cares for nothing so much as carrion.

There are those who imagine that out of the faults of Christians they can make a bridge of boats across the stream of death, and they are going to try it; but, alas for the mistake! When they get midstream away will go the bridge and down will go their souls to perdition. O World of the greedy eye and the hard heart, come on the stand now and testify in behalf of the prosecution against this Christian soul on trial.

What do you know about this Christian man? "Oh," says the World, "I know a great deal about him. He talks about putting his treasures in Heaven, but he is the sharpest man in a trade I ever knew. He seems to want us to believe that he is a child of God, but he is full of imperfections. I do not know but I am a great deal better than he is now. Oftentimes he is very earthly, and he talks so little about Christ and so much about himself. I am very glad to testify that this is a bad man."

Stop, O world with the greedy eye and the hard heart. I fear you are too much interested in this trial to give impartial evidence. Let all those who hear the testimony of this witness know that there is an old family quarrel between these two parties. There always has been a variance between the world and the church, and, while the world, on the witness stand to-day, has told a great deal of truth about this Christian man, you must take it all with much allowance, remembering that they still keep the old grudge good. O world of the greedy eye and the hard heart, that will do; you may sit down.

The second witness I call in this case is Conscience. Who art thou, O Conscience? What is your business? Where were you born? What are you doing here? "Oh," says Conscience, "I was born in Heaven. I came down to befriend this man. I have lived with him. I have instructed him. I have warned him. I showed him the right and the wrong, advising him to take the one and eschew the other. I have kindled a great light in his soul. With a whip of scorpions I have scourged his wickedness, and I have tried to cheer him when doing right, and yet I am compelled to testify on the stand to-day that he has sometimes rejected my mission. Oh, how many cups of life have I pressed to his lips that he dashed down, and how often has he stood with his hard heel on the bleeding heart of the Son of God? It pains me very much that I have to testify against this Christian man, and yet I must, in behalf of Him, who will in no wise clear the guilty, say that this Christian man has done wrong. He has been worldly. He has been neglectful. He has done a thousand things he ought not to have done, and left undone a thousand things he ought to have done." That will do, Conscience. You may sit down.

The third witness I call in the case is an angel of God. Bright and shining one, what doest thou here? What hast thou to say against this man on trial? "Oh," says the angel, "I have been a messenger to him. I have guarded him. I have watched him. With this wing I have defended him, and oftentimes, when he knew it not, I led him into green pastures and beside the still waters. I snatched from him the poisoned chalices.

When bad spirits came upon him to destroy him I fought them back with infinite fierceness, and yet I have to testify to-day that he has rejected my mission. He has not done as he ought to have done. Though I came from the sky he drove me back. Though with this wing I defended him, and though with this voice I wooed him, I have to announce his multiplied imperfections. I dare not keep back the testimony, for then I should not dare to appear again amongst the sinless ones before the great White Throne."

There is only one more witness to be called on behalf of the prosecution, and that is the great, the holy, the august, the omnipotent Spirit of God. We bow down before Him. Holy Spirit, knowest thou this man? "Oh, yes," says the Holy One, "I know him. I have striven with him ten thousand times, and though sometimes he did seem to repent, he fell back again as often from his first estate. Ten thousand times ten thousand has he grieved me, although the Bible warned him, saying: 'Grieve not the Holy Ghost. Quench not the spirit.' Yes, he has driven me back. Though I am the third person of the Trinity, he has trampled on my mission, and the blood of the atonement that I brought with which to cleanse his soul he sometimes despised. I came from the throne of God to convert, and comfort and sanctify, and yet look at that man and see what he is compared with what, unresisted, I would have made him."

The evidence on the part of the prosecution has closed. Now let the defense bring on the rebuttal testimony.

What have you, O Christian soul, to bring in reply to the evidence of the world, of the conscience, of the angel and of the Holy Ghost? No evidence? Are all these things true? "Yes. Unclean, unclean," says every Christian soul. What! do you not begin to tremble at the thought of condemnation?"

We have come now to the most interesting part of this great trial. The evidence all in, the advocates speak. The profession of an advocate is full of responsibility. In England and the United States there have arisen men who in this calling have been honored by their race and thrown contempt upon those in the profession who have been guilty of a great many meannesses. That profession will be honorable so long as it has attached to it such names as Mansfield, and Marshall, and Story, and Kent, and Southard, and William Wirt. The courtroom has sometimes been the scene of very marvelous and thrilling things. Some of you remember the famous Girard will case, where one of our advocates pleaded the cause of the Bible and Christianity in masterly Anglo-Saxon, every paragraph a thunderbolt.

Some of you have read of the famous trial in Westminster hall of Warren Hastings, the despoiler of India. That great man had conquered India by splendid talents, by courage, by bribes, by gigantic dishonesty. The whole world had rung with applause or condemnation. Gathered in Westminster hall, a place where 30 kings had been inaugurated, was one of the most famous audiences ever gathered. Foreign ministers and princes sat there. Peers marched in, clad in ermine and gold. Mighty men and women from all lands looked down upon the scene. Amid all that pomp and splendor, and amid an excitement such as has seldom been seen in any court room, Edmund Burke advanced in a speech which will last as long as the English language, concluding with this burning charge, which made Warren Hastings cringe and cower: "I impeach him in the name of the Commons House of Parliament whose trust he has betrayed. I impeach him in the name of the English nation, whose ancient honor he has sullied. I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trampled on and whose country he has turned into a desert. And, lastly, in the name of human nature, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age and rank, I impeach him as the common enemy and oppressor of all."

But I turn from the recital of these memorable occasions to a grander trial, and I have to tell you that in this trial of the Christian, for the life of his soul the advocates are mightier, mightier, and more eloquent. The evidence all being in, severe and stern justice rises on behalf of the prosecution to make his plea. With the Bible open in his hand, he reads the law stern and flexible, and the penalty: "The soul that sinneth it shall die." Then he says: "O thou Judge and Lawgiver, this is Thine own statute, and all the evidence in earth and Heaven agrees that the man has sinned against these enactments. Now let the sword leap from its scabbard. Shall a man go through the very flames of Sinai unsinged? Let the law be executed. Let judgment be pronounced. Let him die. I demand that he die!"

O Christian, does it not look very dark for thee? Who will plead on thy side in so forlorn a cause? Sometimes a man will be brought into a court of law, and he will have no friends and no money, and the judge will look over the bar and say: "Is there anyone who will volunteer to take this man's case and defend him?" And some young man rises up and says: "I will be his counsel," perhaps starting on from that very point to a great and brilliant career. Now, in this matter of the soul, as you have nothing to pay for counsel, do you think that anyone will volunteer? Yes, yes; I see one rising. He is a young man, only 33 years of age. I see His countenance suffused with tears and covered with blood, and all the galleries of Heaven are thrilled with the spectacle. Thanks be unto God, "we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

Oh, Christian soul, your case begins to look better. I think, perhaps, after all, you may not have to die. The best Advocate in the universe has taken your side. No one was ever so qualified to defend you. He knows all the law, all its demands, all its penalties. He is always ready. No new turn of the case can surprise him, and he will plead for you for nothing as earnestly as though you brought a world of treasure to his feet. Besides that, he has undertaken the cases of thousands who were so forlorn as you, and he has never lost a case. Courage, Oh Christian soul! I think that, after all, there may be some chance for you, for the great Advocate rises to make His plea. He says: "I admit all that has been proved against my client. I admit all these sins, aye, more; but look at that wounded hand of mine and look at that other wounded hand, and at my right foot, and at my left foot. By all these wounds I plead for his clearance. Count all the drops of my tears. Count all the drops of my blood. By the humiliation of Bethlehem, by the sweat of Gethsemane, by the sufferings of the cross, I demand that he go free. On this arm he hath leaned; to this heart he hath flown; in my tears he hath washed; on my earnestness he hath depended. Let him go free. I am the ransom. Let him escape the lash; I took the scourgings. Let the cup pass from him; I drank it to the dregs. Put him on the crown of life, for I have worn the crown of thorns. Over against my throne of shame set his throne of triumph!"

Well, the counsel on both sides have spoken, and there is only one more thing now remaining, and that is the awarding of the judgment. If you have ever been in a courtroom you know the silence and solemnity when the verdict is about to be rendered or the judgment about to be given. About this soul on trial—shall it be saved? Attention! above around, beneath. All the universe cries, "Hear! hear!"

The judge rises and gives this decision, never to be changed, never to be revoked: "There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus."

The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,
I will not, I will not, desert to his foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake.

But, my friends, there is coming a day of trial in which not only the saints but the sinner must appear. That day of trial will come very suddenly. The farmer will be at the plow, the merchant will be in the counting room, the woodman will be ringing his axe on the hickories, the weaver will have his foot on the treadle, the manufacturer will be walking amid the buzz of looms and the clack of flying machinery, the counsel may be at the bar, pleading the law, the minister may be in the pulpit pleading the Gospel, the drunkard may be reeling amid his cups and the blasphemer with the oath caught between his teeth.

Mlle. Jeanne Samary has successfully opened in Paris a theater called Theater Blanc, where very proper plays are being given devoid of risque suggestions. This is the outgrowth of the recent discussion among French women concerning places of amusement for their daughters.

CANDOR OF MR. BRYAN.

The Democratic Candidate Is Above Deception and Dishonesty.

The republican organs parade as damaging to the democratic candidate the telegraphic correspondence of Mr. Bryan and Senator Jones concerning the populist nomination and the reports of his stubborn determination to let the populists know where he stands.

The effect of Mr. Bryan's attitude and utterances is undoubtedly the opposite of that hoped for by these organs. The publication of the Bryan-Jones correspondence did Mr. Bryan more good than harm, and all that he may say in line with his determination to meet the populists with perfect candor is beneficial to him.

The American people admire frankness and honesty. They abhor trickery and deceit in politics. The public man who speaks his mind and disdains to profit by deception or hypocrisy earns their respect, as the public man who shows himself willing to profit by trickery receives their contempt.

It may not have been good politics in the narrow sense of apparent temporary advantage for Mr. Bryan to tell the populists that he did not want and could not accept their nomination on the terms with which it was offered, but it was good politics in the broadest and best sense. It was the kind of politics that gains honor and confidence for a man and that wins in the long run.

Mr. Bryan's desire to deal frankly with the populists and to give them an opportunity to act with a clear conception of his own position was altogether creditable. It showed him to be willing to lose the populist nomination by honest dealing rather than win it by consenting to a misconception or to a course that might savor of deception or dishonesty. The feeling of party resentment which might be felt against a man who is willing to sacrifice a political opportunity to conscience must yield to a feeling of respect for his courage and probity.

The populists know now that if their representatives voted for Mr. Bryan's nomination under a misunderstanding of the situation the democratic candidate was not a party to the misunderstanding. They know that if the populist convention acted without a clear knowledge of the consequences the convention was kept from securing that knowledge by its own officers and not by the man who was most concerned and most anxious that the convention should act with a full knowledge of all the circumstances bearing upon its action.

The revelation of Mr. Bryan's attitude and wishes cannot fail to win him the respect not only of the populists, who are chiefly concerned in this matter, but of all men who love honesty and courage.—St. Louis Republic.

——Said William McKinley, speaking in the house of representatives on June 24, 1890: "I am for the largest use of silver in the currency of the country. I would not dishonor it; I would give it equal credit and honor with gold. I would make no discrimination. I would utilize both metals as money and discredit neither. I want the double standard." The official report of these words may be found on page 6,447 of volume 21 of the Congressional Record. Six years after uttering those words William McKinley turned his coat in order to get the republican nomination for the presidency. How much confidence can the people place in a man who will eat his own words in order to get a nomination?—Helena (Mont.) Independent.

——Unfortunately "financial gluttony" is not confined to mere business speculation, where its effects are bad enough, but has shown itself in politics, where its influence has been far more disastrous to the material welfare of the people and detrimental to national morals. The protective tariff system, started as a sincere, although misguided, effort to promote the general welfare, injected an element of greed into politics which soon turned a policy of mild incidental protection into a business of public plunder. Gluttony, organized into trusts and combines, essayed to control the legislation of the country and culminated in the riot of bounty robbery which prevailed under the McKinley law.—St. Louis Republic.

"THE PAUPER CANDIDATE."

Despicable Methods of Republicans and Disgruntled Democrats.

The enemies of democracy have already begun a campaign of abuse. No language is too vile, no epithet too coarse for them in speaking of the men nominated by the Chicago convention. Mr. James Gordon Bennett, editor and proprietor of the New York Herald, many times a millionaire, and a resident of Europe because the country that made him rich is not good enough for him, has generally had the grace to support the democratic ticket. But, following the lead of the disgruntled Dana, his paper has bolted the nominations and left the democratic ranks. To make the defection more disgusting, it copied that perfect specimen of shifting sophistry, the Sun editorial declaring for McKinley, and added "me too," virtually acknowledging its inability to frame a declaration of its own, exhibiting bad judgment and lack of originality as well. But the climax was reached when the Herald printed the following sentence:

"Bryan is a pauper of the west; he has not a dollar and is proud of his poverty."

This vile and foolish attack gives to the democracy a campaign phrase of irresistible force. Mr. Bryan may not be rich, but he has never begged his bread and has always worked honorably for it. In this he is a typical American citizen. In this he is a representative of the true American idea. In this, too, he differs from McKinley and his followers. He has not allowed other men to pay his debts. He has not sold himself, body and soul, to a syndicate of millionaires. He is not rich, it is true, and to be poor because he scorned the methods that have made his enemies rich is a thing to be proud of. To style him a pauper because he lacks the ill-gotten gains the Ohio syndicate is scattering broadcast for corruption purposes, is to insult, not only the man of the people, but the people themselves.

As a campaign cry, "The Pauper Candidate" will awaken the indignation and hasten the action of millions of the honest American citizens.

To the "three R's" was credited the election of Cleveland in 1884. It appears that "The Pauper Candidate" is likely to have a similar effect in this campaign.—Tammany Times.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——The democratic campaign will be one of education. That of the republicans will be one of vilification.—St. Louis Republic.

——The Hanna "object lesson" reached its zenith at Homestead in 1892, and there was a decided echo at the polls that year.—N. Y. Journal.

——J. Pierpont Morgan as a McKinley advocate is a shining mark. The financier who shared in a profit of $10,000,000 in one bond issue ought to be an effective campaigner for the gold standard.—St. Louis Republic.

——Some people are going to vote for Mr. Bryan simply because they like a man with the courage of his convictions. Some people are going to vote against McKinley simply because they don't like a trimmer.—Albany Argus.

——The campaign biography of McKinley traces his ancestry back to "Constantine Macduff, earl of Fife, who killed Macbeth, thus by heroic conduct creating the basis for Shakespeare's immortal tragedy." This ought to catch the jingo vote.—Utica Observer.

——The republicans have not formally renounced their hope of carrying at least one southern state, but since the democratic victories in Alabama and Tennessee the talk of breaking the solid south has ceased, and mighty little is being said about the solid west.—Kansas City Times.

——If the gold men thought they could elect McKinley thereby they could undoubtedly raise a campaign fund of $100,000,000 in Europe alone, but the gold men keep pretty well informed and they know that the single gold standard has reached the end of its string in the United States.—Wheeling Register.

——Mr. Hanna appears to be meeting with some success in frying out fat in New York. But some day those who are thus blackmailed may find that it is a good deal cheaper to pay a reasonable income tax in support of the government than it is to make unreasonable contributions to support political bossism.—N. NOT THE DOG'S FAULT.

She Blamed Fido for All of the Excitement.

A well-dressed woman, leading a frisky Skye terrier by a chain, walked into the ladies' cabin of a Gloucester ferryboat the other day. As soon as she had seated herself the Skye terrier with blinking eyes crawled under the seat and proceeded to go to sleep.

A well-dressed Gloucesterite, carrying a small market basket, entered the ladies' cabin and deposited his 180 pounds of avoirdupois in the next seat to the woman with the Skye terrier. He shoved his basket under the seat, and, without drawing a newspaper from his pocket, settled himself to read.

The boat was moving from the slip, when suddenly the woman began to wriggle. She toyed impatiently with her skirts, and, in a stage whisper audible to those nearest her, said: "Don't be rude, Fido," and gave the dog chain a little jerk. A moment later she turned pale, and giving the chain a hard jerk, said, screechingly: "Lie down, Fido; behave yourself, sir!" The passengers smiled, and the woman gasped. She jumped up with a shriek that would have done credit to a Sioux Indian, and began to strike her skirts and dance about as if executing a Comanche war dance. As she and the dog swung round the cabin the animal resembled a rag pin wheel just set off.

The other passengers had by this time become intensely interested in the performance and stared at the woman in open-eyed wonder. An idea suddenly struck the well-dressed Gloucesterite. He reached under the seat and calmly withdrew his basket, and as he raised the lid a look of wisdom overspread his rotund features. To him, at least, the mystery of the woman's actions was made plain.

"Madam," he said, without moving an eyelash, "when you are through with my lobster will you kindly return it to me?"

There was a last wild despairing shriek as the woman collapsed into a dead faint. Then the Gloucesterite wrenched open the jaws of his lobster and replaced the crustacean in his basket. Some among the crowd continued to roar, while others set about restoring the unfortunate woman to consciousness.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THE WORK OF HOUSEKEEPING.

It May Be Made More Easy by Economical Arrangement.

It is of no use pretending that housekeeping is easy; it isn't. It is hard work. However, there are ways of more or less alleviating the hardship, and some of them have been discovered by a family in the suburbs, where servants are generally unsatisfactory and uncertain of tenure. This particular household consists of a mother and two daughters. If they are left maidless—and that is no uncommon occurrence in village life—they perform the disagreeable feat known provincially as "doing one's own work," after a plan which they have evolved. One prepares the breakfast one morning, luncheon the next day, and dinner on the next. The other two clear away and wash the dishes. Thus each one is responsible for a different meal each day, and has no other concern except the mere menial labor. Whoever gets the breakfast does the upstairs work as well that day.

Another plan of this family, even when they have servants, is to divide the catering, seeing after the meals, etc., among themselves, so that it shall not prove so wearisome a task to anyone. They each take turns by the week in marketing, planning food and overseeing its cooking. This gives a much greater variety for the table, and is good practice for the daughters as well as relief to the mother. Likewise it is an economical arrangement. Each manager makes it a point of pride to see how well she can run the house on the least possible sum, as there is the comparison every Saturday night with the accounts of the other two to spur her on to her best endeavors.—Boston Budget.

Fashion's Latest Lore.

The newest evening coiffures are in 1830 style, with motives of jet, steel and Strass.

The link belts in enamel are much worn by those who possess pretty gold or silver trifles that can be hung from them by chains.

The newest sort of yoke is made of a close-set white cord, braided in an important pattern wide enough to cover the top of the bodice and entirely to the bust. It is either of this fashion or else quite narrow, merely a band across the upper portion of the neck attached to a rounded drapery drooping over the arm.

Chic-looking zouaves attract the eye on many of the most stylish dresses of the year. Sometimes they are all lace, sometimes fine muslin as a groundwork to the minutest white embroidery. Occasionally they are made of grass lawn, worked all over with pompadour flowers or jewels, and embroidered glacés are employed for them.—Chicago News.

Pineapple with Rice.

This is an admirable dessert. Put a pint of milk over the fire, and the moment it boils add a third of a cupful of well-washed rice and half a teaspoonful of salt. Let the rice cook in a double boiler in the milk for half an hour. Add two eggs well beaten and three tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar. Have ready a buttered two-quart mold, in the bottom of which put an inch layer of the prepared rice, then a layer of stewed pineapple, and so on alternately. When the mold is filled, set it into a pan of hot water, and cook in a moderately hot oven for half an hour.—Good Housekeeping.

Culture of Beauty.

Just a blossom or two, with some green leaves, will lighten the table wonderfully. Teach the children to bring in clover blooms and blue grass, with the graceful seed heads, if you have not finer flowers. It will teach them to see beauty in small things, and to make the most of their surroundings.—Washington Star.

HIS TIME WAS UP.

One of the Disadvantages of Hiring a Lawyer by the Day.

With the name of Rufus Lockwood is recalled to mind one of the most extraordinary geniuses that the state of California ever produced. It is many years now since Lockwood held sway in the courts of San Francisco. He was in his day, perhaps, the best lawyer in the state, and it was only because of his utter indifference to pecuniary matters that he did not leave a large fortune behind him.

Lockwood went at one time to Horace Hawes, a very distinguished lawyer and the author of the consolidation act which is now in force. Hawes had a reputation for close figuring, and Lockwood knew it. He said: "Mr. Hawes, I'll hire myself to you for one year from date at a salary of $25 a day, payable every night."

"All right," said Hawes, delighted to engage the services of the brightest mind in the state at so low a figure—for the salary was not a great one in those days—and the bargain was sealed. It was 11 o'clock in the morning. But from that time on, it is said, Hawes never missed an opportunity of reminding Lockwood of his bondage. He would say, in the presence of others: "Lockwood, go fetch that book; Lockwood, do this or that," etc. Lockwood never said a word, but did as he was bidden, and Hawes enjoyed his triumph.

Finally it came to the day when the year's engagement terminated. There was a most important lawsuit on hand which Lockwood had made a careful study of. No one in the state could possibly have handled it as he did. Well, on the day in question Lockwood stood in court, an array of law books in front of him, and expounded his views in masterly fashion. Suddenly he looked up at the clock and saw that it was the hour of 11. Closing the book from which he was quoting, he turned to Hawes, who was sitting beside him, and said: "Mr. Hawes, a year ago to-day at this hour I contracted to work for you one year. My time's up, the contract is cancelled, and I am going."

Thus did he repay his master for the humiliation heaped upon him. Hawes was in the greatest consternation. He could not possibly take up the thread of the case where Lockwood had left it, and he begged and implored him to proceed. But Lockwood remembered, and he turned a deaf ear to all persuasions. He kept his word, the contract had expired.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Marvels to the Natives.

Dr. Gregory, in exploring the lofty ranges of Mount Kenya in Africa, was accompanied by native followers from the coast, to whom the frost and snow met with at great altitudes were inexplicable wonders, that could be attributed only to magical agencies. "They came to tell me," writes the traveler, "that the water they had left in their cooking-pots was all bewitched. They said it was white, and would not shake: the adventurous Fundi had even hit it with a stick, which would not go in. They begged me to look at it, and I told them to bring it to me. They declined, however, to touch it, and implored me to go to it. The water, of course, had frozen solid. I handled the ice and told the men they were silly to be afraid of it, for this change always came over water on the tops of high mountains. I put one of the pots on the fire and predicted it would soon turn again into water. The men sat around and anxiously watched it; when it had melted they joyfully told me that the demon was expelled, and I told them they could now use the water; but as soon as my back was turned they poured it away and refilled their pots from an adjoining brook."—Chicago News.

Wear Loose Gloves.

The wearer of tight gloves will be interested to learn that women whose hands and arms are famous for their beauty all wear loose gloves. Bernhardt wears long, loose-wristed gloves, and her white, beautiful hands are among her charms. Miss Terry has a large hand, almost masculine in the strength of its lines, though the fingers are beautifully tapered. Her hand is in proportion to her figure, and she does not squeeze either into tight compresses. She wears large gloves and her hands are lily white and as smooth as a girl's.—St. Louis Republic.

THE GREAT BUSTARD.

It Has Been Extinct in England for More Than Fifty Years.

The great bustard formerly haunted all the level counties of England, and was particularly common on Salisbury plain. From the reign of Henry VIII. repeated measures were passed in order to protect it; and it is expressly included under the head of game in the statute of the first year of the reign of William IV., which codified and reformed the laws relating to game. The close season for bustard shooting was and is from the first of March to the first of September. But the native bustard is now extinct in England. The last was killed at Swaffham in Norfolk, in 1838. Any that have been shot since have been merely casual visitors, probably coming from the plains of Saxony. The causes of the disappearance of the bustard are, firstly, the sport they afforded, for they were hunted with greyhounds as well as shot; secondly, the increase in the amount of cultivated land. This largest of European birds, weighing as much as 30 pounds, could no longer find any sufficient support on the closely cropped plains of England.

A Wonderful Phenomenon.

The man who should pass through life without experiencing a twinge of indigestion, might be fitly regarded as a wonderful phenomenon. We doubt if such a privileged mortal has ever existed. If so, we have never seen him. But thousands are known to be daily relieved of dyspepsia by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the popular remedy for that truly national complaint, as well as for fever and ague, debility, constipation, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

Syrup of Figs

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

POLITICAL.

It is again reported that Hoke Smith is to resign from President Cleveland's cabinet.

Senator Gorman predicts that his State, Maryland, will give Bryan and Sewall 20,000 majority.

The finance committee appointed by Mark Hanna to raise funds for the campaign is worth $550,000,000.

The silver Democrats of the Second Congressional district renominated Dr. S. D. Clardy for Congress.

Ex-Gov. John Young Brown has announced himself as a candidate for Congress in the Louisville District.

The New York Journal says $10,000,000 has already been pledged in New York to aid the election of McKinley, and $20,000,000 may be furnished.

Robert L. Samuell, of Nicholasville, Ky., comes to the front with the claim that four years ago he predicted that Bryan would be elected to the Presidency.

The Frankfort correspondent of the Louisville Post says there are 500 sound money Democrats in Franklin county who will not support the Chicago ticket.

The official returns show that Johnston, the Free Silver Democratic candidate for Governor in Alabama, is elected by 42,000 majority. Where now are the claims of the gold bugs and Republicans?

Col. Berry, so reports says, is satisfied with the action of the District Committee at Sanders yesterday. If there isn't dynamite enough in the resolution adopted by that Committee to lift the doughty Colonel over the Highlands the Commonwealth will retire from the guessing contest.—Commonwealth.

You Bryan Popocratic boys, says the Owingsville Outlook, are going to be surprised by the stanchness of real Democratic sentiment in Bath county, as the campaign progresses. Democrats are going to stand by their principles and support a Democrat, not a Populist, for President, and a platform of Democracy, not Popocracy and anarchy.

The Sage of Glen Lilly is growing childish, and his mind must be failing. At the convention in his home county to select delegates to the State convention, Simon Bolliver offered a resolution, which was unanimously adoption, pledging their support to the nominees of the party. The old war hoss is the first one to bolt his resolution. And this is Democracy.—Nicholasville Democrat.

The moral temper of the Times, Post and Courier-Journal is shocked because the Chicago Convention dared criticise the U. S. Supreme Court; yet this same press in 1876 would have had the people revolt because the same Court robbed the free people of the United States of a rightfully elected President. Who said more against the members of this court than this self same treasonable press.—Owen News.

The word "Democrat" should not be attached to the word "National" because it is misleading. There is only one kind of Democracy and that is governed by the people, ruled by a majority, who conduct it by a representative or delegated system of goverment. If a majority of the people cannot rule, the word "Democracy" is a failure and a misnomer. Drop the word "Democrat" and select some other and more suitable nom de plume for your new clan.

A Frankfort dispatch says: The first open clash between the free silver Democrats and sound money Democratic organizations now in incubation will come to a head after the National Democratic electors are named. It is this, both are claiming the Democratic emblem, rooster, as their voting sign, and this morning a leading sound money Democrat told Chairman Trimble, of the Seventh district silver committee, that the Republican Secretary of State would decide in favor of the National Democratic party using the ancient Democratic bird. It is likely the matter will be settled in the courts.

STATE NEWS.

Four cases of small-pox reported near Paducah.

Russellville is to have a new bank with $50,000 capital.

An epidemic of typhoid fever is prevailing in the Berea neighborhood, Madison county.

The Leslie county Teachers' Institute passed resolutions condemning the Hiles compulsory education law.

The work of arching Cumberland Gap tunnel with brick has begun. It will take six months to complete the job.

Miss Myrtle Simpson has left her home, near Nicholasville, to avoid a marriage her parents had arranged for her. She has gone to Texas where a married sister resides.

John Nelson, County Assessor of Laurel county and candidate for the Legislature, shot and fatally wounded his brother Dave, as the result of a quarrel over a glass of cider.

Thos. Brown, the Webster county farmer, who in a fit of anger attempted to murder his wife and child and brother-in-law, has been sent to the Western lunatic asylum.

Robert Mosley, who killed Isaac Oliver in Anderson county seventeen years ago and has since that time been a fugitive from justice, was arrested in Chattanooga and brought back to Lawrenceburg.

The lawyers of Lebanon have passed a resolution imposing a fine of $100 on any of their number who broaches the subject of the currency question in court-house square. The same proposition was made by a lawyer out at Hardingsburg, but it wouldn't take worth a cent.—Breckinridge News.

Isaac R. Green, 95 years of age and the oldest lawyer in Louisville, was tried on a writ of lunacy and found to be of unsound mind. Information on which the proceedings were instituted was filed by George Greene, who claims to be a son of Isaac R. Greene. The latter says he never had a son.

Gov. Bradley refused to pardon Frank Searce, the Lexington dude sent up for forgery, though hundreds of the society people of that city importuned him. He gave as his reason that the conviction of one man high in the social scale carried more terror than that of a dozen men of a lower station, and that when such people were convicted the law should take its course.

[St. Louis Republic.]

Gentlemen of the Sound Money Democratic Club of St. Louis would do well to make a closer study of American political history before they fire another proclamation at the Chicago platform and candidates of 1896.

The manifesto put forth by the Chatsworth Hall meeting bears evidence that our "sound money" fellow-citizens are caused unnecessary pain by that plank in the Chicago platform which declares:

"We are opposed to life tenure in the public service, except as provided in the Constitution. We favor appointments based upon merit, fixed terms of office and such an administration of the civil service laws as will afford equal opportunities to all citizens of ascertained fitness."

This the Sound Money Democratic Club of St. Louis declares to be a revocation of the pledge to reform the civil service made by the Democratic party under the leadership of Samuel J. Tilden in 1876. Even if it were, it would still be good Jeffersonian and Jacksonian Democracy.

But Mr. Tilden did not believe that the salvation of the country depended upon packing the civil service with mugwumps or partisans whose principle aim in life was to hold their places on the Government pay roll. He so fully realized the strength of the officeholding machine that he figured out that, in order to expel the Republicans from power and get possession of the Government in spite of that machine, the Democrats would have to carry the Presidential election by something like a two-thirds vote. The result proved that he was not far wrong in his estimate.

Mr. Tilden's idea of reforming the civil service was that the Republican office-holders who were opposing the people in the election of 1876 should be turned out and their places given to loyal Democrats who had contributed to Democratic victory. "Turn the rascals out" was a Tilden cry of 1876.

The Democratic Convention of 1876 did not believe that all Government clerkships should be put up at auction in every Presidential election. And yet it was even more radical and explicit than the convention of 1896 in its declaration against permitting public office to become a private life tenure perquisite. It demanded that Republican rascals be turned out and good Democrats be put in their places. After recital of scandalous misdoings by Republican officeholders, the Democratic platform of 1876 has these forcible words:

"The demonstration is complete that the first step in reform must be the people's choice of honest men from another party, least the disease of one political organization infect the body politic, and lest, by making no change of measures and no real reform."

William L. Marcy was in close poximity to the truth when he declared, in the Senate at Washington that a vital principle of New York politics is: "To the victors belong the spoils of the enemy." And Mr. Tilden was an admirable New York politician. He may never have adopted Marcy's maxim as his own, but on one point there was no sort of doubt in the Presidential election of 1876.

It was that if the Democrats won the election and put Mr. Tilden into the White House, Democrats were to be put on guard in Washington.

There was not much mugwumpery in either party on the civil service question in that campaign.

CROP AND STOCK.

W. L. Bramblett, of Bourbon county, had eighty acres of wheat that averaged twenty bushels.

In Clark county, R. Penn Taylor sold to John Embry 65 cattle, weighing about 1,500 pounds at 4 cents.

R. L. Salter, of Boyle county, threshed eleven acres of wheat which averaged thirty two bushels and three pecks to the acre.

Many corn crops in Casey county have not been worked at all, and most of them will bring a good yield. They were planted late and the ground has been too wet to work since.

Fourteen carloads of fine export cattle were shipped from Lincoln and Garrard counties last week. The average weight was from 1,560 to 1,700 pounds and the price paid was from $3,90 to $4,25 per hundred. Quite a number of cattle dealers are waiting for a better price.

With the flush pasturage resulting from the heavy rains and the prospect of a large yield of corn, the demand for feeding cattle should prove unusually heavy and prices will undoubtedly rise if farmers can obtain advances of money with which to purchase.—Danville Advocate.

Will Gaines, of Scott county, this State, gives the Breeders Gazette the following points on the perfect saddle horse: 1, color. This should be a solid one and not apt to sunburn, black points, no white markings. 2, size. This should be from 15 hands 1 inch to 15 2½. 3, conformation. Fine head, broad between eyes, small muzzle, nostril extending, ears long and thin, not too erect, rather pointing forward, especially when moving; long, rangy, arched neck, coming well up from shoulder (throwing the rider backward instead of forward), the latter running back, with short coupling, round barrel, measuring large around heart; limbs flat and bony, well muscled in arm and thigh, not encumbered with surplus flesh. 4, eyes coffee brown, rather prominent, without any noticeable white. 5, mane and tail heavy, latter carried well up with stiff bone. 6, gait. He should go all the gaits required by the National Saddle-Horse Breeders' Association and perform them distinctly especially a square trot. 7, soundness, style, finish, with good knee action and plenty of go.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

We are unable to give any encouragement to the tobacco interests over the reports of last week. The extreme hot weather has been the means of making the buyers a little careless in their bidding, but still the prices continue about the same, with the usual fluctuations. The sales have not been large, and the rejections very small, taking the market into consideration, but there appears to be a desire among the late shippers to dispose of their tobacco, as there is nothing to encourage holding, and a majority of the shippers believe that the present prices are fully as high as can be expected, and they do not want to carry and come into competition with the present growing crop.

The colory lugs are in good demand, and remain firm. Also some good fancy tobacco has done well this week, and while the buyers seem anxious to increase their purchases on these classes, they neglect the inferior grades, and the dark red can be quoted very low, especially when there is any tinge of green in the leaf.

The French contract buyers are still taking the good clean tips at full prices and while our buyers do not show any desire to purchase largely, we do not think the manufacturers are carrying any large stocks, and depend upon the breaks for their supply.

The reports from the country are very favorable now, and a large yield from the aereage is assured and with good curing weather a fine crop can besafely depended upon.

[News]

Rev. David Burton baptized fifty converts at the Mt. Vernon Baptist church last Sunday. Rev. Burton has been holding a most interesting meeting there for several weeks.

Frank Green and Hallalula Taylor, while returning from Inverness were upset and thrown out of a buggy by their horse running away with them. Both were slightly bruised and the buggy badly damaged.

A young man by the name of Vallandingham who claimed to be from Cincinnati, stole a suit of clothes from a young man with whom he worked at the farm of W. W. Lancaster last Saturday night, and also took Mr. Lancaster's horse and rode it up near town and turned it loose. He has skipped the country; but if caught will be put through.

[Herald.]

Tobacco cutting is all the go: the finest crop ever raised.

The small boys amuse themselves with boxing gloves, while the larger ones kill a good deal of time by indulging in old-fashioned mumble-peg.

Some apprehension, has been caused by a small crack in the tower of the new Baptist church, but the architect says it amounts to nothing and there is no possible danger.

Half a dozen boys, ranging in age from about twelve to eighteen years, were before Judge Lee last Monday morning charged with gaming. County Attorney Todd stated that he was not quite sure of having sufficient evidence to convict them on this particular charge and he would consent to have the warrants filed away, which was done. He said complaint had been made frequently of late that certain boys were in the habit of meeting in barns and stables for the purpose of gambling, and on the occasion referred to specially at this time had met in the Puplic School building. If they are caught any more they may expect the full penalty of the law.

[Courier]

County Treasurer D. C. Points sold at the court house door Monday $17,000 in Grant county bonds. They were knocked off to L. Cavanagh for $17,035.

The new tobacco factory, the "Silver Queen," began business yesterday morning and the men are now busily engaged in turning out fine cigars. They are in the D. C. Points building. The force is composed of six men. Success to the enterprise.

Notwithstanding the extremely hot weather Sunday the audience at the Methodist church was good. Bro. Barker dedicated the morning to the Kentucky Wesleyan college. He represented the college in a more prosperous condition than it has been since the war—raised $206 from the Williamstown congregation. He said the plan he was following would raise $500,000 from Kentucky for this instituton.

Last Saturday was evidently not a good day for picnics. The one at Cartersville, given by Stephens and Lafferty, was somewhat of a frost. There were only twenty-seven boys present and not a girl, and the dancing did not go worth a cent.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1896. NO. 44.

THE following is an editorial copied from the London Financial News, a paper favorable to gold:

"There is a plain moral in the remark that if the United States would venture to cut herself adrift from Europe and take outright to silver she would have all Asia and America at her back and the command of the markets of both countries. The barrier of gold would be more fatal than any barrier of a customhouse. The bond of silver would be stronger than any bond of free trade. There can be no doubt about it that if the United States were to adopt a silver basis tomorrow British trade would be ruined before the year is out. Every American would be protected, not only at home, but in every other market. Of coures the United States would suffer to a certain extent through having to pay her obligations abroad in gold, but the loss of exchange under thi[illegible]nd wou[illegible] a mere drop in the bucket as compared to the profit to be reaped from the markets of South America and Asia, to say nothing ot Europe. The marvel is that the United States have not long since seized the opportunity. It has been a piece of luck that it has never occurred to the Americans to scoop us out of the world's markets by going on a silver basis, and it might serve us right if,irritated by the contemptible apathy, of our Government toward the silver problem, the Americans retaliated by freezingout gold. It could be easily done."

UNDER the habitual criminal law of Connecticut a man who has been convicted of a crime three times shall, at the expiration of his third sentence, be deemed incorrigible, and may be detained in prison for twenty-five years. The first application of the law has been made in the case of George A. Minor who is now detained in the Weathersfield prison.

GEN. BRAGG and the political faction of which he is the head, are trying to elect McKinley because of their admiration of President Cleveland and his administration, and their dislike of the nominee of the Democratic convention, and no longer than last week McKinley, was after them with a sharp stick.

According to data collected by Sec'y Parsons of the Colorado mining exchange the gold production of Cripple Creek for the first six months of this year was $7,256,000. He estimates the total production of 1896 will be $15,000,000. The camp produced in 1895 $9,199,317.

THE gold Democrats claim to be very much encouraged because of the large attendance at their State Convention held in Louisville last week. They adopted a lengthy platform denouncing the Chicago platform from the first to the last line.

IT is said that Senator Lindsay will, in due time, announce what he intends doing in the approaching election. Democrats do not have to make such announcements. It is always known where to place them.

BOURKE COCARAN is speaking for revenue. He would have done in the last presidential campaign just what he is doing now, had the pay been as good.

BRYAN has stirred up the Democracy of the State of New York. His visit to that State created an enthusiam that paralyzed his opponents.

THE Hiles educational law will increase the attendance at the public schools this fall and winter. It's unpopularity has already begun to develop.

AN unusually large crop of tobacco is being housed in this State. The conditions have been very favorable to that crop this year.

SENATOR FORAKER has gone to Europe. He could not forego the trip for political reasons as Mr. Whitney did.

THE Thomas Platt and Warner Miller factions in the Republican party in New York are antagonizing each other bitterly in that State.

HON. W. J. BRYAN will begin to travel over the States about Sept. 1st and address the people from the rear of a railroad train

THE Boltocrats want to appropriate the Democratic emblem for use on their ticket.

GEN. HARRISON will make speeches for McKinley during the campaign.

EACH political party is claiming large accessions from the other.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The Sheriff made his return, of the second special venire of (81) jurors ordered summoned, in the O'Hara case, all but a few of them answering. Those failing to answer were excused for one cause or another that was presented to the court except Boone Rogers, who was fined $20 for not obeying the summons.

When the jurors in charge of the Sheriff appeared in the court room John Deck, one of those who had been accepted, was not able to be present, and upon the statement of Dr. Furnish, the attending physician, Mr. Deck was excused from the jury.

The jury was completed just at noon Wednesday,and was composed of the following gentlemen: John McNeely, J. D. Acra, Walter Marshall, Jacob Rich, S. S. McWethy, A. C. Souther, G. T. Rue, Adam Hoffman, O. M. Ryle, H. J. Aylor, C. S. Balsly, C. E. Williams.

The hearing of testimony was commenced immediately after dinner.

The prosecution completed its testimony by the examination of one witness on Friday morning. The defense did not introduce many witnesses, having all its testimony in shortly after noon, Friday, when the jury was instructed by the court. It had been decided to have two speeches for the defense and one for the prosecution, and Gov. Bryan lead off in a speech of two hours and fifteen minutes, covering closely every point in the case. It was one of the Governor's best efforts and one that should have been and was entirely satisfactory to his client and his friends.

At the conclusion of Gov. Bryan's speech court adjourned until 7:30 a. m. Saturday.

When court convened Saturday morning, W. H. Marshall, one of the jurors was quite sick, but able to come into the court room. Atty. DeJarnett, was sick, also, but soon after he commenced his argument, he seemed to forget his illness, and was engaged in making one of his vigorous, close and characteristic arguments, concluding in about two hours.

Commonwealth's attorney Gray closed the argument's in a speech of about 45 minutes. confining himself entirely to the material facts in the case, concluding his speech by urging the jury to make a verdict if possible.

The jury was out an hour and fifteen minutes, when it returned a verdict of not guilty. Dr. O'Hara and wife and several of their friends shook hands with the jury and thanked them,and thusended a trial which has caused the court and officers a vast amount of labor. As to what the verdict would be there was a division of opinion, but the majority thinks the testimony justified the verdict ar returned by the jury.

COURT NOTES.

Both special venires were well scattered.

There was $499 83 deficit in the jury fund at this term.

The public took very little interest in the O'Hara trial.

Judge Greene did not tarry in town long after court adjourned.

Several of the members of the O'Hara jury served for the first time.

Court adjourned Saturday afternoon, having been in session two weeks.

The Commonwealth's attorney will never become opulent on the fines he recovers in this county.

The court turned off considerable business during the term, although there were only a few jury trials.

The lack of money with which to pay the jurors is a source of great inconvenience and annoyance: The jurors for the last three terms of court have not been paid.

Geo. McGlasson and J. R. Ryle, two of the jurors who served at the last trial of the O'Hara case, were among the names drawn at this trial. They had to come into court to be excused though.

During the O'Hara trial one juror was excused on account of sickness after he had been held for several days. Judge O'Hara, one of the attorneys for the defense, was taken very ill Friday morning and was not able to return to the court house thereafter during the trial, and Saturday morning Walter Marshall, one of the jurors was in, justice to himself, too ill to be in court.

AND Gen. Bragg, the national chairman of the third party, has served notice that it's his party's intention to do all it can to elect McKinley. How does Bragg's declaration suit Democrats who are following him?

Jeffersonian Planks.

[St. Louis Republic.]

The combination of appeals to the doctrines of the Sage of Monticello in condemnation of the Chicago platform with attacks on the utterances of the platform in criticism of the Federal judiciary for its abuse of injunction proceedings and its misconstruction of the Constitution is the most absurd ever launched into a political campaign.

When was the notion that criticism of the federal judiciary or fear of its encroachment on the constitutional rights of States ever incorporated into the Democratic creed? Certainly not by Mr. Jefferson who in several utterances warned the people against the centralizing tendency of the United States courts. In 1820 he wrote: "The judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground to undermine the foundations of our confederate fabric. * * * They are construing our Constitution from a co-ordination of general and special government to a general supreme one alone. This will lay all things at their feet. * * * Having found, from experience, that impeachment is an impracticable thing, a mere scarecrow, they consider themselves secure for life; they skulk from responsibility to public opinion."

Again he wrote; "The judiciary branch is the instrument which, working like gravity, without intermission, is to press us at last into one consolidated mass. * * * If Congress fails to shield the States from dangers so palpable and so imminent, the States must shield themselves."

In 1822 Jefferson wrote a letter in which he definitely and vigorously favored the appointment of United States Judges for fixed terms of four or six years, and the vesting of the power to remove them in the President and the Senate. He also wrote as almost his last word to the American people that the judicial was the most dangerous of all the branches of our Government, because the insufficiency of the means for the removal of the Judges "gave them a freehold and irresponsibility in office;" and he added that their decisions nevertheless become law by precedent, sapping by little, the foundations of the Constitution and working its change by construction before anyone has perceived that that invisible and helpless worm has been busily employed in consuming its substance."

The Supreme Court is sacred only in the sense that its authority, as embodied in standing decisions or orders, must be respected and obeyed. The Democratic party bowed to the decision of the Supreme Court which nullified a tax law on which the majority of the party was bent. The Democratic party has never counseled resistance to the authority of courts; but it has always held protests against unrighteous decisions and tendencies of courts and the reversal of the one and the correction of the other, in legal order, to be a patriotic duty. It is not a fetich worshipper and has never looked upon any instution of government as too sacred to be prevented from doing wrong.

IT is said that Gen. Buckner did not introduce into his county's Boltcrerat convention a resolution pledging the delegates to support the nominees of the Indianapolis convention. The General got himself into a trap by just such proceedings only a few months since.

SENATOR LINDSAY has got down off of the fence, and is now a member of the McKinley Aid Society. There was no law to prevent the Senator from doing that long since, and may he enjoy the fruits of his final conclusion.

We have just received a copy of "The Life and speeches of Bryan and Sewall" from the Publishers, and we desire to call the attention of our readers, who may be interested, to this book which is of great value, and should be in possession of all who are anxious to know of these two candidates. The price of the book is 25 cents for a paper cover, and $1.00 for cloth binding. The Publishers desire an agent to canvass this county, and will allow any agent a commission of sixty per cent. A Prospectus Book and circulars giving full particulars will be sent to any address for 30 cents. Address J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

BRYAN and Hill have crossed legs under the same mahogony, this week, which is construed to mean that Hill intends to support the Democratic ticket.

CRADDOCK of the Kentuckian-Citizen says: We attended the Bolters' State Convention at Louisville because we enjoy such theatrical scenes and because one gets a better impression of the animus of a convention by mingling with the delegates. We also enjoyed the social reunion of such a select crowd of well-to-do goldbugs as these delegates are, who are not hampered by financial troubles like free silver men are.

"Finest body of men ever assembled in convention in the grand old Commonwealth," was the heading of the Louisville Times while the convention was going on. "Don't you think so?" we were frequently asked. "Oh, yes," we replied, "too select, though, to represent the masses as does Bryan and his platform."

These men are entitled to the courage of their convictions, as they threw off all disguise and boldly affirmed they wanted to aid the Republicans by defeating Bryan and the silver Democrats.

Although thirteen counties (ominous) were not represented and some by very small delegations,they did, however, have a good crowd.

THE mask has been removed, and there is no longer any doubt as to the desires of the promoters of the third party movement. General Bragg, the national chairman, has given the scheme away, and it is well for all Democrats who have been inclined to break away from their party to give his declaration some thought. He says:

"The third ticket is in my estimation the surest way to assure the election of McKinley and Hobart, and we are working to that end. We are going to poll a big vote, and those Democrats who want to may vote for McKinley, and other Democrats will vote for the third ticket, thus Mr. Bryan's strength will be cut into deeply. In this way thousands ot votes that would otherwise drift to Bryan will be turned aside, and while not going to McKinley, will deprive Bryan of that much strength and accomplish his defeat. If we were to go to Democrats and urge them to vote for McKinley, we would receive a sneering reply that if we want to be Republicans we may, but that they are not going to be turncoats. On the other hand if we go to them and ask them to vote for a Democrat, they will listen to us. We shall make our fight on that line. We hope to get from 20,000 to 25,000 votes in Kentucky. We expect to get from 5,000 to 20,000 votes in Indiana. We shall poll a large vote in Illinois, and we expect to draw enough votes away from Bryan in Missouri to throw the balance in favor ot McKinley. Thus we expect to have those States vote for McKinley. The fight in this campaign is to be in the middle Western States and there we shall make our fight to get all the votes we can. We shall not draw from McKinley, but by sapping the strength of Bryan, we hope to draw away enough votes to accomplish his defeat.

IF any one of several distinguished gentlemen of Covington or Newport takes a little rural jaunt now days, he is at once suspicioned of harboring Congressional aspirations, and something like the following, taken from Wednesday's Kentucky Post, appears in print the next day:

A solitary traveler rode along a weed-bedraggled road in Boone County Monday in the early dark of the evening.

He was mounted upon a large sorrel horse, and his head was bowed in thought.

Another traveler approached from the east. As he sighted the figure of the stranger on the sorrel steed, an exclamation of astonishment escaped him.

"Colonel Washington, as I live! Why, what are you doing here, so far from Newport?"

"Coming to visit my aunt, Johnson," calmly replied the Colonel.

"Tut, tut, George," replied the other man. "I saw Albert S. Berry galloping this way not an hour ago."

"Who says I am on his track for the congressional nomination?" hotly demanded the Colonel.

"Nobody that I know of," responded the man who had been addressed as Johnson. Why do you ask such a question?"

But the Colonel vouchsafed no answer. He merely gathered up the reins of his charger and dashed off into the gloomy defiles of the forest in the direction of Bullittsville.

Afar ahead of him was faintly heard the rapidly falling hoofs of a horse.

"Berry will kill that beast, if he goads him so hard," was his ejaculation.

[Hopkinsville Kentuckian]

The farmers of this and adjoining counties who are raising tobacco this year complain that the worms have appeared by the million and are destroying the growing crop at a rapid rate. A week or so ago there was every indication that there would be a splendid crop this fall, but the outlook now is very gloomy. Hands to worm tobacco are paid all the way from $1 to $1 50 per day, and many cannot secure help at any price. From every section of the county comes the report that there are millions of worms A number of tobacco patches have been abandoned and the worms have clear track. In Trigg county a large per cent. of the crop has bern turned out.

J. A. Radford, of The Square, on the Clarksville pike, is the largest tobacco grower in Christian County, if not in Kentucky. This year he has in 200 acres. 100 acres of which is one field. Up to the time the worms began their ravages he cultivated the crop with eleven hands, but he now has employed 75 hands killing the worms. In one field he has 30 negro men in one squad of workmen, while the others are divided up into smaller forces. The earlier planting is now ready for the knife and is in fine condition and a splendid crop. Many of the larger plants measure seven feet from tip to tip of the top leaves. Mr. Radford has 800 acres in his farm and it is one of the finest tracts of land in the county.

MAIL MATTER.

New Scheme for Its Collection in Washington—A Collecting Wagon That Is Intended to Obviate Delays Being Built as an Experiment.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Gen. Neilson, second assistant postmaster-general, has a scheme which he will put into active practice within the next sixty days, adding very materially to Washington's postal facilities. It is a new kind of wagon collection, intended to obviate delays and to meet the occasional difficulties that now present themselves at the city postoffice.

If the experiment works satisfactorily, as it is believed it will, the department will introduce it elsewhere. A wagon especially constructed for the purpose is now being built at Hartford, Ct. It will be large enough to accommodate a carrier, independent of the assistant, who will do the driving and take the mail from the street boxes.

This wagon will be put on at an early hour in the morning and kept on its rounds until after midnight. Every box in the business centers and other populous districts will be visited one after the other, the territory assigned to the wagon being gone over constantly, a new trip being commenced as soon as the original starting point is reached. The carrier in charge will sort the mail, making up distributions for all trains. The out-of-town mail will be pouched and delivered to the proper railroad station. Other pouches will be made up for the various substations where carriers are assigned for the city post offices.

In this way Gen. Neilson expects to reduce to a minimum the time between the receipt of a letter by the government and its delivery. He says any letter then dropped in any box on the route of this wagon will be sure of getting aboard the first mail train out of the city, thus saving delays that frequently occur by the dropping of letters in boxes just after a collection has been made and an hour or two before another is due. By pouching the city mail, loss of time at the main or branch offices is overcome, owing to the fact that this mail reaches the office sooner than it otherwise would, and comes in sorted and ready for immediate distribution. He has great hopes for the future of this continuous collection, and will watch its development in Washington with careful attention.

BRECKINRIDGE BARRED.

Committee Will Not Allow His Name to Go Before the Primaries.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 20.—The democratic committee of the Seventh district met here Wednesday and called a convention to be held September 30, to nominate a candidate for congress, the convention to be held at Frankfort. Hon. John D. Carroll, of Henry; Hon. Evan F. Settle, of Owen, and Col. John O. Hodges, of Lexington, candidates, were present, and made short speeches, agreeing to abide by the result and to support the Chicago platform and nominees. Col. Breckinridge was not present, but passed through the city en route to Louisville, where he will attend the state convention of national democrats.

A rule was adopted by the committee making a qualification for participating in the convention primaries as a candidate or voter, indorsement of the Chicago nominees and platform. This practically disposes of Breckinridge as a candidate, he having repudiated both, and there is no question of his independent candidacy, and probably with the indorsement of the republicans of the district.

WENT UP IN SMOKE.

Three Stores at Columbus, Ga., Gutted by Fire—Loss About $140,000.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 20.—Fire broke out about 11 o'clock Tuesday night in Lewis' dry goods store, in the James A. Lewis four-story building, and before the flames were checked three stores were gutted from cellar to roof. Mr. Lewis had just sold his stock to F. Loewenheirz, proprietor of the Bee Hive store. The stock was valued at $40,000 with only $9,000 insurance. The Lewis building was probably valued at $20,000 and about covered by insurance. M. E. Joseph, wholesale drygoods, next door south, had $75,000 stock, about $32,000 insurance. The building was owned by G. W. Woodruff and probably covered by insurance. Dr. Robert Carter's drug store, next door north of the Lewis building, was entirely destroyed. Value and insurance unknown. H. Geyer, merchant tailor, was also burned out, but a good part of his stock was saved. The fire was got under control shortly after midnight.

Joe Patchen Lowers His Record.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 20.—Fully 25,000 people were present at Rigby park Wednesday and saw Joe Patchen, the famous pacing stallion, go against the world's stallion pacing record of 2:03¼, held by John R. Gentry. Patchen made one mile in 2:03¾ and a second mile half an hour later in 2:04¼. This lowers Patchen's record of 2:04 by a quarter of a second and is the fastest mile ever trotted or paced in New England.

The Majestic Breaks the Record.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The White Star steamer Majestic, which arrived at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, made the fastest passage she has ever made from Daunt's Rock to this port. RIOTOUS SOLDIERS.

Twenty-Five Privates Were on Their Way From the Columbus Barracks

To Different Forts in the West—Four Men Cut More or Less Seriously and the Car Damaged—Army Officials May Take Action in the Matter.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Twenty-five policemen were sent to the Union depot Thursday night at the call of the Ft. Wayne railroad, to meet an incoming train bearing a carload of drunken and riotous privates of the United States army. The conductor of the train had telegraphed ahead for assistance to prevent loss of life and to protect the railroad property, but by the time the crowd reached Chicago the rioting had ceased.

The 28 privates were by themselves, without a commissioned officer, on their way from the Columbus barracks to the various forts throughout the west. While passing through Indiana Thursday afternoon a fight started between Privates Hayes and Karpp. A general riot followed, in which four men were cut more or less seriously and a number of the car windows broken. Karpp had one of his fingers broken. The whole number of soldiers were drunk, with the exception of three or four. At the station here the men were sullen and uncommunicative, and as the railroad was willing to let them go the police officials decided to let the army officials take action in the matter.

LORD RUSSELL,

Chief Justice of England, Addresses the American Bar Association.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 21.—No greater ovation was ever presented to any speaker in Saratoga than that accorded Lord Russell, lord chief justice of England, when he entered convention hall at 10:25 o'clock Thursday morning to address the American Bar association in the nineteenth annual convention here assembled. Applause was long continued by the vast audience of 4,500 persons. His lordship and Sir Frank Lockwood were escorted to the platform by President Storey, of the Bar association, where there was already assembled Judge Rufus Peckham, Attorney General Harmon, Court of Appeals Judge Bartlett, Courtland Parker, United States District court Judge Coxe, Randolph Tucker, Henry Hitchcock, Wallen Butler, Hon. Edward J. Phelps, Everett P. Wheeler, James Carter, Nathaniel Shipman, Bishop John P. Newman and Montague Crackenthorpe. Just under the gallery sat Col. Ingersoll, who was an interested spectator. It was exactly half-past ten o'clock when President Storey stepped to the front of the platform and introduced the distinguished jurist. He said:

"I have now the very great pleasure, not of introducing, for he needs no introduction to any English speaking lawyer, but of presenting to you, Lord Russell, of Killowen, the lord chief justice of England, who will deliver the annual address on 'International Arbitration.'"

As Lord Russell stepped forward the vast audience broke into unrestrained applause, which continued for fully a minute. Throughout the delivery of his paper, which was more of an address than a forensic effort, the closest attention was given by the audience.

Lord Russell, in his address, recommended the principles of international arbitration, and at its conclusion the Bar association passed resolutions, thanking the chief justice for his eloquent address.

HIGHWAYMEN

Make Three Daring Holdups in St. Louis in the Past Two Days.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—Three daring highwaymen, driving about the streets in a buggy, made three successful holdups in the past two days. The plan was to drive slowly along the outer streets till a single pedestrian was encountered, when they would jump from the buggy, rob the victim and drive rapidly away. Miss Frances Weston, the first victim, was robbed of her purse containing nine dollars at the corner of Glasgow and St. Louis avenues Wednesday. An hour later Mrs. William Hopbaugh was robbed while standing on the sidewalk in front of her home on North Vandeventer avenue.

Thursday Mrs. Mary Seiding was robbed by the same party at Cardinal and Park avenues.

The total sum of these robberies is small, but panic has set in, and until the highwaymen are arrested, lady shoppers will travel in platoons.

FIVE NEGROES

Mobbed by a Band of White Men Near Hillside, Tex.

WACO, Tex., Aug. 21.—A mob of 25 white men entered the hut of five Negro cotton pickers at Hillside Wednesday night. They shot Anderson Vaughan because he was slow in responding to their command of "Hands up." He and his companions were taken out, and Vaughan, who fell upon the ground, was beaten and kicked, dying in a short time. His companions were beaten in a frightful manner. They made their way here Thursday morning, and officers went to the scene. The members of the mob were masked. It is said that numerous thefts occurred in the neighborhood, and the Negroes were accused of them. This is supposed to have been the cause of the mob's action.

AMERICAN CITIZENS

Arrested in Guatemala Charged With Smuggling Munitions of War Into That Country.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—A dispatch from New Orleans says that news has reached there of the arrest at Ponte Barrios, Guatemala, of R. E. Caldwell and another American citizen, charged with smuggling munitions of war into the country. Caldwell is engaged by Sylvanus Miller in constructing a railway from Ponte Barrios into the interior, as is also his companion under arrest. The contraband goods, it is said here, were shipped from Cincinnati, over the Louisville & Nashville railroad, and thence to Ponte Barrios by the Macheca line of steamers from this port, concealed in bales of hay. In twelve bales of the last consignment were found 82,000 rounds of ammunition. These shipments of hay have been going on since June and the Guatemala authorities say this is the second find they have discovered. Caldwell says he knows absolutely nothing about the contraband goods, and Mr. Miller asked the Macheca folks to find out who the real shippers were. It is not known for whom the contraband goods were really intended.

Baron Von Zedwitz Inquest Critized.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The Field in its issue Saturday criticizes what it terms the hurried and inadequate inquest into the death of Baron Von Zedwitz, owner of the yacht Isolde, who was killed on Tuesday in a collision between that boat and the German emperor's yacht, the Meteor. The paper ascribes the disaster to an error of judgment on the part of those handling the Meteor.

LEADERS TO CONSULT

In Regard to the Future Conduct of the Struggle for Freedom.

Gens. Gomez and Maceo Say Nothing Can Be Accomplished Under the Present System of Fighting—They Favor a Campaign of Destruction.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—It is said that within the next month Gen. Estrada Palma, the minister plenipotentiary of the Cuban republic to the United States, and Gonzales Quesada, the secretary of the legation, with other prominent supporters of the revolutionary cause, will go to Cuba to consult with President Cisneros as the future conduct of the battle for freedom.

Gens. Gomez and Maceo are both said to have expressed the opinion that nothing can be accomplished under the present system of fighting. They do not want to go on struggling, as during the ten years' war, with no hope of gaining the freedom of the island unless they secure recognition as belligerents from the United States. To do this it is claimed by both the commanders that they must inaugurate a campaign of the most destructive character. Heretofore when parts of their armies have invaded a town they have simply driven the Spanish forces out, and then have themselves retreated.

Their plan now is to make forced marches upon all of the interior cities, and after effecting their capture destroy them. They can not do this, however, without the sanction of the Cuban junta in the United States, and it is for the purpose of settling the issue thus raised that Palma, Quesada and others have been summoned to the island. How these leaders will get to Cuba is, of course, a mystery to all save themselves. It is stated on good authority that three large expeditions are to be sent out from different places in this country and that they will unite and land at a designated point. The vessels will be armed and prepared to fight if they should be overtaken by Spanish cruisers. At the same time that the three large expeditions go out there will be other ships sent to the coast as decoys. The leaders in the movement have no apprehension of their ability to effect a landing. It is expected that the conference between Cisneros, Palma, Quesada and others will result in a decision to start both of the armies of Gomez and Maceo on the aggressive about the 1st of October, and that when a town is captured it will be destroyed.

Maceo, it is said, would like to inaugurate a line of action something akin to Sherman's march to the sea, and it is believed that he will have his way.

BUSH FIRES.

Several Cities in British Columbia Are in Danger.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—A special to the Call from Vancouver, B. C., says:

Bush fires are raging with unabated fury in the mainland of British Columbia. New Westminster is surrounded, and, as firemen can not be at all places at once, it is feared that some part of the city will be destroyed by the oncoming flames in spite of them. At the Burnaby city limits at Eighth avenue, at the Sapperton city limits on the Pitt river high road, flames are reaching out to the city from every part of the compass, and should rain not come and wind spring up in the wrong direction nothing can save portions of the city from being destroyed.

The long-suffering farmers of the lowlands of Westminster district met Saturday in large numbers and decided to unite in petitioning both the provisional and federal governments to deepen and dyke the river. The most prominent speakers stated that this must be done, or all ranches along the valley subject to floods would be abandoned to the tax collector. As wheat grown on this land took first prize, with all the world in competition, at the Chicago world's fair, such a sequel to the floods would be disastrous to the whole province.

TWO DESPERADOES

Captured and Jailed at McKeesport, Pa.—The Third One Still at Large.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., Aug. 24.—Walter Russell was captured in the woods near here Sunday and lodged in jail with his brother, Samuel Russell. The Russells, with a third desperado, John Parker, fatally assaulted and robbed an unknown Pole on a freight train on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad Saturday night and afterward shot Edward Lewis, of Boston, Pa., who attempted to arrest them when the train arrived at that place. The bullet struck Lewis under the eye, passing through his neck. He has a bare chance of recovery. Parker is still at large and is being hunted by officers and citizens. All three of the men are notorious burglars.

A Circus Struck by a Cyclone.

BURLINGTON, Ind., Aug. 24.—The Wallace circus was struck by a small cyclone in this city Saturday night and the canvas torn to shreds. Several animals escaped from broken cages, but were recaptured. Four men were slightly injured by falling poles. The damage amounted to fully $10,000. The storm struck before the doors had been opened to admit the people. Fourteen barns in this county were struck by lightning and destroyed. Loss something like $20,000.

A BIG TASK.

Poll of Every County in the United States to Be Taken.

The Work Will Be Done by the National League of Republican Clubs—It Will Be Known Before Election How Voters Will Cast Their Ballots.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—The republican managers will endeavor to find out every republican who wants to vote for Bryan and every democrat who intends to vote for McKinley. This immense task will be undertaken by the 20,000 organizations of the national league of republican clubs. The actual work will begin next week, although the officials at the national headquarters of the league have been preparing for it for several months. It is expected that the canvass will cover every county in the country, and that when it is completed the republican managers will know exactly where they stand. As a starter 10,000 letters of introduction will be mailed Friday. These reports are expected to begin arriving in about two weeks. A force of clerks will be put to work on these and they will be tabulated as soon as they arrive. As the canvass progresses reports will be made to the national executive committee.

At the republican national headquarters everybody is busy and everywhere the click of the typewriter is heard as the letters and instructions are being turned out and sent broadcast to the various party workers over the country. Down in the shipping room literature is being sent broadcast at the rate of 1,250,000 pieces per day.

At the state headquarters the same activity is found. Innumerable conferences are being held and there are daily many visitors from every section of the state. In the shipping room there is a general rush to get out the big bundles of literature that goes to the various county committees for distribution.

GOLD DEMOCRATS

Of Kentucky Meet in Convention at Louisville to Select Delegates to the National Convention.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 21.—The sound money democrats, of Kentucky, met in state convention in Music hall Thursday afternoon and Thursday night, and amid the greatest enthusiasm adopted a platform embodying their views; named delegates-at-large to the national convention at Indianapolis; selected electors from the state at large; formed an organization to car[illegible] on the campaign, and indorsed ex-Gov. S. B. Buckner for the nomination for vice president. It was one of the most remarkable gatherings in Kentucky's political history.

Ex-Gov. Simon Bolivar Buckner entered the hall just before the convention was called to order and he was given a rousing reception. After a prayer by Rev. C. R. Hemphill, ex-Lieut. Gov. James R. Rindman was elected temporary chairman. His speech of thanks was followed by a loud demand for ex-Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge, who sat on the stage with his wife. The silver tongued orator came slowly to the front of the stage, and the convention went wild, the body of the hall showing a scene of wildly tossing hands, men on chairs, hats flying and every mouth emitting a yell. Above the confusion arose the name of "Breckinridge."

Mr. Breckinridge raising his hand secured quiet as if by magic and from the first few syllables the gathering was captured.

Just as Col. Breckinridge was bringing his speech to a close, a spectator in the rear of the hall yelled "Hurrah for Bryan," amid cries of "Throw him out, throw him out." The police escorted the fellow through the door. Col. Breckinridge asked them to let the disturber alone and closed with a plea for money good the world over and for a tariff for revenue only.

After the transaction of minor business the convention adjourned at 4:15 to 5:15 o'clock when the body reassembled and heard reports from committees, soon taking another recess until 7:30 o'clock.

Judge Quincy Ward, of Paris, was chosen permanent chairman just before the last adjournment. He took the chair when the convention re-assembled at 7:40 o'clock. A. J. Carroll, of Louisville, ex-Gov. Buckner, W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Lexington, and W. F. Browder, of Russellville, were chosen as delegates from the state at large to Indianapolis. The roll call showed that 114 out of the 119 counties were represented in the convention.

On motion of Col. Breckinridge the delegates to Indianapolis were instructed to vote for ex-Gov. Simon Bolivar Buckner for vice president as long as they deemed it advisable.

Gov. Buckner made a stirring speech. He said he had determined to retire from politics, but in a case like this, old and young must do their duty alike.

R. T. Tyler, of Paducah, and Judge Quincy Ward, of Paris, were named as electors at large. The report of the committee on resolutions was adopted unanimously. After indorsing the teachings of Jefferson, Jackson, Benton, Tilden and Cleveland, the report demands a currency measured by the existing gold standard and which shall consist of gold with a bank currency.

The convention adjourned sine die at 11 o'clock.

Tragedy in a Pear Orchard.

MARSHALL, Tex., Aug. 21.—While returning from camp meeting with a young lady in a buggy, James A. Darden, a railway employe, stopped and entered the pear orchard of Henry Granberry, three miles east of Marshall. Granberry had been warned that his orchard would be robbed and with a friend was in the orchard. Both fired in the air, when Darden returned the fire with a pistol, striking Granberry in the head, causing death in a few hours. Darden surrendered to the sheriff Thursday morning, had an examination trial and was bailed in the sum of $2,500.

WEEKLY REVIEW

Of Trade in the United States by R. G. Dun & Co.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co. say Saturday in their weekly review of trade:

Failures for the week have been 28[illegible] in the United States, against 222 last year, and 27 in Canada, against 43 last year.

Political events of the week had no definite influence upon business prospects, for the phenomenal variations in sterling exchange and the beginning of imports of gold, although following the great meeting in Madison Square garden on Tuesday may be fairly attributed to the accumulating excess of merchandise exports over imports, to which attention has been repeatedly called, exports from New York for the past two weeks having been 20 per cent. larger and imports here 21 per cent. smaller than last year. The rapid movement of grain and the unusually early marketing of cotton tends strongly to aid the banking syndicate which has undertaken to regulate foreign exchanges.

Withdrawals of money to the interior are rather large and commercial loans are hard to place, and this difficulty checks many new enterprises and business in many departments.

Bank clearings are small for the week, 15 per cent. less than last year. Railroad earnings are not as good as might be expected for the first half of August, exceeding those of last year only 3.9 per cent.

Speculation has advanced wheat over one per cent. during the week, corn a small fraction and cotton ⅝c. the principal motive power being reports of injury to growing crops.

The boot and shoe industry is rapidly nearing the end of past orders, excepting in women's grain and buff shoes, of which there are still orders for some weeks to come, while others are constantly received; but in other branches the new business is light. Prices are a shade weaker. Leather is weaker, with a small demand, although restricted supplies have caused a shade of advance in some kinds. Hides at Chicago averaged more than 3 per cent lower for the week again, the fall in the past five weeks having averaged about 25 per cent.

The iron and steel manufacture has only continued depression to report and Bessemer pig has sold at $10.40 at Pittsburgh, while Southern No. 1 is offered at prices equivalent to $10 at New York, and nearly all finished products are being sold below the current quotations. There is rapid curtailment of production, but in spite of this the supply of finished products appears to greatly exceed the demand for them. The one bright spot is a sale of 9,000 tons steel rails to Japan for refitting railways in that country, which makes an aggregate of 45,000 tons exported during the year. Nothing encouraging can yet be said regarding the woolen manufacture and the demand for goods, even at recent reductions in prices is still disappointingly small.

A heavy auction sale of cotton goods brought prices which were considered quite encouraging, and the current demand is fairly maintained, although the mills are not inclined to make large contracts for the future in view of the rise in the raw material. In general the working force in the textile branches does not appear to have increased.

DR. NANSEN,

The Arctic Explorer, Arrives at Tromsoe, Norway, and was Given an Enthusiastic Reception.

TROMSOE, Norway, Aug. 22.—Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, has arrived here on board Sir George Baden Powell's auxiliary steam yacht, the Otaria. He was given an enthusiastic reception. The Fram was in port and as soon as the Otaria arrived Capt. Sverdrup and the members of the crew boarded the yacht, where an affecting meeting took place between Dr. Nansen and his comrades. Mutual congratulations were exchanged upon the escape from the perils of the Arctic seas, and the occasion was altogether a most enjoyable one for those who formed the expedition.

Tromsoe was gaily decorated in honor of the adventurous explorers.

Excellent Photograph of the Eclipse.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Mr. Norman Lockyer, the well-known astronomer and editor of Nature, has written a letter to the Times, in which he says the most excellent observations of the recent total eclipse of the sun were obtained by Mr. Shackleton, an astronomer, who was conveyed on Sir General Baden Powell's yacht, the Otaria, to Nova Zembla. He obtained a number of photographs, which will go far to neutralize the failures of the astronomical expeditions to Norway.

Plot to Dethrone the Sultan of Morocco.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—A dispatch to the Central News from Tangier says that a plot has been discovered at Marrasch aiming at the dethronement of the sultan of Morrocco, Mula-Abdel-Aziz, in favor of his elder brother, Muley Mahomet. Four provincial governors have been murdered by the plotters. Wholesale arrests have been made in connection with the conspiracy and a general state of terror prevails among the inhabitants.

HAVANA, Aug. 22.—The Spanish force, commanded by Col. Hernandez, has had three engagements with rebels, under Bermudez, near Isabel, province of Pinar del Rio. Fifteen of the rebels were killed. The troops lost a captain and 21 privates wounded.

Gen. Bosh reports that the rebel leader Rabi attacked a convoy at Jiguani, near Bayamo. The insurgents were repulsed. Their losses are unknown. Twenty-two of the troops were wounded. The troops found a number of unexploded torpedoes in the road.

Secretary Smith's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Secretary Smith had just returned from a five-mile spin on his bicycle Sunday evening when he was seen by the United Associated Presses reporter. He said he had no further information to add to that already made public about his resignation from the cabinet. The interior department will be left in charge of First Assistant Secretary Sims on September 1, next, unless, in the meantime, the president names a successor to Mr. Smith.

Americans Underselling the Germans.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—A report received at the department of state from Consul Wm. D. Warner, at Cologne, shows that Americans are underselling the Germans in barbed wire and wire nails in Japan. Hamburg importing houses are forced to buy the American wire because their customers have begun to purchase it directly from the United States. American competition, though felt elsewhere, has been especially noticeable in Japan.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The Italian ship Francesco Ciampe, Capt. Maresco, from Swansea August 19, for San Francisco, arrived at Falmouth Saturday with her bow plates bent and her frames broken. He was using a Flobert rifle in the kitchen and said the shooting was accidental. The ball entered the left side of the girl's neck and took an upward course to the brain. The boy was arrested.

The amount by agencies follows: Columbus, O. $3,700,000; Washington, $1,975,000; Boston, Mass., $1,840,000; Augusta, Me., $775,000; San Francisco, $725,000.

Sulphur Trust.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Deputy Consul Ritter reports to the department of state from Catania the formation of the Anglo-Sicilian sulphur trust. The United States consumes about 110,000 tons of the Sicilian product per year; and higher prices, Mr. Ritter says, will cause great injury to the acid makers and manufacturers of the United States.

BRYAN'S SPEECH.

Opinions of Leading Journals on the Democratic Candidate's Acceptance.

Mr. Bryan's speech was calm and conservative.—N. Y. Mercury.

The speech was, in truth, one of the most effective and well considered that could have been devised.—Brooklyn Citizen.

A rather lengthy, but an able and ingenious statement of the theories and convictions embodied in the Chicago platform.—Baltimore Sun.

Mr. Bryan's speech was a model in its way, and just the speech for the occasion—to produce the right effect.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

The conservatism of his New York speech is to be commended. In appealing to the reason of the American people he has done the most patriotic thing he has done since he was nominated.—Columbus Dispatch.

It is safe to say that Mr. Bryan said nothing which can injure his chances of election and the great demonstration in his honor will probably increase the enthusiasm among his followers in all parts of the country.—Atlanta Journal.

It will be ridiculed by the critics and its fallacies will be exposed, but it will stick. It is the kind of speech to arouse the enthusiasm of those people to whom it is mainly addressed; and, delivered in New York, it will shake McKinleyism to its center.—Mobile Register.

His bitterest opponents may search his address in vain for a phrase which in the remotest degree suggests the communism and anarchism of which they accuse him. They may sift it without finding a sentence which is merely oratorical, a phrase which is not part of the train of logic by which he has demonstrated the validity of his doctrine.—N. Y. Journal.

The oration was an argument for free silver. The orator has taken the leading place on the debate of the campaign, even though he does not again open his mouth. The speech will take its place as the foremost campaign document of the struggle. The whole ground is covered, and really covered. The candidate's grasp of the great situation is complete and Napoleonic. His speech is not only an oration, but like all great speeches, it is a text book. "It reads."—Detroit News.

It is a mighty argument, submitted to the conscience and intelligence of an aroused and patriotic people. It deals not at all in rhetoric or flowers of speech, but plainly and clearly discusses the great economic questions before the people, which the candidate makes the one supreme issue of the battle, and does it modestly and with convincing logic, irresistible facts and consummate mastery of the potential force of the English language.—Pittsburgh Post.

Mr. Bryan's speech was a strong, statesmanlike defense of his platform. It was calm and argumentative in tone and appealed to the nobler, not the baser, sentiments and aspirations of the people. The tour of the democratic candidate has been beneficial. It has demonstrated that this country is not divided by sectional lines. The plain people of all sections think and feel alike. They have common opinions and aspirations. It has proved to the eastern people that the candidate for popular suffrages who has been pictured to them as a disturber and visionary demagogue is one of themselves and an earnest, thoughtful patriot honestly seeking the welfare of the whole country.—St. Louis Republic.

Mr. Bryan's speech in New York is a magnificent, manly and courageous presentation of the views which he is championing in behalf of the great majority of the people of this country. The character of the man shines through it. Logical, clear and comprehensive, it is simple in language and apt in illustration. The tone is high. The sentiments are American. It appeals to the intellect as well as to the emotions. It dodges nothing. Every issue is squarely met with the force of a man gifted with the loftiest powers, skilled in the marshaling of argument, inspired by the greatness and righteousness of his cause and afire with the knowledge that upon the outcome of the pending conflict depends in large measure the future, not only of the American people, but of the human race.—Denver Times.

——When the plain people of the United States see the Standard Oil magnates, the sugar trust agents, the Wall street speculators and the corporation attorneys deserting the democratic camp and going over to the McKinley camp they know what it means. It is an object lesson of incalculable value in the political education of the people. It is this, in connection with the affirmative declarations of the Chicago platform and the popularity of the candidates placed upon it that has done so much in the last month to solidify the farmers, the laboring men and the working people generally in support of the democratic ticket.—Illinois State Register.

——Mr. Hanna continues to put none but millionaires on guard.—Chicago Chronicle.

—"Did old Grumpey make much of a kick when you asked him for his daughter?" "Did he make much of a kick? The doctor says I am threatened with curvature of the spine."—Detroit Free Press.

This will be a memorable year for the publication of the reminiscences of celebrated actresses. Bernhardt, Duse, Ellen Terry and Mme. Ristori are all putting the finishing touches on their autobiographies, which are to be published in the autumn. Probably Mme. Ristori's book will be the most interesting, for she has been almost as great a figure in society as on the stage.

A London publisher announces a new and full edition of Carlyle's works in 30 large octavo volumes. It is to be called the "centenary edition," and H. D. Traill is to edit it.

LORD RUSSELL SPEAKS.

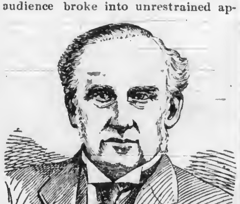
England's Chief Justice Before the Bar at Saratoga.

His Theme Is International Arbitration—Praise for the United States—English People Must Stand Together.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 21.—No greater ovation was ever presented to any speaker in Saratoga than that accorded Lord Russell, lord chief justice of England, when he entered Convention hall Thursday morning to address the American Bar association in the nineteenth annual convention here assembled. Applause was long continued by the audience of 4,500 persons. In introducing Lord Russell President Storey said:

"I have now the very great pleasure, not of introducing, for he needs no introduction to any English-speaking lawyer, but of presenting to you Lord Russell, of Killowen, the lord chief justice of England, who will deliver the annual address on 'International Arbitration.'"

As Lord Russell stepped forward the audience broke into unrestrained applause, which continued for fully a minute. He prefaced his address by saying:



SIR CHARLES RUSSELL.

"My first words must be in acknowledgment of the signal honors done me by inviting me to address you on this interesting occasion. You are a congress of lawyers, met here to take council, in no narrow spirit, upon questions affecting your profession, to consider the needs for legislation which time and experience develop; to consider the tendencies of legislation, state and federal, and the course of judicial decision." [Applause.]

Speaking of the formation of international law, Lord Russell complimented the United States thus:

"It is not too much to say that the undoubted stream of tendency in modern international law to mitigate the horrors of war, to humanize or to make less inhuman its methods, and to narrow the area of its consequential evils, is largely due to the policy of your statesmen and the moral influence of your jurists."

Speaking of the difficulties in the way of effective arbitration, he said:

"But there are differences to which, even as between individuals, arbitration is inapplicable—subjects which find their counterpart in the affairs of nations. Men do not arbitrate where character is at stake, nor will any self-respecting nation readily arbitrate on questions touching its national independence or affecting its honor.

"Again, a nation may agree to arbitrate and then repudiate its agreement. Who is to coerce it? Or, having gone to arbitration and been worsted, it may decline to be bound by the award. Who is to compel it?

"These considerations seem to me to justify two conclusions. The first is, that arbitration will not cover the whole field of international controversy, and the second, that unless and until the great powers of the world, in league, bind themselves to coerce a recalcitrant member of the family of nations—we have still to face the more than possible disregard by powerful states of the obligations of good faith and of justice."

Concluding, the speaker said:

"Mr. President, I began by speaking of the two great divisions — American and British—of that English-speaking world which you and I represent to-day, and with one more reference to them I end.

"Who can doubt the influence they possess for insuring the healthy progress and peace of mankind? But if this influence is to be fully felt, they must work together in cordial friendship, and each people in its own sphere of action. If they have great power, they have also great responsibility. No cause they espouse can fail; no cause they oppose can triumph. The future is, in large part, theirs. They have the making of history in the times that are to come. The greatest calamity that could befall would be strife which should divide them.

"Let us pray that this shall never be. Let us pray that they, always self-respecting, each in honor upholding its own flag, safeguarding its own heritage of right, and respecting the rights of others, each in its own way fulfilling its high national destiny, shall yet work in harmony for the progress and the peace of the world."

Lord Russell concluded his address at 12:15 o'clock. As he closed the audience vigorously applauded, and then Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont, moved that the thanks of the association be presented to Lord Russell for the eloquent address which they had had the pleasure of hearing. This was carried, as was also the following:

"Resolved, That the American Bar association concurs with the principles enunciated in the eloquent address of Lord Chief Justice Russell. Be it further,

"Resolved, That it be referred to the committee on international law to recommend such further cause of international arbitration."

At the conclusion of the reading of the several papers in the afternoon, Chairman McClain invited Mr. Crackenthorpe, of England, a member of the English council of legal education, to say a word. Mr. Crackenthorpe spoke briefly of the English council of legal education, which he said had done much toward the higher education of English lawyers. He expressed his admiration for the excellent law schools existing in the United States, and said that England was far behind America in this respect.

SHOULD HAVE PASSPORTS.

Consul Germain's Advice to American Students in Europe.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Eugene Germain, United States consul at Zurich, Switzerland, in a communication to the state department enjoins on every American coming to reside in Europe, and particularly those desirous of attending the higher schools, not to fail to procure a passport at home. Tourists are not required to have passports; still, it is always handy to have one, either for identification purposes, or to establish nationality in case of accident or trouble.

HUMOROUS.

—"You say he's a nobleman of high rank?" "Yes." "Very high?" "Very." "What's the number of his scandals?"—Chicago Evening Post.

—Flower-Mission Drawbacks.—"Julia, what did that poor man say when you gave him that lovely bunch of daisies?" "He said he would much rather have a good boiled cabbage."—Chicago Record.

—Deceived.—"Why did Constance refuse young De Riche?" "He deceived her. He told her he was worth a million, when in reality he is worth two millions."—Detroit Free Press.

—"What's this I hear you're going to do, Jennie?" said an Aberdeen lass to another young woman. "Well, Maggie, lass, I'm just going to marry that farm over there, and live with the little chap on it."—Tit-Bits.

—A Blessing.—Watts—"It seems rather sad that the old prophets had to die before their prophecies were fulfilled." Potts—"I think it was a good thing. Just think what nuisances they would have made of themselves going about saying: 'I told you so.'"—Indianapolis Journal.

—"Now that I have your consent, my charming Bessie, allow me to ask one question: Are you superstitious?" "Superstitious? Why do you want to know, Frank?" "I cannot tell you before you have answered my question." "Well, then, I am not superstitious in the least." He (overjoyed)—"Then I may tell you with an easy conscience that you are my 13th sweetheart."—Neue Fliegende Blaetter.

BURNS WAS A PEN NAME.

The Habit Among Authors of Disguising One's Real Cognomen.

Almost every writer at the beginning of his career knows a trepidation and timidity that makes him glad to hide behind a "sobriquet," or, as the French usually call them, "noms de guerre." It might be thought that these are chosen haphazard. Though this may be so in some cases, it is usually otherwise. As much thought is often expended in their construction as was ever devoted to the title of a book. Some adopt a "nom de plume" because of innate modesty; others through moral fear of the public and critics; yet a larger class find a satisfaction in writing over a name more suggestive, it may be, or romantic than the original family name. Sometimes the style and kind of work done by an author suggests or decides the pseudonym, while in the great majority of cases, simply that of a euphonious or fanciful name is desired.

The simplest forms—and these constitute a goodly number—consist of the initials of the author's real name, such as "L. E. L." (Letitia Elizabeth Landon); "G. A. S." (George Augustus Sala); and "B." (the late Lord Bramwell), or some transposition of the real name, such as "Dalmocand" (used by George Macdonald), and "Draw," which is simply Ward written backward. As another example might be mentioned, the famous prima donna, Mme. Trebelli, whose real name was "Gillebert," her nom de theatre being her surname spelled backward, with the initial "G" omitted.

It has been a favorite fancy with authors to assume fictitious names upon the initials of their own. Thus, Annie Bronte wrote as "Acton Bell," Charlotte Bronte as "Currer Bell," and Emily Bronte as "Ellis Bell." In all the wide field of literature can three other such illustrious names be found belonging to one family? It is a scarcely known fact that Robert Burns was a nom de plume, that Scotch poet's name being Robert Burness, but it has by right of usage become the family name, as in the case of Sir Henry Irving and Henry M. Stanley.

It is not unusual for lady writers, who desire to cultivate a masculine style of writing and who feel that a good masculine name would carry conviction, to adopt names of the opposite sex. Mrs. Henry Wood used to write as "Johnny Ludlow." Mrs. Cross immortalized herself as "George Eliot," Mme. Dudevant, who was no mean factor in the literary and social circles of the last century, as "George Sand," and Mrs. Stannard, who delights the reading world with the bright military tales of "John Strange Winter."—Philadelphia Times.

Probably a fatal accident occurred to a young man, Taylor McBee. He and a number of others were engaged in removing the old house used by the Walton Academy, and while standing on a heavy six by six oak lever the roller under the corner of the house broke, throwing all the men to the ground. Young McBee attempted to run around the corner, but the lever struck and jammed him against the house. We suggest that the Fiscal Court provide fourteen good cots, and necessary bed clothing, for the use of juries that are not allowed to separate when on duty. Superintendent of Public Instruction Davidson has noticed the phenomenal increase in attendance in the common schools of the country districts, which have opened during the present month, due to the operation of the Hiles compulsory education bill of 1896, which has just gone into effect. It is probable that the number of teachers will be increased at least one-fourth thereby. The law provides that for every school with more than fifty scholars an assistant teacher shall be had. One instance is given in a letter from the County Superintendent of Breathitt, in Taulbee District, where the attendance has never reached fifty scholars, an increase of eighty is made, and like increases are noted from other sections.

Come one! Come all.

Before reaching here last Saturday night the wind did considerable damage in Indiana.

Sunday's was Rev. Fizer's last sermon here before the State Conference. It is hoped he will be returned.

The residence on Mrs. T. J. McNeal's farm out on the Minneola pike was destroyed by fire one day last week. It was insured for $500 in the Boone Co., Company. The tenant who occupied the house lost about all his household goods.

As Doc Manning, who lives between Hebron and Limaburg, was driving along the highway between West Covington and Ludlow, last Friday, an electric car struck the hind part of his wagon, and reduced it to kindling wood. Mr. Manning was thrown out, but, fortunately, received only slight injuries. The wagon was a covered spring wagon and Mr. Manning could not see the car as it approached.

The Second Annual Meeting of the North Kentucky Harvest Home Association will be held at the Ludlow Lagoon September 1st and 2d, 1896. The Lagoon is the finest place of amusement on earth. Liberal premiums given on Fancy Work, Fruits, Vegetables, Grain, &c.; also on Poultry, Kennel and Pigeon Shows. A special Judge has been engaged to judge the Poultry, &c. Turn out and shoot the chute with us. Catalogues at the Lagoon.

The game of ball at this place last Saturday afternoon came to a very sudden close. The umpire made a decision in the last half of the seventh inning in which the Hebron boys did not concur and refused to play any longer, when he called the game 9 to 0 in favor of Burlington. The game had been a slugging match and stood 14 to 14 with Burlington closing the seventh inning with two men out and two on bases. Hebron had made 16 and Burlington 14 hits.

One of the saddest accidents, which brought sorrow to many hearts in the community in which he lived, was the accidental shooting of Joseph C. Turner at his home near Rising Sun on Aug. 16th. Dr. Jackson, Robt. Johnston and Mr. Turner, members of the Horse Thief Association, were starting to capture a horse-thief, Mr. Turner taking with him his Winchester rifle, No. 52 caliber. In laying it under the seat of the buggy it was accidentally discharged, the ball striking Mr. Turner near the abdomen and passing through his body and coming so close to Mr. Johnston that he could hear it plainly. Mr. Turner belonged to the Masonic fraternity and was buried with the honors of that body on Tuesday, Aug. 17th.—Aurora Bulletin.

A temporary organization of the Burlington precinct Democratic Club was effected Saturday afternoon, by electing the following temporary officers: D. E. Castleman, chairman, and J. S. Clutterbuck, secretary. A. B. Rouse, Sidney Gaines and N. E. Riddell were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws for the government of the club, and will report at the next meeting. The meeting then adjourned until 2 p. m. Monday week, when a permanent organization will be perfected. The club starts out with 60 members and hopes to have on its roll the name of every Democrat in the precinct long before the election in November. Remember the date of the next meeting, and also that every voter who intends voting for Bryan and Sewall is invited to join.

DEATH'S SICKLE

Garners the Bearded Grain Nor Spares the Flowers

That Grow Between—He Lays His Icy Touch on Childhood and Many Homes Are Darkened—Sermon by Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was II. Kings, iv., 18, 19, 20: "And when the child was grown, it fell on a day that he went out to his father to the reapers. And he said unto his father, my head, my head. And he said to a lad, carry him to his mother. And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died."

There is at least one happy home in Shunem. To the luxuriance and splendor of a great house had been given the advent of a child. Even when the Angel of Life brings a new soul to the poor man's hut, a star of joy shines over the manger. Infancy, with its helplessness and innocence, had passed away. Days of boyhood had come—days of laughter and frolic, days of sunshine and promise, days of strange questions and curiosity and quick development. I suppose among all the treasures of that house the brightest was the boy. One day there is the shout of the reapers heard afield. A boy's heart always bounds at the sound of sickle or scythe. No sooner have the harvesters cut a swath across the field than the lad joins them, and the swarthy reapers feel young again as they look down at that lad, as bright and beautiful as was Ruth in the harvest fields of Bethlehem gleaning after the reapers. But the sun was too hot for him. Congestion of the brain seized on him. I see the swarthy laborers drop their sickles, and they rush out to see what is the matter, and they fan him and they try to cool his brow, but all is of no avail. In the instant of consciousness he puts his hands to his temples and cries out: "My head! my head!" And the father said: "Carry him to his mother," just as any father would have said; for our hand is too rough, and our voice is too harsh, and our foot is too loud to doctor to a sick child, if there be in our home a gentler voice, and a gentler hand and a stiller footstep. But all of no avail. While the reapers of Shunem were busy in the field there came a stronger reaper that way, with keener scythe and for a richer harvest. He reaped only one sheaf, but O, what a golden sheaf was that! I do not want to know any more about that heart-breaking scene than what I see in just this one pathetic sentence: "He sat on her knees till noon, and then died." Though hundreds of years have passed away since that boy skipped to the harvest field and then was brought home and died on his mother's lap, the story still thrills us. Indeed, childhood has a charm always and everywhere. I shall now speak to you of childhood, its beauty, its susceptibility to impression, its powers over the parental heart, and its blissful transition from earth to Heaven.

The child's beauty does not depend upon form or feature or complexion or apparel. That destitute one that you saw on the street, bruised with unkindness and in rags, has a charm about her, even under her destitution. You have forgotton a great many persons whom you met, of finely cut features and with erect posture and with faultless complexion, while you will always remember the poor girl who, on a cold, moonlight night, as you were passing late home, in her thin shawl and barefoot on the pavement, put out her hand and said: "Please to give me a penny." Ah, how often we have walked on and said: "O, that is nothing but street vagabondism;" but after we got a block or two on we stopped and said: "Ah, that is not right;" and we passed up that same way and dropped a mite into that suffering hand, as though it were not a matter of second thought, so shamed were we of our hard-heartedness. With what admiration we all looked upon a group of children on the playground or in the school, and we clap our hands almost involuntary and say: "How beautiful!" All the stiffness and dignity are gone, and your shout is heard with theirs and you trundle their hoop, and fly their kite, and strike their ball, and all your weariness and anxiety are gone as when a child you bounded over the playground yourself. That father who stands rigid and unsympathetic amid the sportfulness of children, ought never to have been tempted out of a crusty and unredeemable solitariness. The waters leap down the rocks, but they have not the graceful step of childhood. The morning comes out of the gates of the east, throwing its silver on the lake and its gold on the towers and its fire on the cloud; but it is not so bright and beautiful as the morning of life! There is no light like that which is kindled in a child's eye, no color like that which blooms on a child's cheek, no music like the sound of a child's voice. Its face in the poorest picture redeems any imperfection in art. When we are weary with toil, their little hands pull the burdens off our back. O, what a dull, stale, mean world this would be without the sportfulness of children. When I find people that do not like children, I immediately doubt their moral and Christian character. But when the grace of God comes upon a child, how unspeakably attractive. When Samuel begins to pray, and Timothy begins to read the Scriptures, and Joseph showed himself invulnerable to temptation—how beautiful the scene! I know that parents sometimes get nervous when their children become pious, because they have the idea that good children always die. The strange questions about God and eternity and the dead, excite apprehension in the parental mind rather than congratulation. Indeed, there are some people that seem marked for Heaven. This world is too pure a garden for them to bloom in. The hues of Heaven are in the petals. There is something about their forehead that makes you think that the hand of Christ has been on it, saying: "Let this one come to Me, and let it come to Me soon." While that one tarried in the house, you felt there was an angel in the room. And you thought that every sickness would be the last; and when, finally, the winds of death did scatter the leaves, you were no more surprised than to see a star come out above the cloud on a dark night; for you had often said to your companion: "My dear, we shall never raise that child." But I scout the idea that good children always die. Samuel, the pious boy, became Samuel the great prophet. Christian Timothy became a minister of Ephesus. Young Daniel, consecrated to God, became prime minister of all the realm, and there are in hundreds of the schools and families of this country to-day children who love God and keep His commandments, and who are foremost among the Christians and the philanthropists and the reformers of the next century. The grace of God never kills any one. A child will be more apt to grow up with religion than it will be apt to grow up without it. Length of days is promised to the righteous. The religion of Christ does not cramp the chest or curve the spine or weaken the nerves. There are no malarias floating up from the river of life. The religion of Christ throws over the heart and life of a child a supernal beauty. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

I pass on to consider the susceptibility of childhood. Men pride themselves on their unchangeability. They will make an elaborate argument to prove that they think now just as they did 20 years ago. It is charged to frailty or fraud when a man changes his sentiments in politics or religion, and it is this determination of soul that so often drives back the Gospel from a man's heart. It is so hard to make avarice charitable, and fraud honest, and pride humble, and skepticism Christian. The sword of God's truth seems to glance off from those mailed warriors, and the helmet seems battle-proof against God's battle-ax. But childhood: how susceptible to example and to instruction! You are not surprised at the record: "Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob;" for when religion starts in a family it is apt to go all through. Jezebel, a murderess, you are not surprised to find her son Jehoram attempting assassination. Oh, what a responsibility upon the parent and the teacher! The musician touches the keys, and the response of those keys is away off amid the pipes and the chords, and you wonder at the distance between the key and the chord. And so it is in life; if you touch a child the results will come back from manhood or old age, tolling just the tune played, whether the dirg of a great sorrow or the anthem of a great joy. The word that the Sabbath school teacher will this afternoon whisper in the ear of the class will be echoed back from everlasting ages of light or darkness. The home and the school decide the republic or the despotism; the barbarism or the civilization; the upbuilding of an empire or the overthrowing of it. Higher than parliament or congress are the school and the family, and the sound of a child's foot may mean more than the tramp of a host. What, then, are you doing for the purpose of bringing your children into the Kingdom of God? If they are so susceptible, and if this is the very best time to act upon their eternal interests, what are you doing by way of right impulsion? There were some harvesters in the fields of Scotland one hot day, and Hannah Lemond was helping them gather the hay. She laid her babe under a tree. While she was busy in the field there was a flutter of wings in the air, and a golden eagle clutched the swaddling band of the babe and flew away with it to the mountain eyrie. All the harvesters and Hannah Lemond started for the cliffs. It was two miles before they came to the foot of the cliffs. Getting there, who dared to mount the cliff? No human foot had ever trod it. There were sailors there who had gone up the mast in the day of terrible tempest; they did not dare risk it. Hannah Lemond sat there for awhile, and looked up and saw the eagle in the eyrie, and then she leaped to her feet, and then started up where no human foot had ever trod, crag above crag, catching hold of this root or that root, until she reached the eyrie and caught her babe, the eagle swooping in fierceness all around about her. Fastening the child to her back she started for her friends and for home. O, what a dizzy descent! sliding from this crag to that crag, catching by that vine and by that root, coming down further and further, to the most dangerous pass, where she found a goat and some kids. She said: "Now I'll follow the goat; the goat will know just which is the safest way down;" and she was led by the animal down to the plain. When she got there all the people cried: "Thank God, thank God!" her strength not giving way until the rescue was effected. And they cried: "Stand back, now. Give her air!" O, if a woman will do that for the physical life of her child, what will you do for the eternal life of your boy and your girl? Let it not be told in the great day of eternity that Hannah Lemond put forth more exertion for the saving of the physical life of her child than you. O, parent, have ever put forth for the eternal life of your little one. God help you.

I pass on to consider the power which a child wields over the parental heart. We often talk about the influence of parents upon children. I never hear anything said about the influence of children upon their parents. You go to school to them. You no more educate them than they educate you. With their little hands they have caught hold of your entire nature and you can not wrench yourself away from their grasp. You are different men and women from what you were before they gave you the first lesson. They have revolutionized your soul. There are fountains of joy in your heart which never would have been discovered had they not discovered them. Life is to you a more stupendous thing than it was before those little feet started on the pathway to eternity. O, how many hopes, how many joys, how many solicitudes that little one has created in your soul. You go to school every day—a school of self-denial, a school of patience, in which you are getting wiser day by day; and that influence of the child over you will increase and increase; and though your children may die, from the very throne of God they will reach down an influence to your soul, leading you on and leading you up until you mingle with their voices and sit beside their thrones.

The grasp which the child has over the parent's heart is seen in what the parent will do for the child. Storm and darkness and heat and cold are nothing to you if they stand between you and your child's welfare. A great lawyer when yet unknown, one day stood in the courtroom and made an eloquent plea before some men of great legal attainments; and a gentleman said to him afterward: "How could you be so calm standing in that august presence?" "Oh," said Erskine, "I felt my children pulling at my skirts crying for bread." What stream will you not swim, what cavern will you not enter, what battle will you not fight, what hunger will you not endure for your children? Your children must have bread, though you starve. Your children must be well clothed though you grow in rags. You say: "My children shall be educated though I never had any chance." What to you are weary limbs, and aching head, and hands hardened and callous, if only the welfare of your children can be wrought out by it? Their sorrow is your sorrow, their joy your joy, their advancement your victory. And, oh, when the last sickness comes, how you fight back the march of disease, and it is only after a tremendous struggle that you surrender. And then when the spirit has fled, the great deep is broken up, and Rachel will not be comforted because her children are not, and David goes up the palace stairs, crying: "Oh Absalom, my son, my son, would to God I had died for thee, Oh Absolom, my son, my son."

There is not a large family, or hardly a large family that has not bent over such a treasure and lost it. In the family fold is there no dead lamb? I have seen many such cases of sorrow. There is one pre-eminent in my memory as pastor—Scoville Haynes McCullom. The story of his death has brought hundreds unto God. He belonged to my parish in the west. A thorough boy, 9 or 10 years of age. Nothing morbid, nothing dull about him. His voice loudest and his foot swiftest on the playground. Often he has come into my house and thrown himself down on the floor in an exhaustion of boisterous mirth; and yet he was a Christian consecrated to God, keeping his commandments. That is the kind of childish piety I believe in. When the days of sickness came suddenly and he was told he could not get well, he said: "Jesus alone can save me. Jesus will save me. He has saved me. Don't cry, mamma, I shall go right straight up to Heaven." And then they gave him a glass of water to cool his parched lips and he said: "Mamma, I shall take a draught from the water of life after awhile, of which if one drink, he shall never get thirsty again. I lay myself at Jesus' feet and I want Him to do just what He thinks best to do with me." In those days, "Rest for the Weary" was a new hymn, and he had learned it; and in a perfect ecstacy of soul, in his last hour, he cried out:

In the Christian's home in glory
  There remains a land of rest;
There my Saviour's gone befor
  To fulfill my soul's request;
There is rest for the weary,
There is rest for you.

Sing, O sing, ye heirs of glory,
  Shout your triumphs as you go;
Zion's gates are open for you,
  You shall find an entrance through.
There is rest for the weary.

"There is rest for you, papa; there is rest for you, mamma." And then putting his hands over his heart, he said: "Yes, there is rest for me." And then he asked them to read "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, and leadeth me beside still waters;" and he cried out: "O, Death, where is thy sting? O, Grave, where is thy victory?"

Only ten years old! And then he said: "Now I wish you would just turn this bed so I can look once more on the foliage and see the sun set." And they turned the bed; and he said: "I do so wish that Jesus would hurry and come and take me." They said to him: "Why, are you not willing to await the Lord's time?" "Yes," he said, "I am; but I would rather Jesus would come and hurry and take me." And so, with a peace indescribable, he passed away.

Oh, there is nothing sad about a child's death save the grief in the parent's heart. You see the little ones go right out from a world of sin and suffering to a world of joy. How many sorrows they escape, how many temptations, how many troubles! Children dead are safe. Those that live are in peril. We know not what dark path they may take. The day may come in which they will break your heart; but children dead are safe—safe forever. Weeping parents, do not mourn too bitterly over your child that has gone. There are two kinds of prayers made at a child's sick bed.

One prayer the Lord likes; the other prayer He does not like. When a soul kneels down at a child's sick bed and says: "O Lord, spare this little one; he is very near to my heart; I don't want to part with him, but thy will be done"—that is the kind of a prayer the Lord loves. There is another kind of a prayer which I have heard men make in substance when they say: "O Lord, this isn't right; it is hard to take this child; you have no right to take this child; spare this child; I can't give him up, and I won't give him up." The Lord answers that kind of a prayer sometimes. The child lives on, and lives on, and travels off in paths of wickedness to perish. At the end of every prayer for a child's life, say: "Thy will, O Lord, be done."

QUEEN MARGHERITA, of Italy, is a musician of high order.

"THE RED FLAG OF ANARCHY."

Republicans Resort to the Old "Bloody-Shirt" Methods.

There is a superabundance of talk about the "red flag of anarchy" these days, and certain renegade sheets wax wroth at what they term "revolutionary action" at Chicago. The most careful reading of the platform adopted by the democratic party in its national convention fails to reveal the slightest trace of anarchy. The red flag would have been woefully out of place in the hall where that strong, able and conservative political document was prepared. Over no better nor more representative gathering of American citizens could the beautiful Stars and Stripes have ever floated. It was a convention where the democracy of the United States was well represented and that democracy has always voiced the will of the people. Probably never in our latter-day history has the voice of the people of this country been heard so clearly and with such eloquence of truth.

That is what is troubling these eastern monopolists. The reign of Wall street is over. The people have declared themselves and the south and west have refused to longer submit to the dictation of a handful of eastern capitalists. And through their chosen organs you may hear the bankers howl. They are hurt in their vulnerable spot—the pocket.

Great issues might be at stake, the people of the prairies, the population of that magnificent sweep of country west of the Mississippi, might be suffering from every evil oppression brings in its dreadful train, and these so-called American citizens would remain unmoved, impassive. They would subscribe a few dollars, perhaps. Easy enough to throw a handful of the hoard wrested from the hard hands of producers to the sufferers and call it "charity." They would then go placidly on, unheeding. But touch them in the purse—you hear them cry aloud to Heaven.

Anarchy has no place in this country. The atmosphere of the west and south—our west, our south—is too poor to contain the hideous microbes that are engendered only in the slums of great cities. The people have been patient so long that their revolt against plutocratic rule is surprising; that is all.

The platform adopted at Chicago is democratic to the core. It is supremely democratic, in that it expresses the will of the people.

The cry of the red flag is suspiciously like the old time waving of the bloody shirt. It has the same color and tone. It is intended to have the same evil effect.

But the people have already spoken in convention. They will support their declaration next November at the polls.—Tammany Times.

MR. BRYAN'S DENIAL.

The Democratic Candidate Is Not Employed by Mine Owners.

William J. Bryan, for the first time since Senator John M. Thurston, as alleged, declared that he (Bryan) was in the employ of mine owners, made an official denial, coupled with a challenge to the national republican committee to come out in the open and accuse him or forever be silent. Mr. Bryan's attention had been called to the controversy between Senators Thurston and Stewart, and he determined to settle the matter, if possible. He therefore demands an open charge, which he says he will refute, with details of his private life and financial affairs, or silence. He says:

"I have already denied this charge on several occasions, but the reiteration of it by Senator Thurston, a distinguished resident of my own state, justifies me in answering it again. I have never at any time or under any circumstances been in the employ of any mine owners, individually or collectively, directly or indirectly, nor have I ever been in the employ of or paid by any bimetallic league or association. Aside from my editorial salary of about $150 a month, paid by the Omaha World-Herald, and a small amount derived from the legal profession, my income since my retirement from congress has been derived entirely from lectures before Chautauqua, lyceum and lecture bureaus, which have usually paid me a fixed sum, and from contributions made by the people of the localities where I have spoken. In some instances I have received nothing at all. In most cases I have received no more than enough to pay my traveling expenses. In only two instances, I think, has my compensation exceeded $100, and in these instances it was about $200 at one place and about $300 at the other. The first platform on which I ran for congress in 1890, before I was known politically outside my own state, contained a free coinage plank, and my republican opponent that year was an advocate of free coinage. In the campaign of 1892 I again ran on a free coinage platform. In 1894 I again ran on a free coinage platform, and my opponent for the senate, Mr. Thurston, while opposing unlimited coinage at sixteen to one, insisted that he favored bimetallism. I wrote the free coinage plank on which I ran in 1890 and the free coinage planks in the Nebraska state platforms in 1891, 1894 and 1896, and tried to secure the adoption of free coinage planks in the state platform in 1892 and 1893. I only mention this to show my advocacy of free silver is not of recent date. Having made this answer to Mr. Thurston's letter, I shall hereafter take no notice of individual or newspaper comment on the subject. If the republican national committee will say officially that I have ever been employed to deliver speeches by any mine owner, a group of mine owners, or by any association supported by mine owners, I am ready to make a statement showing in detail all money received by me for speechmaking."

——We think it about time for McKinley to assert himself and exhibit himself as representing something more in this campaign than the interests which everybody knows Mr. Hanna to represent. He should shake off the domination of this millionaire management and bring his campaign back into the hands of the common folks, where it properly belongs, for this issue of honest money affects the poor vastly more than the rich.—Springfield Republican.

——Maj. McKinley is progressing. He is now discoursing eloquently concerning the war of the rebellion and expects to reach the currency question by easy stages along about November 4.—Chicago Chronicle.

INTIMIDATING EMPLOYES.

Railway Corporations Rounding Up Their Men for McKinley.

The desperate fear of the railway corporations that Bryan will be elected, and that they will be brought under the law, is shown by a circular that has been sent to all railway operatives in the country, urging them to organize into "sound money" clubs, and informing them that such clubs will be opened at every railway station and division headquarters in the country. The circular is issued anonymously, but as it refers to a leading railway periodical for "literature" and blanks, and as this periodical is published in the interest of the corporations and not that of the operatives, it is clearly a demand on the part of these corporations that their employes support McKinley. A significant fact is that the circular is being published by republican papers, which by the force of circumstances have been compelled to become supporters of the monopolies.

If the men to whom this threat is addressed still possess the independence that they have already exhibited, the effect of the circular will be directly opposite to that which was intended. The shrewdness of the scheme of opening club rolls at every railway station is manifest. It gives the companies absolute knowledge of what men join and what men do not join, and in this way the preparation of a black list is reduced to the simplest lines. This circular carries a deeper threat and a bolder insult than any the railways have ever dared before to fling in the faces of their employes.

It will be interesting to note what reception this precious document will have at the hands of the American Railway union, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the other organizations of railway operatives and organized labor in general. For we may be sure that this is only the beginning of a comprehensive movement by all extensive employers of skilled and unskilled labor to organize their men into McKinley clubs, with the implied threat of discharge as the alternative of joining.

The railway corporations have a special cause for alarm over the prospect of Bryan's election, as the democratic national platform demands not only the proper regulation of transportation and the defeat of the funding bill, but an enlargement of the powers of the interstate commerce commission as well. Every intelligent railroad man must know that to curtail the enormous power wielded by the railroads would effectually put a stop to black lists and those numerous other devices which railroad companies know so well how to employ in intimidating and enslaving their employes. If there were no other issue before the country than that of bringing these arrogant and oppressive corporations under the law and making them the useful agencies that they might be, the democratic party would have a good reason for existence—San Francisco Examiner.

BRYAN'S EASTERN TRIP.

The Enthusiastic Reception of the Democratic Candidate.

The reception of Bryan in the east, and his great speech at Madison Square Garden were a profound disappointment to his opponents.

The self-constituted guardians of the country, who have been trying to portray Mr. Bryan as an anarchist, hugged the fond hope that he would plunge into a polar wave east of the Alleghenies, and that the superior patriots of that section would be treated to a shocking exhibition of anarchistic red fire.

Neither of these expectations has been realized. The reception of the democratic candidate in the east has been not merely respectful but enthusiastic. The people of the east have welcomed Mr. Bryan. They have eagerly listened to his political message. They have given every indication of warm approval of his arguments and appeals.

Mr. Bryan rightly stated his experience when he said that he found himself, not, as some one had described it, "in his enemy's country," but among his friends. The fact is he was among his friends, the people of the east, who have the same troubles, the same sentiments, as the people of the west, but who have been misrepresented by their political leaders. The democrats who have flocked to hear and greet Mr. Bryan are the true representatives of their party and are ready to join their western brethren in the struggle against monopoly.—St. Louis Republic.

The Backers of McKinley.

The philanthropy which raised over $100,000 to save Maj. McKinley from bankruptcy was not disinterested. The man who sincerely believes otherwise is in danger of the padded cell and should consult a brain specialist. The men who took up that collection expected to get value received for their contributions, and they are the very men who are now and who have been for six months straining every nerve toward the election of Mr. McKinley to the presidency. They want to see the color of their money again. They are the men who expect to profit at the expense of the people if McKinley and McKinleyism come into power. They are the men who dictated the original McKinley bill and who hope to dictate another and a worse one when they get control of the government. These are the men whose collar Maj. McKinley wears. These are the men upon whose bounty he has depended for ten years and whose will he will execute should he enter the white house.—Chicago Chronicle.

——What condemns McKinley is that the men who organized the pool to pay his debts are the same who are now in the consolidated Hanna trust. Their relief of McKinley was not a benefaction, but an investment. They have a mortgage on the candidate. And if the candidate becomes the president who can doubt the foreclosure?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Rev. Dr. Henry Gallagher has resigned the pastorate of the Trinity Baptist church, Brooklyn.

—The High Street Congregational church, Portland, Me., celebrated the 30th anniversary of Rev. Dr. William H. Fenn's pastorate on July 5 with elaborate services.

—Rev. Dr. George L. Robinson, pastor of the Roxbury (Mass.) Presbyterian church, has resigned in order to accept the professorship of Old Testament literature and exegesis in Knox college, Toronto, Canada.

—Archbishop O'Reilly, of Adelaide, can set type like a professional compositor. When he established the Catholic Record in West Australia he was obliged to set his own type, and to teach the art to other priests, besides editing the paper.

—Jules Simon was converted to Catholicism, according to the Paris Le Verite, shortly before his death by his little granddaughter, who had been attending the catechism class at the Madeleine. She brought him a confessor and he received the sacraments while in full possession of all his faculties.

—Mr. Rowlands, Q. C., recorder of Swansea, who has just embraced Catholicism, on graduating from Oxford became a clergyman of the Church of England, then head master of a grammar school, and in 1871 turned lawyer, was made a queen's counsel, entered parliament, and later was appointed to the bench.

—How great the growth of ritualistic practices has been in the Church of England during the last 14 years is shown by some figures compiled by the Tourists' Church Guide. In 1882 daily communion was administered in 123 churches in Great Britain, in 1896 in 474 churches. Incense, used in nine churches 14 years ago, is now used in 307. The figures for churches using lights on the altar are 581 and 3,598; for those where vestments are employed, 336 and 1,632, and for those where the worshipers face the east, 1,662 and 5,964. The change indicates in many cases some change in doctrine.

TO GET INTO THE NAVY.

How a Boy May Become a United States Bluejacket.

When a boy wishes to become a sailor in the navy he applies to one of the three "receiving" ships. They are the Vermont at the New York navy yard, the Wabash at the Boston navy yard and the Richmond at the League Island navy yard in Philadelphia. The boys must be between 14 and 16 years of age, sound in health and be able to read and write to some extent. No distinction is made in race, and it is a singular fact that the colored boys who apply are almost invariably able to read and write better than the white boys. On board the Vermont the only reading test applied is contained on a card, which is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States, in congress assembled, that fraudulent enlistment and the receipt of any pay or allowance thereunder is hereby declared an offense against naval discipline, and made punishable by general court-martial."

"What I have just read to you is a law of the United States, and it means that if you do not tell the truth about your age, parents or guardians, or if you are a deserter from the naval or military service, you may be tried by court-martial, put in prison, or punished in some way."

The last paragraph of this is what boys are usually required to read. The officers are not very strict about the hard words, and so almost any boy can pass the test. After being admitted Uncle Sam gives each boy an outfit. His parents or guardian must sign a paper giving him to the government until he is 21 years of age. He becomes known at once as a third-rate apprentice, and in a few days he is sent to a training school at Newport, where he is taught rudimentary things about a sailor's life and work. After remaining at Newport for six months he is transferred to one of two training ships. These are the Essex and the Alliance. He remains on one of these for six months and takes a cruise.

On the voyage he learns how to handle the sails, how to sew and splice and how to handle guns. Innumerable other things about a sailor's life he also picks up, and when he returns he is transferred to a modern man-of-war, where he becomes an apprentice of the second-class. Here he takes his place with the regular crew, and has his allotted share of the daily routine to perform. He is examined every three months, and usually he becomes an apprentice of the first-class in six months, when he has the rank that corresponds to the rank of seaman with sailors.—Harper's Round Table.

Japanese Coal in California.

Japanese coal is to be placed upon the California market in competition with the standard grades that have been used there for years. Three large steamers are loading coal at Kobe for San Francisco, and two more steamers are under charter to carry similar cargoes for the same destination within the next 30 days. The bulk of the coal now consumed in California now comes from Puget Sound and British Columbia mines, while a big share is supplied by Australia.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Breathes Through Its Tail.

The periopthalmus, a species of fish which is found on the coasts of the Indian ocean and Western Africa, breathes through its tail, and it is the only fish known to possess that power. The fish may often be seen clinging by their fins to the rocks and mangrove roots, while keeping their tails immersed in the water, and their respiration is affected through the skin of the tail. It has been proved that when the tail is coated with oil or varnish the fish dies of suffocation.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

ROADSIDE ORCHARDS.

Europe Has Many of Them Which Are a Source of Public Revenue.

Land is not yet so rare in this country that we are obliged to cultivate that along the borders of our highways, but the time is not far distant when conditions here in this respect will more nearly approximate those of other countries than they do at present, and we may then learn a lesson from the thrift of some of those "effete despotisms." In an article in La Nature (Paris, March 14), Emmanuel Ratouin tells how the roadsides in many parts of Germany have been made to yield a rich return to the state or to municipalities by being planted with fruit trees. We translate part of his article below:

"In foreign countries orchards of fruit trees along the roads have given the best results. In Wurtemburg, Saxony, Bavaria, Hanover, the grand duchy of Luxemburg and in Austria the fruit tree roads have brought in important sums to the treasury. In Saxony the fruit tree budget is especially satisfactory, and the benefits realized by the state under this have been estimated at nearly 2,000,000 francs ($400,000) for the last fourteen years.

"In Wurtemberg the planting of forest trees along the roads has been entirely given up. A law has been passed applying to all fruit orchards and systematizing their working. The owner of the neighboring land takes charge of the orchard and the road officials see to their protection and care. This service is very well organized and does its work economically. It has been established under almost identical condition in the Palatinate and in Bavaria. In these localities each roadman has his corresponding 'sylvicultor.' Every facility is given to these agents for increasing their agricultural knowledge. They are placed under the surveillance of rural inspectors, who direct their labors. This special corps is recruited, in part, by competition. These 'road sylvicultors' pass an examination and follow courses of instruction. They sometimes are given the necessary funds to complete their studies.

"The course of study that is offered at Landschule, in Basse Riviere, has given the opportunity of enlisting men especially adapted for the care of trees. In Austria, Moravia and Bohemia the orchard roads, which are very numerous, are in general planted with plum trees. In these fertile plains there are orchards of considerable size along the borders of the roads. The trees are set about six meters (19 2-3 feet) apart; they are the object of exceptional care, and it is not rare to see, especially in the region of Hradisch, young apple trees covered with straw up to the middle of their trunks. The old apple trees are carefully cleaned and painted with whitewash to preserve them from moss and from fungoid growths. At Drosing, in Moravia, along the roads the acacia alternates with the cherry and the apple.

"In the Tyrol, where the culture of fruit trees is highly appreciated, the road orchards are numerous. It is not unusual to find in these regions, especially at Hoffgarten, orchards of 2,000 to 3,000 apple and pear trees. And not only are the carriage roads utilized thus, but the railway companies have fallen into line. Many of them have planted the edges of their embankments and the spaces left between their racks and the neighboring properties.

"The efforts made by foreign nations in this matter of road orchards can scarcely be described without speaking of the grand duchy of Luxemburg, which is the chosen land of the fruit tree. The efforts made by the governments of the grand duchy to develop fruit culture are most interesting and remarkable. Nowhere have resources been better employed and encouragements better distributed. The state has established an agricultural service, which has for its special object the fostering of agricultural work and the direction and execution of most of such public work as the planting of fruit trees, drainage, irrigation, experiment stations, the establishment of roads, etc."—Literary Digest.

SHADED HIGHWAYS.

Trees Add Beauty and Comfort to Every Country Road.

During these hot summer days is when the traveler on a dusty, treeless highway sighs for "some boundless contiguity of shade," or at least for good roads bordered by trees whose sheltering boughs would offer some protection against the rays of the celestial scorcher, the sun.

Trees add more than beauty to a country highway, although that feature alone should be a sufficient incentive to insure their presence. But they are comforting, as well, and their shade helps to retain a degree of moisture that retards the making of dust.

The usual highway should be made beautiful and comfortable as well. Every negligent highway commissioner should be compelled to ride a wheel along a sun-blistered road, or, better yet, be harnessed to a load, as is the poor, dumb horse. This would bring him to a realization of the fact that a little shade along the road is a good and gracious thing.

Make the highway beautiful.—Good Roads.

Making the Cow Comfortable.

To give comfort to the cow and prevent the annoyance of her tail switching in your face or about your head while milking, make a big sack open at one end and one side. Before beginning milking draw it over the cow so that the closed end will hold her tail down between her legs. She may not like it at first, but when she finds there are no flies to brush off or to knock off with her head she will enjoy the innovation. When through take hold of the end or corner that is up near her horns and strip it off with one hand. It is ready then for the next cow to be milked. The blanket or sack may be made of any old sacking.

HOW TO KEEP APPLES.

Chief Requisite for Preservation Is a Uniform Low Temperature.

On the subject of keeping apples Mr. O. W. Hawden, of Worcester, Mass., in a recent address, said: "If apples are expected to keep well they must be picked from the trees and handled carefully. Barrels and boxes are found the most convenient packages for apples, but should be washed and thoroughly cleansed and dried before using; care should be taken that no nails protrude through the staves. The fruit should be carefully placed in the barrels and gently shaken and pressed into them as compactly as possible to prevent any motion of the fruit after the barrels are headed; each sort should be marked and placed where the temperature is low and uniform if possible. If apples are to be stored for winter or late keeping the sooner placed in a cool and uniform place the better. A fruit house or cellar made with a view for the purpose is best, but most growers usually have to resort to their cellars. The chief requisites for the preservation of fruit from October to May or June following are a uniform low temperature, which in autumn may be obtained by giving abundant ventilation on cool nights, to be closed when the atmosphere is warm. Fruits should be maintained or kept in as nearly as possible its condition when gathered. The gradual ripening process, or the fermentation of the juices premonitory to decay, should be checked and kept in a dormant condition. When maintained nearly at freezing point the mellowing or ripening process in the fruit nearly ceases. Fungi and mildew, the primary causes of decay, do not germinate under these circumstances; the best late keeping results are promoted thereby. The prices at which apples are sold differ very materially between October and June and are often as one to five; thus the growing price in the cellar is of fully as much importance as the growing fruit in the orchard."—Ice and Refrigeration.

THE CABBAGE WORM.

Paris Green Can Be Used to Advantage in Destroying Them.

The most common cabbage caterpillar is the larval form of the white butterfly, so often seen about the plants depositing its eggs. Aside from this larva there are several others which attack the cabbage plant, being the larvae of several species of butterflies and moths. But while there are several species of caterpillars on the plants, yet the habits of all are very similar, so that the same remedies are applicable to all.

Just as soon as the worms are noticed on the plants, paris green, either dry or mixed with water, should be applied. In this case it is perhaps best to make the application in a dry form by means of any of the many ways for making the application. A common flour sack will do for this purpose, if nothing better is at hand, although nothing equals the champion powder gun for the application of any dry powders. When applied to the cabbage, the paris green should be diluted with about 20 parts of flour, the effectiveness of the application depending not so much upon the amount used as the evenness of the distribution. The paris green, however, should not be applied to the plants after they have formed heads, but pyrethrum or insect powder should then be used instead.

But the question is often asked: "Will not the paris green poison the plants and render them unfit for use?" But the cabbage grows from within out, and there is no danger from the use of paris green, provided it is not applied after the heads are formed. By the time the outer leaves are taken off and the cabbage is ready for the table, there is left no trace of arsenic.—H. E. Weed, in Journal of Agriculture.

AN EXCELLENT TRELLIS.

Splendid Thing for Growers of Pole and Lima Beans.

I have two rows 75 feet long and 3½ feet apart. Strong cedar stakes or posts six to seven feet long are set 15 feet apart over each row. A wire is stretched ten inches from the ground and stapled at each post; another wire is stapled to the top of the posts. Binder or wool twine is then fastened to top of an end post, unrolled and passed under the bottom wire, up over the top wire and down again as illustrated. Bean runners readily find the strings and soon reach the top, when an occasional turn over and under the wire horizontally will keep them out of the way. The wire is easily taken off and the parts removed, and the strings should be serviceable two seasons. I leave them standing until spring, when the vines become dry, very brittle and are easily broken from the twine. Experiment has convinced me nothing is gained by pinching the ends of the vines; much is gained by a rich soil, with frequent and thorough cultivation.—Albert H. Briggs, in Farm and Home.

ITALIAN TELLS A STORY.

Signor Liberati Relates a Joke on an American Naval Officer.

A great joke on the American navy and on Rear Admiral Luce leaked out the other day, after 24 years. The story was told by Signor Liberati, the famous cornet soloist and conductor of various well known Liberati bands, and who is now playing in Kansas City. Signor Liberati remarked that the navy has been a factor in the musical culture of America, and then explained that American men-o'-war had enlisted young Italian musicians in their bands when touching at Italian ports. These youngsters were carried to America and became bandmasters and conductors.

"I ar-rife in America on a man-o'-war my own self," continued the famous musician, "and I hed ver' large con-sid-er-able experience in company of de American navy. I enlisted in Venice in 1872 on de ver' large, con-sid-er-able frigate Juniato. At Madeira I broke my own mont' with de cornet. I en-tairs de small boat yo must follow out de wafes of de sea. I miss de righ time and a ver' large, con-sid-er-able wafe of de sea heet me. I hold up my instru-maint to keep it dry—so—and when I fell I struck the instru-maint with my mout'.

"When I tink of my own times on de frigate Juniato, I feel de salt meat ver' bad—rise in my own troat and shoke me. Br-r-r-r-r!

"De frigate was about sail for dis country and de of-fi-cairs fill de frigate Juniato with a ver' large, con-sid-er-able eargo of brandy and wines. Yes to smug-gail!—those of-fi-cairs were great to smug-gail! We had a hail-ish treep—de of-fi-cairs dr-u-n-k all de time—all-de-time! De sailors dr-u-n-k, too, de band dr-u-n-k, ver' large, con-sid-er-able jag!

"De frigate Juniato carry four or fife hundraid men; she carry eighteen ver' large, con-sid-er-able guns. We sail for Bostone.

"De nearer de frig-ate comes to dis country, de more dr-u-n-k de captain, de of-fi-cairs, de sailors, de band, get. You know him—it was de Capt. Luce. Ven de pilote come on board de frig-ate Juniato in de fog, he say: 'It ees not Bostone; it ees New York!' So we start for Bostone and de fog get thicker and thicker, and de captain, de of-fi-cairs, de sailors and de band not know where they was at. We fire de guns and ring de bell and blow de whistle. De frig-ate Junato lay there and we fired and ringed and blowed for seex days and seex nights. De provis-ione went low and we had natting to eat—only drink.

"De captain sent out de boats and sound de water, so we not heet de rocks. De sailors in de boats work hard sounding de waters for seex days and seex nights. De frig-ate Juniato crash against de rocks, but not ver' bad. Then de fog rose up and de captain of the frig-ate, de of-fi-cairs, de sailors and de band all said: 'O hail!' for de frig-ate Juniato was one hundraid feet from de shore!

"Dere was Bostone, and we had been dere seex days and seex nights and we might have gone to market and bought fresh aigs every morning."—Kansas City Star.

CAUSES OF HEADACHE.

Most Often Produced by a Disarranged Liver.

The common headache of everyday life is the one we desire to call attention to. We think we are safe in saying that all simple acute headaches are caused by indigestion, which is produced by the use of inferior food or an inability to use good food. Also almost all chronic headaches are caused by dyspepsia, constipation and disorders of the liver, and these troubles are very closely related. Constipation is always associated with dyspepsia. The liver, the greatest depurating organ of the body, is obstructed and diseased in cases of dyspepsia. So it ought to be understood by all who wish to be informed on the subject that the stomach, bowels and liver belong to the digestive system, and that one cannot be diseased without more or less involving the others. These are the blood-making organs. About one-sixth of the blood of the body circulates in the head, and when this blood is loaded with impurities and improperly elaborated, then the brain and its structures are irritated and painful. This is called headache. The depurating organs—the bowels, liver, skin, kidneys and lungs—have failed to carry out the waste of the system from some cause. There has been too little exercise, sitting or working in illy-ventilated rooms, too little or poor quality of food, or partaking of too much wholesome food—overeating. Over-excitement in business or sad and depressing news are among the common causes of disturbances in the system that result in headache.—N. Y. Ledger.

Embroidery Design.

Young women who embroider their own handkerchiefs use for the material a linen cambric, heavy or very sheer, according to the use of the handkerchief. A pretty design seen upon one of these dainty kerchiefs is a lovers' knot in each corner. In one of them the initials are worked in the loops of the bow. Another design was an outline of a butterfly with the initials inside the wings. A quickly worked design that is effective shows an embroidered spiders' web, with letters in old English in the center. Often a tiny wreath of one's favorite flowers is done in solid embroidery or a combination of outline stitch and solid embroidery. The entire first name is worked in the center.—N. Y. Post.

Minced Veal.

Take small pieces of cold roast veal and cut about the size of dice. Make a gravy of a teaspoonful of flour, butter the size of an egg; mix together with a little salt and pepper until it is smooth, then pour over it a cupful of boiling water. Lay in the meat just before it is ready to send to the table. Much cooking makes it tough. It is nice with chopped parsley or onions.—St. Louis Republic.

CITY SOLDIERS ARE BEST.

Modern Warfare Is Easiest Learned by Them.

The old saying of the recruiting sergeants that "the best soldiers come from the plow-tail" is hardly correct when looked at in the light of modern military experience. It is quite true that in the past regiments recruited from the country districts have again and again made themselves conspicuous for gallantry and endurance, but the changed conditions of modern warfare appear to have enabled the town-bred soldier to rather more than catch up with his country-bred comrade. Statistics show that he is more rapidly promoted, that he is more fertile in resource, more adaptable to circumstances and quicker in learning the details of his business, while the improved conditions of town life seem to have placed him nearly on a par with regard to stamina. In France there are no two opinions on the subject—the best soldiers come from Paris; and when it is remembered that after the practical destruction of the regular French army at Metz and Sedan the victorious veterans of Germany were held at bay for five months by the raw levies mostly drawn from the French towns, there seems but little doubt that the French opinion is correct.

The glorious results of this season's harvest of golden grain will pour a stream of sound money into the pockets of every Dakota farmer.

South Dakota has thousands of acres of choice farming and ranch land lying east of the Missouri river, and within one day's ride from Chicago or Milwaukee, which can now be bought reasonably cheap, but which before the end of another year may be advanced in price.

The stock raising industry in South Dakota is profitable, and eastern capital is now being invested in cattle and sheep growing in that state.

Diversified farming, the growing of live stock, and the products of the dairy, are placing South Dakota foremost in the ranks of the successful western states.

Those desiring full information on the subject, and particularly those who wish to seek a new home or purchase land, are requested to correspond with W. E. Powell, General Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill., or H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agent for South Dakota, 295 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Dishonored Drafts.

When the stomach dishonors the drafts made upon it by the rest of the system, it is necessarily because its fund of strength is very low. Toned with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, it soon begins to pay out vigor in the shape of pure, rich blood, containing the elements of muscle, bone and brain. As a sequence of the new vigor afforded the stomach, the bowels perform their functions regularly, and the liver works like clock work. Malaria has no effect upon a system thus reinforced.

Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they coax it. They are compounded on the theory that the liver does its work thoroughly and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. When your liver wants help, get "the pill that will,"

STATE NEWS.

Flux is quite prevalent in portions of Montgomery county.

Kentucky paid fourteen million dollars in internal revenue the past year.

In Pulaski county the saloon men will contest the local option election.

Warden Nell, of the Frankfort penitentiary, died of typhoid fever, last week.

Two women are candidates for County School Superintendent in Henderson.

Susan Sloan, aged 120, died suddenly at Louisville. She was the mother of 15 children, four of whom are living.

In Breathitt county, last week, W. J. Whitaker, age 84 years, and Mrs. Susan Bailey, age 70, and three times a widow, were married.

The total deficit in the treasury of Kentucky, according to the last monthly report, was $1,146,768.87. It is growing at the rate of about $100,000 per month.

At Louisa Miss Cynthia Clevenger was killed by lightning. She had been out to milk the cows and was returning to the house when struck. Death resulted instantly. The body showed but slight marks from the stroke.

There is a colored preacher in this city who preached last year for a salary of $70, of which only ten cents was paid. He had to walk about five miles to fill his appointment, and he scarcely missed a Sunday. This year is doing better, having received $14 up to date. He is now working hard to pay his debts contracted last year.—Carlisle Mercury.

While plowing near Stanford the other day Will Severance found a brass fife that was evidently used during the war. The Interior Journal says: "The soil has not been turned for thirty-odd years, and it is probable that the last tune played on the instrument was a national air in those dark days of battle. Mr. Severance, who is somewhat of a fifest himself, will have it polished up and will use it when he feels like keeping his neighbors awake or driving off the varmints that give his hen roost so much trouble."

John Day, a wealthy and prominent farmer living on Caney, has been very low with fever and expected to die at any time, says the Hazel Green Herald. He was thought to be dead. The coffin and burial clothes were procured, and when being prepared for burial the supposed corps began to move and show signs of life. The doctors went to work, and by strong stimulants brought him to life. He had been in a trance for nearly five hours. At 3 o'clock p. m. Mr. Day was again believed dead, and was dressed and shaved and given up for dead. About 8 o'clock that night he again gave signs of life, but could not speak. When asked anything he would shake his head. Mr. Day is about sixty-five years of age.

John D. White, whom Colson defeated for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Eleventh district, charges that he was defeated by fraud in the primary election. He says he can and will prove to the District Committee that 300 voters from Tennessee were brought into Bell county by Colson's friends, that 100 outsiders voted at Jellico and seventy at Pine Knot, and that the Republican vote in Bell county was in excess of the actual Republican vote by several hundred. He says he will also show that several members of the District Committee had disqualified themselves from serving by their actions in the canvass, and he boldly avows that one of the leading members of the committee, calling his name, ought to be in the penitentiary.

POLITICAL.

Six Gold Bug Democrats and no more is all the good Democratic county of Owen produced after a month's labor. She will give birth on the 3rd of November next to 3,600 Democratic Bryan male voters.

The sound money Democrats of Owen county held a convention in Dr. H. G. Smith's office last Saturday afternoon—or at least six of them did. They were Dr. Smith Col. J. D. Lillard, E. Bainbridge, H. D. Barker, Prof. W. Hind Roberts and Arthur Lillard. Two reporters and a newsboy composed the audience of the non-elect—Herald.

The Farmers' Bank of Burgin is the only bank in Kentucky, in all probability, and perhaps in the United States, that is controlled by a set of officers who are strong advotates of the free silver idea. The President, Vice President, Cashier, Clerks and a majority of the Board of Directors are all silver men.—Winchester Democrat.

[St. Louis Republican.]

The country is indebted to the press of the cultured East for an exposition of advanced methods of political discussions developed by superior refinement and civilization.

According to those exponents of human progress, reasoning with political opponents consists of a free use of "ridicule, sarcasm and billingsgate."

All arguments in favor of a policy not approved by you should be answered with abuse.

Any candidate for office who advocates a cause not in perfect conformity with your own interests and opinions should be branded as an anarchist.

Any party platform or declaration which is not dictated by you or the superior persons you represent is revolutionary and should be denounced as such at once.

The way to answer a strong plea in behalf of the rights and interests of the people is to charge the pleader with demagogism.

Whenever a candidate protests against injustice or abuse in the laws or the courts, denounce him as a disturber who wants to overthrow the sacred institution of government.

Lying is the finest weapon in the armory of political debate. When you have no other means of answering an opponent lie about him.

The etiquette of debate requires that you exhaust the vocabulary of contempt and vituperation in referring to a public man who does not advocate your views. The most courteous terms are fool, lunatic, kid, yawper, wind-bag.

By careful attention to those rules a political campaign may be conducted on that high plane of refinement and reason demanded by a superior civilization.

M. H. Bourne, a prominent young attorney of Lexington, was arrested while attempting to take some tools to a prisoner in the jail. Jailer Wilkerson had suspected him several days before, and when he had made application to enter the jail the young man was accused of having taken some tools into the jail last Thursday. He was searched and a brace, a jack-screw, several bits and a screw driver were found concealed on his person. The prisoner he was attempting to liberate is the alleged diamond shark arrested at Lexington three weeks ago, giving his name as W. N. Barnes. Barnes, whose real name is unknown, last week had $125 sent him from New York. He was to deliver this to the young lawyer for the tools he had requested. The other prisoners in the deal were Lafayette Brooks, sentenced to be hanged in Morgan county, and confined there for safekeeping, and Dan O'Brien, a well-known confidence man. Bourne admitted his guilt and, failing to give the required bond, was locked up. He came from Owen county several years ago, and was first honor man in the class of '93 at Kentucky University. He had some practice and stood high in society.

"The parties in interest do not wish to remove the plant from Frankfort where it his been an important factor in the business of the city, and may be reinstated as such."

The above is embraced in the announcement of the change in the Capital. If it has ever been a factor in the business of Frankfort no one ever knew it. It should have said: "We have received everything in sight, or within reach, from the Democratic party. We have now loaned our material and newspaper to the Republican party, and, if they succeed, the patronage from the Republican party will bring us an income and profit. If it fails, we will lease it to a Bryan and Sewall syndicate, and it will still produce us a profit. There is no trouble in shifting the machinery to a profit in any party. We have had experience in this business, because we used Dr. Woods until a new man was necessary, and then we placed Col. E. Polk Johnson before the Legislature, and in each case we were successful, and would have continued had not that infernal new constitution stopped further combnes. See!".

CROP AND STOCK.

Mr. J. L. Hood, of Mason county, raised a head of cabbage that weighed 18 pounds.

Hardin county men bought 224 mules in Missouri that averaged them $40 at home.

At Stanford, J. H. Baughman & Co., have bought about 30,000 bushels of wheat at from 35 to 50 cents per bushel.

The Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company, including nearly every warehouse in the city, has been incorporated with a capital of $1,600,000.

The weather has been cool this week causing tobacco to ripen rapidly also permitting growers to scaffold it out. Much of that cut the past two weeks is considerably damaged by house burning.—Carrollton News.

The tobacco worms are playing havoc with the tobacco in Logan county. Many farmers are plowing up half their crop to save the other. They are also paying from $1 50 to $2 per day and board for hands to pick the worms, and can not get any town negroes to go at that price.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The tobacco market has shown no change of importance the past week. The low prices appear to be an established fact, and nothing can be done to advance them. The prospects of the farmers are so favorable for a good crop that the manufacturers will not purchase only as necessity requires, there demand does not exceed the offerings, and the buyers can fill their requirements without scarcely any competition, except on fancy tobacco in the crop, which is scarce; and with a demand from some of our leading factories, it remains firm. Occasionally there is good competition for a fancy hogshead. The colory low grades are still the leading sellers, but we think the prices a shade easier on these grades, while an occasional lot of fancy colory lugs sell very well, but all grades of the dark and medium reds are selling low. Some of the better grades of the fillery goods remain firm at the prices obtained a month ago, but are not very satisfactory to the speculators who purchased in the early part of the year.

The offerings for the week have been moderate, except on Wednesday, when they were large, and one house was shut out, and, as we have said many times, if our shippers could divide their offerings more evenly between the four days they would be benefitted thereby, and get better prices. The largest portion of the offerings are accepted, as it is generally conceded that nothing in the future can improve the prices on this crop, as it is so inferior in quality it will have no show to come in competition with the new crop.

The cool weather has been a great benefit to the growers while they are cutting, and will dispel the fear of house burning. The present prospects are favorable for the proper curing of the crop, and we feel confident it will prove the best growth for years.—Western Tobacco Journal.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

John Munson, a well known citizen living near East Eagle, died last Friday after a protracted illness of several years of brain trouble.

The Concord Association convened with the Greenup Baptist church Tuesday, and was in session three days. A large number of delegates from visiting churches were present and a large number of visitors.

The Owenton Democrats are arranging to give the greatest barbecue ever attempted in Owen county on Thursday of the Fair, September 11. The Fair Company have offered to give the barbecue free and assist in arranging for the speakers and the grounds in the grove.

Sweet Owen democrats organized a Bryan and Sewall club last Saturday evening with 68 members four of whom were republicans and four prohibitionists. There were just 11 republicans in the precinct and it is the belief of the free silver boys that the precinct will cast a unanimous vote 200 strong for Bryan in November.

Mr. John S. Samuel, Jr., furnishes us the following information which he thinks may be of some benefit to his friends. He says that in 1882 he housed a crop of tobacco consisting of about six or eight thousand pounds in the barn then known as the Tom Brown barn, but now on the farm of W. O. Thomas, about one-half miles west of New Liberty, that he went to the barn a few days afterwards to examine it and found the tobacco and sticks had all burned in the house and all that he had to show for his summer's work was a few charred tier poles. Mr. Samuel has been raising tobacco all his life, and is living with the Bond Bros. on the Sparta pike about six miles north of this place and there is not a man in the district, but what is ready to verify any statement he may make.

CARROLL COUNTY

Next week is camp meeting.

Considerable sickness of serious cases.

The Rescue brought 108 hogsheads of tobacco out of the Kentucky river Tuesday morning, it was the banner trip of the season.

Hon. Theodore F. Hallam, of Covington, made two splendid speeches here last Friday afternoon and night. His afternoon speech was full of humor and argument, put in his peculiar way and aroused much enthusiasm. His speech at night was purely argument and was entirely different from that of the afternoon. Some of his comparisons were fine and he hit the gold standard men many heavy "rib roasters."

The residence of Rev. O M. Huey was, last Thursday, the scene of the uniting of the two happy young hearts, Mr. Samuel C. Hicks and Miss Sallie E. Kennedy, of Union, Boone county, where the contracting parties live. After the rendition of "Call me thine own," Rev. Huey performed the ceremony in a pleasing and impressive manner. The beautiful young bride is the sister of Mrs. Huey, and a most lovable young lady, while the groom is handsome and well-to-do. They left immediately after lunch for a bridal trip. Only a few intimate friends present.

GRANT COUNTY

[Courier]

Mr. John C. Starnes, of Holbrook, has just returned from a ten days trip to Old Point Comfort. He heard the money question, not discussed, but talked of for it was all one way, for silver.

The contested local option election was up last Saturday and was heard before the Contesting Board, Judge J. D. McMillan, H. Z. Allphin and J. W. Shields. The Board held the election legal. An appeal was taken to the Circuit Court.

Hon. Eugene K. Wilson, of London, Laurel county, son of Dr. J. M. Wilson, is in town on a ten days visit to his parents. Eugene has been the right hand man of Hon. David Colson in his fight for the renomination for Congress in the bloody Eleventh, and has spoken in and traveled over every county of the seventeen in the district during the last thirty days. Eugene says that the Eleventh is fairly honey-combed with free silver sentiment and that nearly every Democrat in the district and thousands of Republicans in the mines and around the railroad shops are for free silver and say that they are going to vote for Bryan and Sewall. He says that McKinley's majority in that stronghold of Republicanism will not come anyways near the figures of Bradley's majority last year, which was 14,000. He is of the opinion that if McKinley has a majority of eight or nine thousand he will do remarkably well.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1896. NO. 45.

Political speakings are the order of the day now.

Don't forget the meeting of the Democratic club here next Monday.

The Indianapolis convention will be composed of a lot of political wayfarers.

Will Bourke Cockran be paid in gold for the Republican gold speechs is he making?

The Free Silver Democrats in the South and West never bolted. They have always submitted to the will of the majority.

Does anybody carry General Simon Bolivar Buckner's written pledge to abide the action of the Indianapolis convention.

If Henry Watterson considers that his election as President would be disasterous to him, what does he imagine the result would be to the United States.

Tammany is putting up a strong fight for Bryan and Sewall in New York City, and its is claimed that their majority there and in Brooklyn will reach 50,000.

Well, Col. Breckinridge is only engaged in a game of get even. Two years ago he was repudiated by the Democratic party, and he is now returning the compliment.

The Republicans say there is nothing in Bryan's speeches, nevertheless several of their ablest men have been trying very hard to answer them, and are still very busy with the task.

Those Louisville papers that went out of their way two years ago to heap abuse upon Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge are now lavish in their praises of him. It was thought they had buried him too deep for resurrection, but he bolted the action of the Chicago convention, and is now in good fellowship with his recent bitterest enemies.

Bourke Cockran, a Boltercrat who is making speeches in favor of McKinley and the gold standard, in his attempt to answer Bryan's New York speech declared that the prices farm produce are too high and ought to be reduced. Cockran is good gold standard authority. What do you farmers think of his declaration? Do you concur with him? Not much.

In 1892 the Republicans attempted to justify their high tariff notion by pointing to the distressed condi[illegible] of the English laborers, claiming that it was the result of free trade; but as England has the gold standard and they want the same maintained in this country, they have discovered, very suddenly, that the English laborer is not in as bad condition as they pictured him four years ago. The condition of English labor is liable to get the Republican orators into an awkward predicament.

Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge has, by his wonderful talent and sublime courage, come out of the shadow of his great disgrace and today stands in the front rank of Kentucky's great men. David, from whom the royal line of Redeemer claimed tittle, fell as did Kentucky's brillant son, but the brilliance of his character and courage effaced the shadow of his sin. Every brave man, every pure man, every chivalrous Kentuckian must feel a thrill of pleasure as this intellectual giant rises again to his full height and breasts his way to the front for "Right and my native land."—Frankfort Capital, Rep.

Only two years ago the Capital was engaged in a daily tirade of abuse against Col. Breckinridge. But now it considers him almost to good and great for this sinful world.

David McClure, of Crawfordsville, Ind., in speaking with an Outlook man of the appalling ignorance of a large part of the people on this silver issue mentioned a well-to do Indiana farmer that came into his store and was preaching free silver at a great rate. Mr. McClure asked if he was in debt. The farmer replied that he owed $1,600, but had $100 in gold laid up and when free silver was enacted he would get 16 silver dollars for each of his gold dollars and would make the $100 in gold, pay the $1,600 debt.—Owingsville Outlook.

The above is a specimen of the trash some of the gold bugs who attribute to themselves all wisdom and knowledge, are using in their attempt to stamp the silverites with ignorance. The real fool is the fellow who tries to prove everybody else fools.

All the gold of the world available for money is estimated at about $4,000,000,000, which is less than the public debt of France alone. It is considerable less than the railroad debt of the United States, and hardly more than the aggregate national state, county and municipal debt of the United States. What the aggregate of the world's public and private debt is, nobody knows. The stock of gold in the United States is less than $700,000,000.

If we must part company with those who believe in a government of syndicates, by syndicates and for syndicates, may we not appeal with confidence to those who believe that a government of the people, by the people and for the people should not perish from the earth? (Applause.) If these men who pride themselves upon their prominence in the business world and who glory in the title of business men are going to make a business out of politics. and are going to use their ballots to increase their income, I beg you to consider whether the great toiling masses of this nation have not a right to make a business out of politics once and protect their homes and families from disaster. (Applause.)—W. J. Bryan at Tivoli.

It would not be a surprise if there is a bolt in the Boltocrat convention which assembles in Indianapolis to-day. The convention will be composed of two elements, one of which desires to organize a national McKinley Aid Society by the nomination of a candidate for the Presidency; while the other element thinks more effectual aid can be rendered the Republican nominee by failing to make a nomination, thereby leaving the gold Democrats free to vote the Republican ticket. The element that favors making a nomination believes by so doing enough votes will be taken from Bryan to defeat him. Now as both these elements are composed of men who have refused to submit to the will of the majority of the party with which they have heretofore affiliated, they can not be relied on to submit to the action of a majority of the Indianapolis convention, and may emphasize their displeasure by bolting again.

The following from the Frankfort Capital proves that Col. Breckinridge stands in well with the Republicans in the Ashland District, and that they may yet nominate him for Congress:

"The Republicans of the Seventh district are face to face with a serious problem upon which grave consequences may depend. The Democratic party in this district is rent with dissensions, and divided on the currency question. Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge is the acknowledged leader of the Democratic sound money men. The silver men will nominate Evan Settle or W. C. Owens.

"Judge George Denny, of Lexington, by his gallant fight two years ago, has earned the leadership of the Republican party in the district. His magnificent oratory, superb personality and unflinching courage are coupled with a political and personal character that cannot be assailed. If Judge Denny wishes to be the nominee of his party for Congress it is his by right, and by the choice of his constituents.

"But it is a serious question whether any Republican can win. If the nomination of a Republican will lose the district to the Populists in the Presidential race, then no nomination should be made but rather by a combination of all sound money men, save the district by electing Breckinridge and defeating Bryan in the district. Breckinridge is a sound money man, and Judge Denny is one of those who did not join in heaping insults upon his fallen political opponent, but like a true Kentuckian refused to hit a man who was down. Denny always hits a man who is up, when he starts out for a scrap, and the higher up his man is, the harder he hits him. But in this political and national crisis, the serious consideration of Judge Denny and all Republicans should be given the question, how to beat Bryan?

"If Denny can do it by running for Congress, he ought to make the race, but if the candidacy of Breckinridge without Republican opposition will best assure the result, we believe and we believe Judge Denny will agree that it is best for him not to make the race. It is a little too early to decide this question, but it ought to be carefully considered and largely left to Judge Denny's judgment, which may be relied on, as well as his honesty of purpose and his loyalty to his party and his country."

HO! FOR THE FAIR.

Everything Ready For The Exhibition Which Begins To-Morrow.

Good and Ample Accommodations for Everybody.

Good Music and a Big Show.

When the gates are thrown open to-morrow morning everything will be found in readiness for the first exhibition of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association at its new grounds near Florence. That such will be the case is due to the push and business tact of the building committee that has rushed to completion the arrangements of the commodious grounds.

The people of Boone and adjoining counties have been desirous of reestablishing a fair in this county ever since it was discontinued in '82.

The Boone County Harvest Home which was largely attended for years, proved the desire of the public for an exhibition of stock and farm products on a large scale, on grounds better prepared for an exhibition and the accommodation of the visitors; and when the old company's lease on the grounds near Limaburg expired, it was decided to establish a fair, and Carpenter's woods near Florence was selected as the most desirable site.

Those behind the enterprise lost no time in soliciting stock for the new fair, and in a remarkably short period enough was subscribed to insure its success, and a meeting was held and the North Kentucky Agricultural Association was organized and officers elected as follows: President, B. F. McGlasson, of Kenton; Vice-President, E. H. Blankenbecker, of Boone; Secretary, G. J. Allen, and W. P. Carpenter, Treasurer, both of Boone. Directors—J. J. Rucker, F. Utz and J. M. Lassing, of Boone, and Orin Percival and W. C. Harris, of Kenton, with stock holders distributed over Boone, Gallatin, Grant, Kenton and Campbell counties.

The grounds having been leased for a period of 19 years, everything was now in readiness to commence the construction of the commodious amphitheater, the stalls for stock and other necessary buildings.

A saw-mill which cut a large portion of the lumber used in the buildings was given employment on the leased land, and with a large force of hands, under the direction of Henry Griffith, the grounds soon presented a scene of activity that developed the various accommodations which will be dedicated to-morrow.

As the work has progressed the interest in the fair to be held this fall has increased until everybody in this and the neighboring counties has been talking about it for the past three months, and looking forward to the event in anticipation of a renewal of the many features which rendered the old fair so famous far and near, and when the thousands assemble there to-morrow, and take a view of the surroundings, it will seem to many of them that the wheel of time has taken a backward turn, retracing quite a quarter of a century, placing them in the midst of one of those old time annual gatherings, the memory of which is yet cherished by all of the older citizens of this county.

The directors will bend their effort to make the three day's exhibition a success, and with favorable weather they have every reason to believe that the public will show its appreciation of their enterprise by a liberal patronage.

There have been many estimates published of the amount of money Americans spend on their trips abroad. Taking the second-class travelers into consideration with the first-cabin travelers, I am of the opinion that $600 is about the average expenditure on the trip. It is a mistake to suppose that the wealthy traveler spends large sums on the other side. Such persons usually take servants along, and the ordinary expenses are quite a heavy drain for a rich man or woman. Once on the other side, they go to some quiet place, and they usually count their pennies with the care of those of less liberal means. A large sum is expended every year in Europe in the purchase of clothing. I think, however, that this does not average more than $100 for each traveler. Considerable money is spent in the purchase of souvenirs, but this probably does not exceed $26 for each traveler. Those who have been to Europe before spend almost nothing for souvenirs on following trips. Still, when one thinks of the army that goes to Europe every year, an expenditure of $600 for each person amounts to an enormoussum. For the 100,000 who crossed in 1895 this would amount to $60,000,000. That sum, in my estimation, represents about what Americans pay each year for the satisfaction of crossing the ocean and spending more or less time in sightseeing in Europe.—Chautauquan.

The Congressional District Committee met at Sanders, last Monday, and reconsidered its action at a recent former meeting, and, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress, ordered that precinct meetings be held at 2 o'clock p. m. on September 26th to choose delegates —1 to each 25 Democratic voters or fraction of 13 cast at the last Presidential election, to attend county or legislative district conventions to be held September 28th. The county or legislative district conventions will select delegates, one for each 200 votes, and one for each fraction over 100 Democratic votes cast at the last Presidential election, to be sent to the District convention to be held at Williamstown, on September 30th.

Are the Republicans afraid to have Bryan speak in Ohio? If they are not why were they going over his proposed route in that State and advertising that his appointments had been cancelled? It looks very much like they fear the effects of his mingling with the Buckeye voters.

POLITICAL.

The emblem of the National Democrats of Kentucky will be a picture of Jefferson, surrounded by a wreath of hickory leaves.

Nothing that the New York Sun says against either the Chicago ticket or the Indianapolis Convention should be paid any attention to by Democrats, gold or silver. The times that old man Dana doesn't write against the Democratic party are very few and as far between.—State Journal.

It is beyond the power of humanity to understand the complete change in moral sentiment which has overtaken many individuals in this county in regard to Col. Breckinridge. There are men prominently connected with the Boltocratic movement in this county who, two years ago had no hesitation in declaring that no decent man would listen to Breckinridge speak, let alone vote for him. But these same gentlemen, and doubtless you all know them, journeyed to Louisville and sat with mouths open and ears strained while the Col. poured forth his golden sentences and sparkling generalities.—Henry Local.

Senator James B. Beck, of Kentucky, in a speech before the United States Senate in January, 1878, —see page 258, Congressional Record January 1878,—said:

"I know that the bondholders and monopolists of this country are seeking to destroy all the industries of the people in their greed to enhance the value of the gold. I know that the act of 1873 did more than all else to accomplish that result, and the demonetization act of the Revised Statute was an illegal and unconstitutional consummation of the fraud. I want to restore that money to where it was before, and thus aid in preventing the consummation of their designs."

There is no end to the criticism heaped upon "the Eagle of Glen Lilly," ex-Gov. Simon Bolivar Buckner, because of his step in deserting the party after his action in the Hart county convention, which sent delegates to the state convention at Lexington. When the Hart county convention met there were many delegates favoring the free coinage of silver, and although the movement was then comparatively in its infancy, Gen. Buckner, fearing that some of the free silver advocates would not support the nominee of the Chicago convention, which he confidently expected would instruct in favor of a single gold standard, he prepared a resolution, pledging all participants of that county convention to support the democratic standard-bearer. In addition to preparing it he urged its passage, and due to his eloquence, it became a part of the record of the proceedings.

The Winchester Democrat makes pertinent inquiry in the following:

"The goldbug press is making frantic appeals to those having money in saving banks not to allow free coinage to become a law, because then they would be paid in 50 cent dollars. In round numbers there are 5,000,000 persons who have $1,800,000,000 deposited in saving banks. It is evident that if the banks could pay all these deposits at the rate of 50 cents for each $1. the banks would make a profit of $900,000,000 an amount large enough to interest them in the restoration of free coinage at the earliest possible day. Why is it then that the banking classes are practically solid in support of the single gold standard? Is it that they are so philanthropic as to refuse to make a profit of $900,000,000, or is it that the statement is a lie?"

We have just received a copy of "The Life and speeches of Bryan and Sewall" from the Publishers, and we desire to call the attention of our readers. who may be interested, to this book which is of great value, and should be in possession of all who are anxious to know of these two candidates. The price of the book is 25 cents for a paper cover, and $1.00 for cloth binding. The Publishers desire an agent to canvass this county, and will allow any agent a commission of sixty per cent. A Prospectus Book and circulars giving full particulars will be sent to any address for 30 cents. Address J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Co., 57 Rose St., New York.

THE LOUISVILLE MUDDLE

Assuming a Serious Aspect—Two Chiefs of Police, But One Is Not Recognized.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 27.—After hearing the argument in the contempt proceedings against Mayor Todd and the aldermen, Judge Toney adjourned court until 2 p. m. Thursday and granted a respite to the defendants until that hour, when he will render a decision.

Nearly every member of the police force, including all captains and officers refused to recognize the new chief of police. The five station houses were guarded throughout the day by squads of police who were instructed to hold them at all hazards. The officers of the old board of safety and the chief of police were under a like guard, but the new chief remained in the mayor's office and made no attempt to take possession.

The Negro element are very much excited over the prospect of a new police force and fire department, and as all of them are republicans, a mass meeting has been called for Thursday night, when they will demand their share of the spoils. It is now said that Mayor Todd will take immediate steps to remove the democratic board of public works from office by impeachment.

The Courier Journal Thursday morning says that Mayor Todd has joined the A. P. A. All three members of the new board of safety are members of the order.

There was an air of uneasiness about the city Wednesday because of the impeachment of the old board of public safety and the consequent demoralizations of the police force which the resigning powers are determined to capture. There was a cutting affair Wednesday afternoon in which two ex-detectives, Wm. DeForrester, a witness for the prosecution, and Tom Gonneli, a witness for the defense figured and Wednesday night Col. John B. Castleman, commanding the Louisville legion, First regiment Kentucky state guards, ordered infantry companies A. and B., and a detail from battery A. 78 men in all, to report at the armory to guard it for the night. Capt. David Castleman, who is in charge, declines to state what his orders are.

Wednesday night at Frankfort Appellate Judge Hazlerigg was ready to hear argument on the motion of the old board of safety to reinstate Judge Toney's injunction, but the attorneys agreed to postpone matters until Thursday morning.

AN EXPLOSION.

Powder Mill at Goes Station, Near Xenia, O., Blows Up—Two Men Instantly Killed and Several Others Seriously Injured.

Xenia, O., Aug. 27.—A terrific explosion occurred about 9:10 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Miami Powder works, at Goes Station, O., four miles north of here. Frank Eich, of Xenia, and Silas Figgins, of Goes Station, were instantly killed and several other workmen seriously injured.

The explosion was the worst ever experienced in this part of the country, and property was damaged a mile away, while the explosion was felt for 20 miles.

The mills had been closed for some time and the men were at the dryhouse, where the explosion occurred, making repairs. Both men were married, and Figgins leaves besides his widow, two daughters, aged 14 and 16 years. The same house blew up 10 years ago, killing three men. The shock was distinctly felt here and the smoke plainly seen.

Yellow Springs, O., Aug. 27.—An awful explosion occurred in the direction of the powder mills at Goes Wednesday morning. Many windows were broken here, four miles away. The jar felt like an earthquake.

The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a spark from the stroke of a hammer, and but very few fragments of Figgins' or Eich's body can be found. The dryhouse contained 8,000 pounds of powder, and nothing but a hole about the size of the building tells where it stood. All the trees and bushes in the vicinity were stripped of their limbs and foliage. The report was heard in the adjoining towns, where many windows were blown out. The new opera house there was damaged, as well as other buildings. The two men killed were bosses.

Drowned in a Water Bucket.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 27.—A 13-months' old son of John Moeller, of West View, a suburb of Allegheny, was drowned in a bucket during the brief absence of the child's mother from the kitchen. The bucket, half filled with water, was on the floor. When Mrs. Moller returned the baby was standing on its head in the water. Every effort to restore life proved unavailing.

Office-Holders Warned.

Washington, Aug. 27.—The civil service commission has issued an order to federal office-holders warning all employes against seeking or making contributions for campaign purposes. The order is sweeping in its character and effects all branches of the government service. Violaters of the law will be prosecuted.

Black Nominated for Governor.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Frank S. Black, of Troy, was nominated for governor by the republican state convention Wednesday on the fourth ballot. The nomination on motion was made unanimous. Mr. Black was escorted to the platform and delivered a brief speech of thanks.

Michigan Populists Nominate.

Bay City, Mich., Aug. 27.—The populist convention Wednesday nominated the following state ticket: Governor, Chas. R. Slight; lieutenant governor, Justin R. Whiting; state treasurer, Otto E. Karste, of Gogebic; auditor general, A. E. Cole, of Livingstone; attorney general, Alfred J. Murphy, of Detroit.

BLOODY RIOT.

A Large Body of Men, Armed With Revolvers, Invade the Ottoman Bank, Killing a Number of Gendarmes on Guard—The Riot Became General—Shops Sacked and Bazars Invaded—Several People Killed and Wounded.

Constantinople, Aug. 28. — Mobs were in possession of a large part of Constantinople Wednesday night. Early in the afternoon a body of men, armed with revolvers and bombs, invaded the Ottoman bank, killing a number of gendarmes on guard. The employes of the bank fled to the quarters occupied by the tobacco syndicate, which has control of the collection of the taxes on tobacco throughout the empire.

The invaders mounted the roof of the building, and from the open windows fired at the police in the street below. The police returned the fusillade and several persons were killed and wounded. Then the riot became general. Shops were ransacked and bazars invaded and the wildest excitement prevailed throughout certain quarters of Constantinople.

A later report says that there is no doubt the movement was revolutionary in plan and scope; that it had its origin at secret meetings of Armenians. About 40 of the rioters were still in possession of the Ottaman bank at a late hour Wednesday evening, despite all the efforts of the government forces to remove them.

Riots continue and the mobs are constantly increasing in the Galata quarter.

A bomb exploded in Constantinople, near the Galata zereal (guardhouse). Many soldiers were killed and wounded.

Her majesty's ship Dryad at once left Therapia, where she was anchored, and proceeded to this city. It is also expected that the French and Italian guardships will reach Constantinople early in the morning

Paris, Aug. 28.—The directors of the Ottoman bank, in Galata, the business center of Constantinople, have wired the manager of the bank's Paris office that the disturbances which occurred there Wednesday evening, when the bank was attacked and seized by an armed band of rioters, are ended, and that everything is well with the bank and quiet in the city, thanks to the energetic intervention of the sultan.

Constantinople, Aug. 28.—Rioting of a desultory character was renewed in the city Thursday morning, but was soon speedily suppressed by the police. Nothing was taken by the rioters from the banks which they attacked Wednesday.

The party of men who, Wednesday, forced their way into the Ottoman bank, killing the gendarmes who were on guard at the entrance to the building, surrendered Thursday morning, and were arrested and lodged in prison. No Europeans were injured during the firing which took place between the seizers of the bank and the police, or in the outbreaks which occurred in various parts of Galetea.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—The Vossische Zeitung's correspondent in Constantinople represents the outbreak Wednesday afternoon as a general massacre, and says many hundreds of corpses are lying in the streets, and a Turkish mob attacked the houses of Armenian inhabitants. The Porte's official account of the affair alleges that after the capture of the Ottoman bank, the Armenians showered bombs into the streets from roofs and windows of the bank and other buildings, killing a great many passers-by. Among the persons who were thus killed were four ladies.

SENATOR CAFFREY,

Of Louisiana, Will Be Permanent Chairman of the Coming National Democratic Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 28.—It can now be positively stated that Senator Caffrey, of Louisiana, will be the permanent chairman of the coming national democratic convention. Ex-Gov. Flower, of New York, is the latest for temporary chairman and he has been put down as the man. Senator Vilas' boom for the head of the ticket has been broken by the announcement that Wisconsin, his own state, has declared for Bragg, while Watterson's chances have gone up considerably by reason of the news from New York that that state is taking a great interest in the Kentuckian's boom. Carlisle is now entirely out of the race, by his own decree. He has written declaring that he can not afford to accept the nomination, for "it would not appear well, as he is the man who has had control of the issuance and sale of government bonds—a vital question in the campaign."

Indiana will go into the convention without a candidate for the first time in 30 years, and it now looks like Bragg or Watterson.

Must Pay Wages in Silver.

Port Townsend, Wash., Aug. 28.—The United States shipping commissioner at this port is inserting in the shipping articles of all vessels bound for foreign ports, a clause providing that the final payment for crews' wages shall be made in United States silver coin or its equivalent. This ruling has created much dissatisfaction among seamen. Ship owners assert that this action is a precautionary movement in anticipation of the probable adoption of the free coinage laws.

Louisana Delegates to Indianapolis.

New Orleans, Aug. 28.—The state convention of sound money democrats met Thursday, and after passing resolutions denouncing the Chicago platform, selected Hon. Donelson Caffery, T. Marshall Miller, E. N. Farrell and M. H. Spellman, as delegates to Indianapolis.

Harry Hill Dead.

New York, Aug. 28.—Harry Hill, who for many years occupied a prominent and unique position among the sporting fraternity in this city, died Thursday night at his home, at Corona, L. I. His death was caused by malaria.

THE BANDITS

Will Be Captured Without the Assistance of Troops—Marshal Hall Has Recruited a Number of Frontiersmen for the Work.

Silver City, N. M., Aug. 29.—Owing to the roughness of the country United States Marshal Hall has deemed it better to rely upon experienced frontiersmen in the attempt to capture the bandits entrenched in Skelton canyon near the New Mexican line. He has recruited sufficient deputies to make the attack without the assistance of the troops which have been ordered to return to their respective posts, Fort Bayard and Grant. Marshal Hall and force will reach the stronghold of the robbers by Saturday night and expects to attack them early Sunday morning. It is now definitely known that the leader of the bandits is the notorious Joe George, who headed the gang that held up a Southern Pacific train near Stein's Pass, in this territory, about a year ago. It is said that the reason the robbers are remaining in the canyon is to care for two of the band who were wounded in the recent fight with a sheriff's posse at the time of the Nogales affair, until they shall be able to travel. George has been operating along the border stealing cattle for the past eight months, and he has now gathered together a gang of desperadoes for the purpose of train and bank robbery.

A message just received says the outlaws left Skelton canyon Thursday night and remained all night at a ranch six miles from Deming. Hall and posse are following them.

DASHED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Geo. W. Hibbard Falls From a Balloon While at a Height of 2,500 Feet—Her Husband Attempts Suicide.

St. Louis, Aug. 29.—Mrs. George W. Hibbard, known professionally as Victoria Leroy, fell from her balloon Friday at Clayton, St. Louis county, a distance of 2,500 feet. During each day of the county fair at Clayton this week she has made successful ascensions. At 5 o'clock Friday evening she had ascended about 60 feet when her parachute became detached and fell to the ground. The balloon shot up rapidly. The woman, in an effort to catch the parachute, had partly fallen and was hanging with one arm hooked over the trapeze bar.

When the balloon was almost lost in the clouds a dark speck was seen to drop from it and the 3,000 spectators groaned in unison. The frantic husband rushed into his tent and seized a pistol. As he pulled the trigger with the weapon pointed at his heart, his arm was seized and his life was saved. The woman fell one mile north of the fair grounds, first striking a tree. Fragments of the body were left in the tree. The Hibbards are residents of some place in Eastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Hibbard is delirious and may never recover his reason.

POLITICAL MENTION.

The Sixth Maryland congressional district democratic convention has nominated Blair Lee, of Montgomery, for congress by acclamation.

The republicans of the Third Tennessee district have nominated by acclamation W. J. Cliff, a lawyer of Chattanooga, for congress.

The populists have nominated Wm. Peck for representative in congress in the Fifth Georgia district, now represented by L. F. Livingston.

The populists of the Fifth congressional district at Rocky Mountain, Va., indorsed Bryan and Watson, but made no nomination for congress, a committee being appointed with power to make a nomination should the democrats refuse to accord the populists two electors.

The populists of the Twelfth Indiana district at Auburn nominated James M. Robinson, democratic nominee for congress.

The republicans of the Eighteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania nominated Thad M. Mahon for congress.

Carl D. Shelden, of Houghton, Mich., received the republican nomination for congress in the Twelfth district on the fifth ballot.

NEGRO CRIMINAL

Kills a Deputy Sheriff, and Is in Turn Shot to Death by the Deputy's Companion.

Indianola, Miss., Aug. 29.—Dick Montgomery, a Negro fugitive from justice, was located by Deputy Sheriff Paris near Greenville in Sunflower county. Taking with him another deputy named Cox, Paris started after the criminal, after employing a Negro named Tom Moore to aid them as a spy. Moore came back and told the location of the Negro and that he was unarmed. As the deputies were approaching the place where the fugitive was, a load of shot was fired by the hunted Negro, who was in ambush, and Paris fell dead. The Negro then tried to shoot Cox, but that officer put a bullet into his head, killing him instantly. It is believed the Negro spy betrayed the officers.

THE DETAILS

Of the Grand Army of the Republic Encampment Perfected.

St. Paul Is in Gala Attire—Bunting and Flags Are in Evidence on Every Hand—The Women's Relief Corps Will Meet During Encampment Week.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 31.—St. Paul is ready for the Grand Army veterans, although they will not be here in full force till the first of the week for their 30th annual encampment.

Bunting and flags are in abundance everywhere, in the residence portions as well as in the business center, and already a good many visitors are here in anticipation of the encampment. The railroads have completed all plans for handling the people, and the street railway people, whose lines are considerably crippled, say they will do as well as they can with the crowd.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF WALKER.

The living flag, with its 2,000 children, had an open-air rehearsal Friday, which was a success. The evergreen arch, under which the veterans will march, erected by the colored people of the city, was formally dedicated.

The decorations along the line of march for the big parades are mostly in place, and the grand stands, with their seating capacity of 10,000, are completed.

At the same time as the encampment the Knights of Pythias will hold a convention at Minneapolis, with several gorgeous parades, which the veterans, of course, will not miss. The Women's Relief corps will meet during the week of the encampment. Mrs. Elizabeth Turner, of Boston, is its national president. The other feminine annex of the G. A. R. is the Ladies of the G. A. R. The president of the rival body is Mrs. Catherine E. Hirst, of Louisville.

The choice of the commander-in-chief seems to lie between Gen. Joshua A. Given, of Iowa, and Maj. Thaddeus S. Clarkson, of Nebraska. The chances seem to favor Iowa's favorite. Gen. Given is an Ohio man. He fought in the Mexican and civil wars. For 12 years he has been one of the most distinguished judges of the Iowa supreme court.

MRS. LIZABETH A. TURNER.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 31.—The grand army people are preparing to move on St. Paul in force, according to the figures of the railroads. In addition to the regular sleeping car service there have been already engaged 1,400 Pullmans to bring visitors from the east, and this does not include any other kind of sleeping cars.

General Secretary Pinney announces that mail for G. A. R. men and all others who attend the national encampment should be addressed to their quarters, and instructions should be given to the St. Paul post office on arrival in the city.

Hammer, saw and ladder were in quite as general use Sunday as on week days, the people being engaged in putting the finishing touches on the decorations for the G. A. R. encampment, beginning Monday and lasting throughout the week.

PARTICULARS

Of the Wreck of the German Gunboat Itlis Off the Coast of Shan-Tung.

San Francisco, Aug. 31.—The steamer Rio Janeiro, which arrived from Yokohama Saturday, brought full particulars of the wreck of the German gunboat Itlis off the coast of Shan-Tung on July 23. The Rio was also caught in the same storm which sent the Itlis to the bottom and she was obliged to heave to for 22 hours. Only 11 of the crew of the Itlis reached land in safety. The exact number lost is unknown, but the following officers are among those who perished: Commander Braunn, Lieuts. Holbach, Fraunstadt, Prasse, Seigrom and Hildebrandt; Navigator Ihlobach, Engineer Hill and the paymaster. The gunboat was driven hard on a broken ledge of rocks and went to pieces in a few minutes. The survivors floated ashore on wreckage.

MATCHBOX OF THE NEW WOMAN

Man No Longer the Monopolist of This Convenience.

Until this year the matchbox has been the unquestioned, exclusive property of man. Never once did he think of such a thing as the fairer sex borrowing it. He may have had a presentiment of her laying claim to his necktie, but his matchbox—never, says the Chicago Tribune.

But the bicycle girl, who makes whatever she wants possible, has now laid siege to man's matchbox. If she contemplated riding at night she needs matches to light her lamp, and necessarily she must carry them in a matchbox.

That is the reason that there are any number of new matchboxes this year which are smaller and more dainty than anything in this line ever seen before.

"Do the girls buy them?" a prominent jeweler was asked. To which question he answered: "Yes, indeed. The smaller sizes are made particularly for their special use."

The prettiest of the new matchboxes for girls are of gold with an enameled decoration. The enameling either takes the form of a college or yacht club flag or it resembles a hand-painted miniature showing a girl on a wheel or the head of a dog. Many of these matchboxes are made with a concealed recess for a photograph. It is only when a certain spring is touched that the picture can be seen, so skillfully it is hidden away.

The silver matchboxes, decorated with the outline of a tiny bicycle in enamel, are also new and much less expensive.

The glorious results of this season's harvest of golden grain will pour a stream of sound money into the pockets of every Dakota farmer.

South Dakota has thousands of acres of choice farming and ranch land lying east of the Missouri river, and within one day's ride from Chicago or Milwaukee, which can now be bought reasonably cheap, but which before the end of another year may be advanced in price.

The stock raising industry in South Dakota is profitable, and eastern capital is now being invested in cattle and sheep growing in that state.

Diversified farming, the growing of live stock, and the products of the dairy, are placing South Dakota foremost in the ranks of the successful western states.

Those desiring full information on the subject, and particularly those who wish to seek a new home or purchase land, are requested to correspond with W. E. Powell, General Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill., or H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agent for South Dakota, 295 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

Gen Weyler's Decree in Respect to the Sugar and Coffee Crops.

The Conservative Party Have Decided to Ask the Home Government to Recall the General—Consul Lee Wants an Investigation of Govin's Death.

KEY WEST, Fla., Aug. 31.—Great excitement prevails in Havana over Weyler's decree in respect to the sugar and coffee crops. It is believed, if issued, the decree will be strongly opposed. Serious complications are expected from the Spanish element. It is rumored that the conservative party held a secret meeting and decided to ask the home government for Weyler's recall, and, if refused, to forcibly expell him as was done to Gen. Dulce in the last war.

It is understood that Consul Lee has strongly protested against the notice posted at the entry of the Cabana fortress, stating if the American consul present himself there to detain and arrest him. Lee has also demanded that Weyler make a full investigation of Charles Govin's death.

It is further reported that Quintin Bandera and 60 followers have crossed the southern section of the trocha and are now operating around Poso Redondo and that Bandera will assume command of the forces in Havana province, heretofore under Gen. Zayas, who was killed in a recent engagement.

GRANT'S TOMB.

Li Hung Chang, the Chinese Viceroy, Visits Riverside Drive.

NEW YORK, August 31.—The most interesting part of the programme Sunday was the visit of the Chinese ambassador to the tomb of Gen. Grant, on Riverside Drive. Li Hung Chang had a great admiration for Gen. Grant, who was one of his heroes. At an early hour in the forenoon a crowd began to gather in the vicinity of the Waldorf anxious to get a glimpse of the famous Chinaman. Acting Inspector Harley, with a force of 125 men stationed around the house, kept the people from crowding around the hotel.

The hour set for Earl Li's visit to Grant's tomb was 3 o'clock. Before that time the police stopped traffic and nobody was admitted into Thirty-third street. A dense mass of people lined the sidewalks along Fifth avenue as far as the eye could see. There were bluecoats stationed all along the route which was covered by the distinguished visitor. This was: Fifth avenue to Forty-ninth street, to the Boulevard, to the Riverside drive and the tomb. Acting Police Inspector Thompson was in command of 500 men stationed around the tomb and along the drive.

Col. Fred. Grant, accompanied by his son, Ulysses Grant, and by his brother, Ulysses Grant, of San Diego, Cal., arrived at the Waldorf at 2:20 o'clock. Mrs. Grant, the widow of Gen. Grant, who was staying at the Fifth Avenue hotel, was driven to Col. Grant's house 25 East Sixty-second street, where Li Hung Chang was to visit her after the ceremony at the tomb was over.

An immense wreath which the ambassador was to place on the tomb of the dead general, was first carried down stairs from the viceroy's apartments. This wreath, carefully guarded by a member of Li's suite, was placed in a cab and taken to the tomb.

Li Hung Chang and party drove up Riverside drive opposite the tomb at 4:15 o'clock. His appearance was a signal for hearty cheering. There was a short delay while one of the Chinese attendants hastened back to a rear carriage to bring Li Hung Chang's sedan chair. When it arrived he was carried by four police from the road to the tomb. He carried an umbrella in one hand and a gold-mounted cane in the other. On reaching the top of the flight of steps Li alighted. The heavy iron door leading to the tomb was then opened. Li, after taking in one hand his floral wreath, entered the crypt and placed it on the iron casket. Before doing so he made a profound bow.

After remaining standing for 20 minutes alongside of the casket Li uttered several words in Chinese and made a profound bow. Stepping backward to the door he repeated the same words to himself and made a second bow. Then he withdrew. As he seated himself in the sedan chair the crowd uttered a rousing cheer. This seemed to please him greatly, for he gently nodded his head.

The entire party then entered carriages and were driven to the residence of Col. Grant, in East Sixty-second street. There a crowd of 3,000 people awaited him. Li declined the use of the sedan chair, and, leaning on the arms of Gen. Ruger and Col. Grant, he ascended the flight of carpeted steps and entered the drawing room, where the reception was held.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—President Cleveland, accompanied by Attorney General Harmon and Private Secretary Thurber, arrived at the residence of Hon. Wm. C. Whitney, Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, Saturday morning. President Cleveland and his party came down from Buzzard's Bay on the yacht Sapphire, arriving at the foot of Twenty-sixth street at 8:30.

At 10:40 Li Hung Chang left the Waldorf to pay his respects to President Cleveland at the residence of Wm. C. Whitney. He was escorted by the Sixth cavalry.

Weyler at His Old Tricks.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—A special from Boston says: Lieut. Alverado, of Gen. Maceo's army, arrived here from Cuba. He says that a month ago Gen. Weyler discovered a Cuban newspaper in the pocket of an American named Charles Churchill, of Pennsylvania. By Weyler's command Churchill was immediately wrapped in an American flag and burned to death. Four American sea captains were witnesses to this.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Charles Stanley Reinhart, the artist, died of Bright's disease Sunday afternoon.

HE IS HERE.

Li Hung Chang, Viceroy of China, Lands in New York—The Renowed Diplomat Becomes the Guest of the Nation.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Li Hung Chang, viceroy of China, ambassador extraordinary to Russia and world-renowned diplomat, arrived in New York Friday and became the guest of the nation. The stately St. Louis passed Fire Island at 10:38 a. m. with the distinguished visitor on board. The American-built greyhound of the seas made the trip from Southampton in six days and three hours. She was saluted by the tooting of whistles of the tugs and steamers as she passed up the lower bay and entered the Narrows.

The cruisers Cincinnati, Columbia, Raleigh, Newark, the battle-ships Indiana and Massachusetts, peerless in their class: the Maine, the Texas, the monitors Amphitrite and Terror, the ram Katahdin and the dispatch-boat Dolphin, with the reception committee on board. The men-of-war formed in double column, and, as the St. Louis passed between the lines, saluted in turn with the roar of their batteries. The committee from the Dolphin boarded the St. Louis off Quarantine and accompanied Li Hung Chang to the pier of the American line at the foot of Fulton street, where the landing was made.

Preparations for the reception of the famous Chinaman had been carefully arranged. Maj. Gen. Thomas Ruger, commander of the department of the east, as the personal representative of President Cleveland, with his two staff officers, Maj. George W. Davis and Capt. Mills; William R. Rockhill, first assistant secretary of state, representing his department; the Chinese minister, Yang Yu, and secretary, the Chinese consul, Sze, and a representative of the United Associated Presses boarded the United States dispatch-boat Dolphin early Friday morning and steamed down the bay to meet the ambassador.

After Gen. Ruger and party stepped aboard the St. Louis they went immediately to the aft drawing room, where they were met by Vice President Wright, of the American line. Li was in his state room and word was sent to him that the government representatives were ready to meet him.

Li Hung Chang, after a delay of 15 minutes, was conducted to the drawing room by Vice-President Wright and his interpreter and secretary. He was at once presented to Gen. Ruger, who said:

"I am directed by the president of the United States to meet you and extend to you the freedom of the nation. I bid you welcome."

The viceroy bowed his head and said: "I thank you for the courtesy."

Li was dressed in that highest of Chinese distinction, the famous yellow jacket with accompanying ornament, the peacock feather, all of which the grand secretary was temporarily deprived of once because he did not manage the Chinese-Japanese war to the emporer's liking. He wore a dark blue brocaded surcoat opening on to one of paler blue, which was turned aside to display the yellow riding jacket. This was completed by a crimson skirt, which was profusely covered with floral designs.

The peacock feather hung from a red-topped button-crowned mandarian hat and dropped down to the back of his neck.

Li was formally presented to all present in the room, some dozen or more. He shook hands with them all. He was asked if he would like to slip out on the deck and look at the harbor as the ship sailed up, but he motioned that he preferred to sit down and talk with those present.

Gen. Ruger took a seat to his left and the interpreter to the right. The viceroy, in a democratic position, threw one knee over the other and began to ask questions. He would like to know if the president of the republic was in New York. He was told that he was and that he would see him Saturday. To this the viceroy bowed his head in acknowledgment.

It was 1:20 p. m. the steamer touched the pier. Li's sedan chair was gotten ready for him, but he turned to the men and said: "I do not need it. I prefer to walk upon American shores."

At 11:30, accompanied by the official party, he left the steamer by a private gangway and was greeted by the naval militia, who beat a welcoming tune upon drums. The party descended from the upper pier by elevator, which was elaborately decorated with Chinese colors, to the floor below, where another company of the naval reserves formed a cordon. Here eight carriages were in waiting for the foreigners. There was a delay of half an hour in getting away. In the meantime an immense crowd had gathered outside the American line dock, at the foot of Fulton street. A large force of police was on hand and they had all they could do to restrain the throng.

A detachment of the Sixth cavalry, U. S. A., was in waiting to escort the envoy and his suite to the Hotel Waldorf. A start was made at two p. m. In the first carriage was Li Hung Chang, his secretary and interpeter; Gen. Ruger and Mr. Rockhill, assistant secretary of state. The rest of the suite followed in other carriages. As soon as Li's carriage came off the pier into West street half of the cavalry detachment fell in and preceded the procession. The other half joined in behind the last carriage and in this order the march to the Waldorf hotel was made.

M'KINLEY'S LETTER

Accepting the Republican Nomination for the Presidency.

The Major Discusses the Money Question at Great Length—Favors the Use of Both Gold and Silver on a Parity—Other Important Topics Treated.

CANTON, O., Aug. 27.—Maj. McKinley gave his letter of acceptance to the press associations Wednesday afternoon having finished his last reading and revision of it at half-past twelve o'clock. The letter touches upon all of the important planks in the republican national platform, but the first half of it is devoted to an encisive discussion of the money question. The major in part says:

Hon John M. Thurston, and others, members of the notification committee of the republican national convention.

Gentlemen: In pursuance of the promise made to your committee when notified of my nomination as the republican candidate for president I beg to submit this formal acceptance of that high honor, and to consider in detail questions at issue in the pending campaign. Perhaps this might be considered unnecessary in view of my remarks on that occasion and those I have made to delegations that have visited me since the St. Louis convention, but in view of the momentous importance of the proper settlement of the issues presented on our future prosperity and standing as a nation, and considering only the welfare and happiness of our people, I could not be content to omit again calling attention to the questions which in my opinion vitally affect our strength and position among the governments of the world, and our morality, integrity and patriotism as citizens of that republic, which for a century past has been the best hope of the world and the inspiration of mankind. We must not now prove false to our own high standards in government, nor unmindful of the noble example and wise precepts of the fathers, or of the confidence and trust which our conduct in the past has always inspired.

For the first time since 1868, if ever before, there is presented to the American people this year a clear and direct issue as to our monetary system, of vast importance in its effects and upon the right settlement of which rests largely the financial honor and prosperity of the country. It is proposed by one wing of the democratic party and its allies, the peoples' and silver parties, to inaugurate the free and unlimited coinage of silver by independent action on the part of the United States at a ratio of 16 ounces of silver to one ounce of gold. The mere declaration of this purpose is a menace to our financial and industrial interests, and has already created universal alarm. It involves great peril to the credit and business of the country, a peril so grave that conservative men everywhere are breaking away from their old party associations and uniting with other patriotic citizens in emphatic protest against the platform of the democratic national convention as an assault upon the faith and honor of the government and the welfare of the people. We have had few questions in the lifetime of the republic more serious than the one which is thus presented.

The character of the money which shall measure our values and exchanges and settle our balances with one another, and with the nations of the world is of such primary importance and so far-reaching in its consequences, as to call for the most painstaking investigation, and, in the end, sober and unprejudiced judgment at all polls. We must not be misled by phases, nor deluded by false theories. Free silver would not mean that silver dollars were to be freely had without cost or labor. It would mean the free use of the mints of the United States for the few who are owners of silver bullion, but would make silver coin no freer to the many who are engaged in other enterprises. It would not make labor easier, the hours of labor shorter or the pay better. It would not make farming less laborious or more profitable. It would not start a factory, or make a demand for an additional day's labor. It would create no new occupations. It would add nothing to the comfort of the masses, the capital of the people or the wealth of the nation. It seeks to introduce a new measure of value, but would add no value to the thing measured. It would not conserve values. On the contrary, it would derange all existing values. It would not restore business confidence, but its direct effect would be to destroy the little which yet remains.

The meaning of the coinage plank adopted at Chicago is that any one may take a quantity of silver bullion, now worth 53 cents, to the mints of the United States, have it coined at the expense of the government and receive for it a silver dollar, which shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private. The owner of the silver bullion would get the silver dollar. It would belong to him and to nobody else. Other people would get it only by their labor, the products of their land, or something of value. The bullion owner, on the basis of present values, would receive the silver dollar for 53 cents' worth of silver, and other people would be required to receive it as a full dollar in the payment of debts. The government would get nothing from the transaction. It would bear the expense of coining the silver, and the community would suffer loss by its use.

We have coined since 1878 more than four hundred millions of silver dollars, which are maintained by the government at parity with gold, and are a full legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private. How are the silver dollars now in use different from those which would be in use under free coinage? They are to be of the same weight and fineness: they are to bear the same stamp of the government. Why would they not be of the same value? I answer: The silver dollars now in use were coined on account of the government and not for the private account or gain, and the government has solemnly agreed to keep them as good as the best dollars we have. The government bought the silver bullion at its market value and coined it into silver dollars. Having exclusive control of the mintage, it only coins what it can hold at a parity with gold. The profit, representing the difference between the commercial value of the silver bullion and the face value of the silver dollar, goes to the government for the benefit of the people. The government bought the silver bullion contained in the silver dollar at very much less than its coinage value. It paid it out to its creditors and put it in circulation among the people at the face value of one hundred cents, or a full dollar. It required the people to accept it as a legal tender, and is thus morally bound to maintain it at parity at gold which was then, as now, the recognized standard with us, and the most enlightened nations of the world. The government having issued and circulated the silver dollar it must in honor protect the holder from loss. This obligation it has so far sacredly kept. Not only is there a moral obligation but there is a legal obligation, expressed in public statute, to maintain the parity.

The dollars, in the particulars I have named, are not the same as the dollars which would be issued under free coinage. They would be the same in form, but different in value. The government would have no part in the transaction, except to coin the silver bullion into dollars. It would share in no part of the profit. It would take upon itself no obligation. It would not put the dollar into circulation. It could get them, as any citizen would get them, by giving something for them. It would deliver them to those who deposited the silver, and its connection with the transaction there end. Such are the silver dollars which would be issued under free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. Who would then maintain the parity? What would keep them at par with gold? There would be no obligation resting upon the government to do it and if there were it would be powerless to do it. The simple truth is we would be driven to a silver basis—to silver monometallism. These dollars then would stand upon their real value. If the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 ounces of silver to one ounce of gold would, as some of its advocates assert, make 53 cents in silver worth 100 cents, and the silver dollar equal to the gold dollar, then we would have no cheaper money than now, and it would be no easier to get. But that such would be the result is against reason and contradicted by experience in all times and in all lands. It means the debasement of our currency to the amount of the difference between the commercial and coin value of the silver dollar, which is ever changing, and the effect would be to reduce property values, entail untold financial loss, destroy confidence, impair the obligations of existing contracts, further impoverish the laborers and producers of the country, create a panic of unparalleled severity and inflict upon trade and commerce a deadly blow. Against any such policy I am unalterably opposed.

Bimetallism can not be secured by independent action on our part. It can not be obtained by opening our mints to the unlimited coinage of silver of the world at a ratio of 16 ounces of silver to 1 one ounce of gold, when the commercial ratio is more than thirty ounces of silver to one ounce of gold. Mexico and China have tried the experiment. Mexico has free coinage of silver and gold at a ratio slightly in excess of sixteen and a half ounces of silver to one ounce of gold, and while her mints are freely open to both metals at that ratio, not a single dollar in gold bullion is coined and circulated as money. Gold has been driven out of circulation in these countries and they are on a silver basis alone. Until international agreement is had it is the plain duty of the United States to maintain the gold standard. It is the recognized and sole standard of the great commercial nations of the world with which we trade more largely than any other. Eighty-four per cent. of our foreign trade for the fiscal year 1895 was with gold standard countries and our trade with other countries was settled on a gold basis.

The major says that we now have more silver in circulation than gold. By means of legislation during and since 1878 more than $642,000,000 of silver or its representatives has been put in circulation. Prior to that time there had been less than nine millions of silver dollars coined in the entire history of the United States.

Of the double standard McKinley says:

"It was the concurrent law of nations that made the double standard: it will require the concurrent law of nations to reinstate and sustain it."

The republican party has not been and is not now opposed to the use of silver money, as its record abundantly shows. It has done all that could be done for its increased use with safety and honor, by the United States acting apart from other governments.

We have much more silver in use than any country in the world except India or China—$500,000,000 more than Great Britain; $150,000,000 more than France; $400,000,000 more than Germany.

The republican party has declared in favor of an international agreement and if elected president it will be my duty to employ all proper means to promote it. The free coinage of silver in this country would defer, if not defeat, international bimetallism.

It is proposed by the republican party to keep all of the silver money now in circulation on a parity with gold by maintaining the pledge of the government that all of it shall be equal to gold. This has been the unbroken policy of the republican party since 1878. It will preserve their quality in the future as it has always done in the past. It will not consent to put this country on a silver basis, which would inevitably follow independent free coinage at a ratio of 16 to 1. It will oppose the expulsion of gold from our circulation.

The farmers and laborers would suffer most from the debasement of the currency, says the major, and then goes on to discuss the unlimited irredeemable paper currency question. He says:

"The graver menace to our financial standing and credit could hardly be conceived, and every patriotic citizen should be aroused to promptly meet and effectually defeat it."

Another issue of supreme importance is that of protection. The peril of free silver is a menace to be feared: we are already experiencing the effect of partial free trade. The one must to be averted: the other corrected. The republican party is wedded to the doctrine of protection and was never more earnest in its support and advocacy than now. If argument were needed to strengthen its system on the party and people it is found in the lesson and experience of the last past three years. Men realize in their own daily lives what before was to many of them only report, history or tradition. They have had a trial of both systems and know what each has done for them.

McKinley strongly favors reciprocity and says the splendid results of reciprocity are striking and suggestive.

The soldiers and sailors of the union should neither be neglected nor forgotten. The policy governing the administration of the pension bureau must always be fair and liberal.

The major favors the upbuilding of our merchant marine and navy. The civil service laws should be sustained and honestly enforced.

HILTON, HUGHES & CO.,

Of New York, Fall With Liabilities Estimated at a Million and a Half Dollars.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Hilton, Hughes & Co., dry goods, failed Wednesday.

The immediate cause of the failure is ascribed to the fact that the firm carried on its books over $1,000,000 worth of what are yet considered high class accounts. These creditors are well to do up town people, who make it a point of settling their bills but once a year. Recent pressure upon Hilton, Hughes & Co., and their inability to realize from outstanding accounts, precipitated a crisis.

The liabilities are estimated all the way from one million to one million and a half dollars. In March last the firm, according to Bradstreets, claimed assets of $3,363,000 and liabilities of $1,230,000, leaving net assets of $2,133,600.

Henry Hilton, the senior member of the defunct firm, was really the legatee of the millions left by A. T. Stewart. When the widow of the great merchant passed away Hilton took charge as owner of the vast estate. Mrs. Stewart left a few bequests to charity, the residue going to Judge Hilton.

GEN. BRAGG

The Choice of the Wisconsin Sound Money Delegates for President.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 27.—In the democratic sound money convention Wednesday a resolution by Burr W. Jones, of Madison, was adopted declaring Gen. Bragg to be Wisconsin's choice for the nomination for president. The following are the delegates at large to the Indianapolis convention: Gen. E. S. Bragg, Fond Du Lac; Senator W. F. Vilas, Madison; J. J. Hogan, La Crosse; J. G. Flanders, Milwaukee. Presidential electors at large: S. G. Nash, Manitowoc; Judge John C. Ludwig, Milwaukee.

Washington Republicans.

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 27.—The republican state convention Wednesday night nominated Samuel Hyde, of Spokane, and W. H. Doolittle, of Tacoma, for congress. The fight over the nomination for governor is still on. The platform indorses the St. Louis platform in all its details.

ZANZIBAR, Aug. 27.—The belief is quite general here that the death of the late sultan was caused by poison.

BRYAN ON THE ISSUES.

Speaks to a Large Audience at Madalin, N. Y.

Explains the Money Plank of the Platform in a Clear and Concise Manner—Presents Able and Convincing Arguments.

The democratic candidate for the presidency, William J. Bryan, spoke to a large audience at Madalin, N. Y., on Saturday afternoon, August 22. He discussed the issues of the campaign in a clear and concise manner and was repeatedly cheered by his audience. Mr. Bryan said:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies, and Gentlemen: When our party at Chicago wrote the platform which it did we knew that it would offend some people. No party can take a plain, strong, emphatic position upon any question without offending somebody. We declared in that platform what we believed was right; we described the policies which we believed were best for the American people, and we knew that it would alienate some. Let me read one of the planks of that platform: 'We are opposed to the issuing of interest-bearing bonds of the United States in times of peace and condemn the trafficing with banking syndicates, which, in exchange for bonds at an enormous profit to themselves, supply the federal treasury with gold to maintain the policy of gold monometallism.'

"That is one of the planks [voice in the crowd: 'It is a good one!'] that was not put in there to attract the love of those who have grown rich out of the government's extremities. [Applause.] We did not expect those who have a pasageway from the federal treasury to their office to join with us in closing up the passage. We did not expect those who are making a profit out of the gold standard and out of the embarrassment it brings to the treasury; we did not expect them to join with us in putting an end to the gold standard. Why, if we had expected it, what would we have expected in the face of all the history of the past?

Uses a Bible Illustration.

"Do you remember the Good Book states that some 1,800 years ago a man named Demetrius complained of the preaching of the Gospel? Why, he said it destroyed the business in which we were engaged. We are making images for the worship of Diana, and those people say that they be not gods that are made with hands. But Demetrius was much like men who have lived since his day. When he made up his mind that the preaching of the Gospel interfered with his business he did not go out and say to the world: 'Our business is being injured and we are mad.'

"What did he say? He said: 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians.'

"We have some to-day who are much like Demetrius. They know that the restoration of bimetallism destroys the business in which they have been engaged. But when they make public speeches they do not say that the democratic party is wrong because it interferes with their business. What do they say? They say: 'Great is sound money;' 'great is an honest dollar.' [Applause.]

"I say this platform was not written to attract their votes. It was written because we want to destroy the business in which they are engaged. But, my friends, if those who have made a profit out of the government's financial policy array themselves against the democratic party may we not expect those who believe that we are right to come to our rescue and fill up the ranks that are being depleted by their desertion? [Applause.]

A Government by Syndicates.

"If we must part company with those who believe in a government of syndicates, by syndicates, and for syndicates, may we not appeal with confidence to those who believe that a government of the people, by the people, and for the people should not perish from the earth? [Applause.] If these men who pride themselves upon their prominence in the business world and who glory in the title of business men are going to make a business out of politics, are going to use their ballots to increase their incomes, I beg you to consider whether the great toiling masses of this nation have not a right to make a business out of politics once and protect their homes and their families from disaster. [Applause.]

"The founders of our government never conceded that the time would come when there would be only a few people in this country who were competent to settle great public questions. If they had they would have written in the constitution that on most questions most everybody should vote, but on the money question only the financiers should vote. [Applause.] Our opponents of the gold standard democracy are all linked as to the policy which should be pursued. They all want the same object—they all want to elect a republican candidate because they believe that democracy is better exemplified through republicanism. [Laughter.]

Mixed Arguments for Gold.

"Some of our opponents say the gold standard is a good thing, while others say 'what we want is bimetallism, but we cannot have it until somebody helps us.' [Laughter.] If the gold standard is a good thing, why should they want bimetallism? And yet if they ever have two men making speeches the same night, the chances are sixteen to one [laughter] that one of them will praise the gold standard as a good thing, while the other will tell you how anxious they are to get rid of it. One man says the reason why he does not want free coinage is that he does not think that the government should pass a law that will enable the silver miners to take 50 cents' worth of silver bullion and convert it into 100 cents. Of course, he may have been in favor of a system of taxation that would give 200 or 300 per cent. profit, but that does not count; it is a terrible thing to allow the silver miner to make that profit. Then the next man who comes up will say that as a matter of fact the stamp of the government adds nothing to the value of the metal, and that the free coinage of silver simply means that you convert 50 cents' worth of bullion into a 50-cent dollar, and nobody makes any profit out of it. [Applause.]

"Now, you can see the absurdity of it. If the silver miner under the law of free coinage finds his silver bullion is raised so that that which is now worth 50 cents will be worth 100 cents, then there are no 50-cent dollars, and if the other man is correct and the law adds nothing to the value of the metal, and you simply convert 50 cents' worth of silver into a 50-cent dollar, then the mine owner has not made a cent.

Law of Supply and Demand.

"Well, then, you hear another speaker say there has been no fall in the prices, and he will denounce the people who are complaining that gold has risen in price, and then his colleague will tell you that not only have prices fallen, but that it is the greatest blessing in the world to have prices fall.

"Our opponents do not dare to say that the gold standard is a good thing, because no party in the history of this country has ever declared in favor of a gold standard, and they do not dare to say that the gold standard is a bad thing and then tell 70,000,000 of liberty-loving people that they have got to suffer until some foreign nation brings them relief. [Cries 'that is right.'] What is the principle that underlies it all? It is that the law of supply and demand applies to money as to everything else. Increase the amount of money more rapidly than the demand for money increase and you lower the value of a dollar. Decrease the quantity of money while the demand for it increases and you increase the value of a dollar. When you understand that principle then you understand why the great crusade in favor of the gold standard finds its home among the holders of fixed investments, who, by such legislation, raise the value of the property which they hold. [Applause.] When you understand the effect of the policy and then understand that the desire for it is manifested mostly among those who hold the fixed investments and trade in money, I think you will come to the conclusion that I have come to, that the fact that the gold standard is a good thing for them is the principal reason why they are in favor of a gold standard. [Applause.]

How to Get Rid of a Bad Policy.

"Now, my friends, when you make up your minds that the gold standard is a bad thing, then the only question that you have to consider is how you can get rid of it. They can raise objections to the plan which we propose by saying if free coinage makes a silver dollar equal to a gold dollar, why then it will be just as hard to get a silver dollar as it is to get a gold dollar. Do you know what they overlook? They overlook the fact that when we bring silver into competition with gold we increase the supply of standard money: that while the silver dollar will be worth as much as the gold dollar, it will be easier to obtain with the products of toil a silver dollar or a gold dollar than it is to-day. [Applause.] If there is any person here who is afraid that under the policy proposed by the Chicago platform we are going to have a flood of money, and that you will be downed in it, we cannot appeal to you for support. But if there is anybody here whose experience is such that he is willing to risk the disastrous consequences of that flood upon him we ask you to consider whether we are not entitled to your vote? [A voice: 'Are you a democrat?'] I think the principles which I advocate are democratic. [A voice: 'Are you a democrat?']

"I am myself, but you can call me any name you please. You cannot swerve me from what I believe to be good for the people. [Tremendous applause.] If bimetallism is to be restored the United States must take the lead. [Applause.] I assert that the American people have the right and the ability to legislate for themselves on every question no matter what other nations may think about it. [Long applause.] The man who says that bimetallism is desirable and yet that the United States is impotent to bring these advantages to our people has made an admission that I shall not make. We appeal to you to remember that the United States is the only nation that stands ready to protect its own people from every danger, foreign and domestic. [Applause.] Other nations may protect their people, as they should, but our nation is the only nation that can protect the American people. I want to suggest that you are interested not so much in knowing the objections to our plan as in knowing what plans the opposition have to relieve the conditions. Why don't they propose something? It is because they do not know what ought to be done. So they are poor people to lead you out of bondage. [Laughter.] Is it because they know and will not tell? If so they have not the candor that ought to be possessed by those who would redeem the people from their suffering and distress. [Applause.]

"They say that our dollar will be a 53-cent dollar. Well, now, my friends, they refuse to apply to the silver that is produced in the world the law of supply and demand.

Increase Demand by Legislation.

"We say increase the demand for silver by legislation and that new demand, acting with the demand now in existence, will operate upon the price of silver. We say that that new demand will be sufficient to consume all the silver coined at the mint, and being sufficient, will raise the value of silver bullion to $1.29 throughout the world. [Applause.] We have reason for our belief. They simply say it won't do it, then sit back and propose absolutely nothing.

"If we need relief from the gold standard we must secure it for ourselves, and if we must secure this relief for ourselves we can only secure it through a party which believes in the restoration of the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the present legal ratio of sixteen to one, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation." [Prolonged applause.]

OUR PROSPECTIVE GAIN.

Bryan and Free Silver Will Work Much Good to the People.

Many men are seriously asking themselves the question: What are we to gain by electing Bryan and declaring for the free coinage of silver?

The first gain will be a secretary of the treasury who will smash the corner in gold by paying out silver or gold at his pleasure in redemption of treasury notes. No man can say this would be dishonest because this is the privilege of the government expressed in every obligation of the government excepting gold certificates. It is the privilege exercised by the Bank of France without fear of panic or a gold premium. This gain will come at once after the inauguration of President Bryan.

The next gain will be the assurance conveyed by this change of policy at the treasury that there will be no more bond issues, no more increase of the bonded debt, no more increase of the annual interest charge. Will not this be worth gaining? Is it not a benefit to taxpayers of to-day and for generations to come?

The next certain and natural gain will be renewed activity in all the mining camps of the west. This will quickly put more money in circulation, employ more labor and increase the output of both gold and silver. Gold is very largely a bi-product of silver mining and the new life that will be put into silver mining will result in a larger output of both metals, and consequently a larger volume of money, good, "honest money," "hard money," "God's money," as the men of Zach Chandler's time used to call gold and silver.

Another and decisive gain will be the rush of capitalists to make investments in property. Now their money is gaining in the banks because its purchasing power is increasing, just as real estate under certain conditions gains in value from the public increment and the owners make gains by not doing a thing themselves because others are doing for them. But as soon as free silver coinage is a certainty these men will see that money is going to get cheaper and property dearer and therefore they will seek investments and all kinds of property will rise in value. This will have a tendency to start industries, employ labor, swell values and boom business. Thus will the present depression be lifted and all be made prosperous, the laborer as well as the banker.—Port Huron (Mich.) News.

Tariff Not the Issue.

So the republicans are going to make the tariff the leading issue of the campaign. Do they think that by such a course they can convince their "sound money" brethren that McKinley is strongly in favor of the gold standard? That is what they want much more than they do any tariff. It is what will affect their interests more.—Rochester Herald.

Crushed by Their Own Idol.

If the rest of the republican leaders had not combined for six years to fool the country into the belief that McKinley was a great man and the author of a sublime national policy, they would not have been crushed at last under the weight of an idol of their own construction.—N. Y. Journal.

The political speaking at Union will be on the evening of the 5th inst, at 8 o'clock. All are invited.

In last week's issue your correspondent had a notice of a mass meeting to be held at the Union town hall, Sept. 15, to organize a "People's Club" for campaign purposes. Now, while we do not propose to criticise the good intentions of the correspondent or of the person who authorized such a notice to be published, for, no doubt, both are good Democrats, as there are few of any other kind to be found in the Union precinct, and with that idea we can only think that the person who proposes to organize a "People's Club" at Union inadvertently thought of calling it such, because nearly all people about Union are Democrats. And now, because we believe that to be true we only protest against organizing a club to be called "The People's Club," but are willing and anxious to join in organizing a Democratic Club, founded upon Democratic principles as laid down by the Chicago convention which nominated Bryan and Sewall, and give it a name the meaning of which will be that the members have not surrendered one particle of Democratic faith or sacrificed any of the principles of Democracy, which have characterized the party in the past. But at the same time we will entertain a forgiving spirit toward all who "have seen the error of their way" and want to vote for the Democratic nominees of the Chicago Convention and we will extend all such a hearty invitation to come and join the club.

The little grandson of Theo. Chambers, ran a darning needle into his foot. The Canning Factory stopped work on account of want of cans, and as they were contracted for with a Chicago firm there is no telling when they will be ready to resume.

It is not probable that farmers will engage in the pickle business another year to the same extent as they have done this one. The other day a raft of them was sent back as rejected. Some of the farmers picked them over a little and reshipped. They were not rejected on the second trial and the whole matter seems to have resolved itself into the cold fact that so many were coming in the factory was not able to take care of them.

There are numerous cases of fever in town, all showing marked typhoid symptoms, though none is considered very dangerous.

Miss Ethel Waltz has returned from a long visit to Louisville, accompanied by her charming cousins, the Misses Mahoney.

The Connecticut Mutual Insurance Co., through its president, Jacob W. Greene, has made itself quite prominent in denouncing the free coinage movement. An investigation of the annual report of the Insurance Commissioner for 1896 discloses some facts which this wolf in sheep's clothing neglected to make public. Under the caption, "Business in Kentucky," will be found that it had policies in force December 31st, 1895, 2,075—$6,690,341.00. Cash premiums received during the year, $71,946.05. He has not stated that the parties having policies have had a hard time in getting money to keep up their premiums that they have allowed their policies to lapse. Any one at all familiar with life insurance knows that lapses are the greatest source of profit to the companies, and he should have known that his letter would have a strong tendency to make people throw up their policies.

Mr. L. Sanders had about 100 very fine chickens. About a month ago he bought a patent lock for his hen house. By neglecting to put it on he lost 20 the other night. It is perhaps a coincidence that there was a very large meeting of the colored population to day at Independence.

It was stated some time ago that Miss Mayhugh had secured the principal's situation in our common school. It is now learned that she did not secure a certificate. Miss Lizzie Kipp, was engaged as assistant. There is no reason in the world why Miss Kipp, who holds a certificate having 3 years to run, should not be made the principal. She is competent and ranks as one of the best teachers in the county. Why not give it to her?

And, by the way, what is the matter with Walton that the Teachers' Institute cannot once in a while be held here? It is an honor that should be accorded to the metropolis of the county. But come to think of it. Burlington may need it being an out of the way place, as it were.

The W. J. Bryan Democratic club did not have a meeting on Saturday night. The I. O. O. F. were in session until 9:30; and, moreover, it is whispered around in a loud tone that some members of the club have a hankering after all the "Berry Pie" they can get at the Democratic Love Feast to come off in the near future at Williamstown. Right here let it be said while 9 of every 10 Democratic voters are for Bryan and free silver, the same proportion can be counted against any man for Congress, about whom there is the slightest suspicion of being unsound on the money question. It is openly said that a prominent candidate only wants to go to Congress to play the role of Benedict Arnold for the gold robbers.

The Walton nine had an easy thing with the Bracht club yesterday at Ragweed Forest. Score 28 to 10

The pickle industry dropped of its own weight. The product was rushed in in such quantities that Weller &c., after notifying the growers that payments would be deferred, refused to receive any more.

Dr. and Mrs. Gaines returned from Warsaw on Saturday after the mortal remains of Mrs Gaines' father had been consigned to their last resting place.

He give his name as Harry Stein and hired to Mr. Napper to pick pickles and boarded with him. After working several days, came to Walton and induced Mr. A. R. Hance, who rents to Mr. Napper on the shares, to pay him for his picking. Went to his boarding house, took Napper's best shirt, best shoes and 35 cents in money and left with his old clothes and board bill behind him. Before going to work he left with Mr. Hance a sealed envelope saying it contained valuable papers. After he had gone it was opened and found to contain a great many rare foreign stamps uncancelled. There were Japan, Chinese, Sumatra, Mexican and all the other central and South American States represented in the collection.

A notable recruit to the free coinage movement is that of Rev. G. W. Dunlap, the famous evangelist and educator of Independence. Orrin Percival was over there yesterday when he met Bro. Dunlap, who shook his hand and said: "I am with you and must admit that I have been mistaken in upholding the gold standard." This is the ablest recruit among the many in that part of Kenton county.

Of the recent fair there the Lawrenceburg Register says: "The seventeenth annual fair of the Lawrenceburg Agricultural Association is over and has been numbered with the exhibitions of the past. Of its good and bad features we leave to the discriminating judgment of the close observers who were in attendance. That the fair was not a success was mainly owing to the stringency of the times and the threatening aspect of the weather, and not through any fault of the managers who labored unceasingly in their efforts to make it excel all previous exhibitions. The various departments were far short of the display made in former years, and this lack of public spirit and enterprise on the part of a certain class of our citizens does not redound to their credit. The attendance was not as large as anticipated—the receipts being about $600 less than last year.

Misses Ella Duncan and Bulah Gaines each favored the audience with a solo.

Messrs. S. L. Webb, James G. and H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger, were in the audience.

Prof. Collins was the escort of two handsome young ladies from Covington. It is evident that the Professor's popularity is not confined solely to the educational field.

Each of Prof. Prior's recitations received a storm of applause, and added much to the entertainment. The audience was very glad that the Professor was induced to remain for the evening's exercises

William Hallam contributed very much to the evening's entertainment by his character songs. He captured the audience with his first song, and had to respond to an encore.

The singing of Miss Annie Rice, of Union, was the leading feature of the evening. Miss Annie has perfect control of a most excellent voice, and sings with marked expression. It was the first time that many in the large audience ever heard her, and every one was lavish with compliments on her.

The exercises Thursday evening, consisted of a character song by William Hallam, instrumental music by Paul Hallam and E. S. McKim, an essay entitled "An Ideal School," by Prof. Wilson and a debate, in which Messrs. Ome Rogers and J. G. Furnish affirmed that the Hiles Educational Law should be repealed, and Sidney Gaines and D. E. Castleman denied. Prof. Haun, O. J. Ryle, B. W. Adams, G. G. Hughes and M. T. Garnett were chosen as judges to decide the question for the disputants. The discussion consumed considerable time, every phase of the law being considered at length and ably argued. It took the judges but a short time to reach a conclusion, when the case was submitted, and they returned a 4 to 1 finding in favor of the negative, consequently the Compulsory Educational Law will remain with us.

INSTITUTE NOTES.

Fine weather for the institute

The lady teachers were in the majority.

Prof. Craven was among the good singers.

The teachers were well pleased with the institute.

The teachers were not long in getting out of town after the Institute had adjourned.

Quite a number of trustees were in attendance on Thursday, and gave the exercises close attention, some of them taking part.

The teachers are always glad when the Institute is over with, although they appear to enjoy the exercises.

Of those present at least twenty of them are professional teachers—making their living that way, and expect to follow it the balance of their days.

No teacher was assigned any particular subject previous to the meeting of the institute, and yet the several subjects were as well discussed as though weeks had been spent in preparation.

The teachers took an interest in the proceedings, and the ladies showed themselves capable of holding their own with the gentlemen in the discussions.

Supt. Voshell was a very busy man throughout the session, as the looking after details required him to be. He has the consolation of knowing that the Institute was a great success.

D. E. Castleman's speech on Civil Government was a complete presentation of that subject, and covered the ground so thoroughly there was very little left to be said by the teachers who followed him.

D. C. Peck, of Trimble county, who many years ago, was a very popular teacher in this county, attended the Institute on Wednesday and Thursday, and met many of his old acquaintances and former pupils. He keeps abreast with the reforms and advancement of school room work, and takes as much interest in the work as he did when actively engaged. He was well pleased with the work of the Institute, and spoke in the most complimentary terms of the teachers.

The following were appointed officers of election for this year:

Petersburg — James W. Loder and Elihu Alden, judges; Elijah Parker, clerk; Wm. Casey, sheriff.

Carlton—J. J. Stephens and Z. T. Kelley, judges; G. H. Wilson, clerk; O. P. Craig, sheriff.

Bullittsville — Frank Hossman and Owen Gaines, judges; Owen Watts, clerk; Ross Shinkle, sheriff.

Florence—W. E. Clutterbuck and J. W. Nead, judges; Butler Carpenter, clerk; John Olsner, sheriff.

Bellevue—D. M. Snyder and John M. Moody, judges; Cyrus Kelly, clerk; B. F. Rogers, sheriff.

Constance—Henry McNeal and F. H. Russell, judges; W. B. Grubbs, clerk; J. W. Riggs, sheriff.

Verona—J. N. Dickerson and Ben Oneal, judges; J. R. Johnson, clerk; W. H. Adams, sheriff.

Burlington—Geo. Blyth and Sidney Gaines, judges; Tim Westbay, clerk; W. T. Germau, sheriff.

Limaburg.

Politics is getting warm.

Farmers have begun cutting corn.

The small crop of tobacco will be about all housed this week.

Quite a large number of our people are attending the Lagoon Harvest Home.

Henry Clore grew a crop of winter oats for this season, and has sown two acres more.

Miss Laura Wolfe will board with Mr. and Mrs. Everet Dixon, while she is teaching here.

The protracted meeting at Hebron has added 12 to the church—three by letter.

Erlanger.

Miss Blanch Conner and Mrs Frank Buegel have been the guests of Mrs Morelli.

It is rumored that the trustees of Elsmere will be brought before the grand jury for violating the law in issuing saloon licenses for $150 instead of $500.

Morelli's band has been engaged to make music for the Florence Fair, an evidence that the directors will have the best of music for the occasion.

The constitution for the Democratic club was presented to the meeting last Saturday evening, but nothing definite was done with it. Senator Newman, of Newport, gave the club several good suggestions.

Mrs Sexton has returned after a very pleasant visit to the sisters of the convent in Brown county, Ohio.

Mrs Lancaster lost a small satchel on the Lexington pike between Richwood and Covington. The finder will please return it to her at Erlanger, or to William Lancaster at Richwood.

The Shadows, of Covington, defeated the Florence team 35 to 20.

Miss Frances Carpenter, of Chicago, and Miss Nancy Price are the guests of W. A. Price and family.

—Next Monday is county court day.

Attend the Fair three days this week.

KIND WORDS.

Dr. Talmage's Beautiful Lesson From the Proverbs of Solomon.

"A Soft Tongue Breaketh a Bone"—Reverse Nature's First Impulse to "Strike Back"—Kind Words Never Die and Soften the Bitter Struggle of Life.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Proverbs xxv., 15. "A soft tongue breaketh the bone."

When Solomon said this he drove a whole volume into one phrase. You, of course, will not be so silly as to take the words of the text in a literal sense. They simply mean to set forth the fact that there is a tremendous power in a kind word. Although it may seem to be very insignificant, its force is indescribable and illimitable. Pungent and all conquering utterance: "A soft tongue breaketh the bone."

If I had time I would show you kindness as a means of defense, as a means of usefulness, kindness as a means of domestic harmony, kindness as best employed by governments for the taming and curing of criminals, and kindness as best adapted for the settling and adjusting of international quarrel; but I shall call your attention only to two of these thoughts.

And first, I speak to you of kindness as a means of defense. Almost every man in the course of his life is set upon and assaulted. Your motives are misinterpreted or your religious or political principles are bombarded. What to do under such circumstances is the question. The first impulse of the natural heart says: "Strike back. Give as much as he sent. Trip him into the ditch which he dug for your feet. Gash him with as severe a wound as that which he inflicted on your soul. Shot for shot. Sarcasm for sarcasm. An eye for an eye. A tooth for a tooth." But the better spirit in the man's soul rises up and says: "You ought to consider that matter." You look up in the face of Christ and say: "My Master, how ought I to act under these difficult circumstances?" And Christ instantly answers: "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you. Then the old nature rises up again and says: "You had better not forgive him until first you have chastised him. You will never get him in so tight a corner again. You will never have such an opportunity of inflicting the right kind of punishment upon him again. First chastise him and then let him go." "No," says the better nature, "hush, thou foul heart. Try the soft tongue that breaketh the bone." Have you ever in all your life known acerbity and acrimonious dispute to settle a quarrel? Did they not always make matters worse and worse and worse? About fifty-five years ago there was a great quarrel in the Presbyterian family. Ministers of Christ were thought orthodox in proportion as they had measured lances with other clergymen of the same denomination. The most outrageous personalities were abroad. As, in the autumn, a hunter comes home with a string of game, partridges and wild ducks, slung over his shoulder, so there were many ministers who came back from the ecclesiastical courts with long strings of doctors of divinity whom they had shot with their own rifle. The division became wider, the animosity greater, until after awhile some good men resolved upon another tack. They began to explain away the difficulties; they began to forgive each other's faults; and lo! the great church quarrel was settled; and the new school Presbyterian church and the old school Presbyterian church became one. The different parts of the Presbyterian order, welded by a hammer, a little hammer, a Christian hammer that the Scripture calls "a soft tongue."

"But," you say, "what are we to do when slanderers assault us, and there come acrimonious sayings all around about us, and we are abused and spit upon?" My reply is: Do not go and attempt to chase down the slanders. Lies are prolific, and while you are killing one, 50 are born. All your demonstrations of indignation only exhaust yourself. You might as well on some summer night when the swarms of insects are coming up from the meadows and disturbing you and disturbing your family, bring up some great "swamp angel" like that which thundered over Charleston, and try to shoot them down. The game is too small for the gun. But what, then, are you to do with the abuses that come upon around his head, and buzzed around his hands, and buzzed around his feet. If he had killed one of them they would have stung him to death. But he moved in their midst in perfect placidity until he had captured the swarm of wandering bees. And so I have seen men moving amid the annoyances, and the vexations, and the assaults of life in such calm, Christian deliberation that all the buzzing around about their soul amounted to nothing. They conquered them, and, above all, they conquered themselves. "Oh," you say, "that's a very good theory to preach on a hot day, but it won't work." It will work. It has worked. I believe it is the last Christian grace we win. You know there are fruits which we gather in June, and others in July, and others in August, and others in September, and still others in October; and I have to admit that this grace of Christian forgiveness is about the last fruit of the Christian soul. We hear a great deal about the bitter tongue and the sarcastic tongue and the quick tongue and the stinging tongue; but we know very little about "the soft tongue that breaketh the bone." We read Hudibras, and Sterne, and Dean Swift, and the other apostles of acrimony, but give little time to studying the example of Him who was reviled, and yet reviled not again. Oh that the Lord, by His Spirit, would endow us all with "the soft tongue that breaketh the bone."

I pass now to the other thought that I desire to present, and that is, kindness as a means of usefulness. In all communities you find skeptical men. Through early education, or through the maltreatment of professed Christian people, or through prying curiosity about the future world, there are a great many people who become skeptical in religious things. How shall you capture them for God? Sharp argument and sarcastic retort never won a single soul from skepticism to the Christian religion. While powerful books on "The Evidences of Christianity" have their mission in confirming Christian people in the faith they have already adopted, I have noticed that when skeptical people are brought into the kingdom of Christ it is through the charm of some genial soul, and not by argument at all. Men are not saved through the head; they are saved through the heart. A storm comes out of its hiding place. It says: "Now, we'll just rouse up all this sea;" and it makes a great bluster, but it does not succeed. Part of the sea is roused up—perhaps one-half of it or one-fourth of it. After a while the calm moon, placid and beautiful, looks down, and the ocean begins to rise. It comes up to high-water mark. It embraces the great headlands. It submerges the beach of all the continents. It is the heart throb of one world against the heart throb of another world. And I have to tell you that while all your storms of ridicule and storms of sarcasm may rouse up the passion of an immortal nature, nothing less than the attractive power of Christian kindness can ever raise the deathless spirit to happiness and to God. I have more faith in the prayer of a child five years old, in the way of bringing an infidel back to Christ and to Heaven, than I have in all the hissing thunderbolts of ecclesiastical controversy. You can not overcome men with religious argumentation. If you come at a skeptical man with an argument on behalf of the Christian religion, you put the man on his mettle. He says: "I see that man has a carbine. I'll use my carbine. I'll answer his argument with my argument." But if you come to that man, persuading him that you desire his happiness on earth and his eternal welfare in the world to come he can not answer it.

What I have said is just as true in the reclamation of the open vicious. Did you ever know a drunkard to be saved through the caricature of a drunkard? Your mimicry of the staggering step, and the thick tongue, and the disgusting hiccough, only worse maddens his brain. But if you come to him in kindness and sympathy; if you show him that you appreciate the awful grip of a depraved appetite; if you persuade him of the fact that thousands who had the grappling hooks of evil inclination clutched in their soul as firmly as they now are in his have been rescued, then a ray of light will flash across his vision, and it will seem as if a supernatural hand were steadying his staggering gait. A good many years ago there lay in the streets of Richmond, Va., a man dead drunk, his faced exposed to the blistering noonday sun. A Christian woman passed along, looked at him, and said, "Poor fellow." She took her handkershief and spread it over his face and passed on. The man roused himself up from his debauch and began to look at the handkerchief, and, lo! on it was the name of a highly respectable Christian woman of the city of Richmond. He went to her, he thanked her for her kindness, and that one little deed saved him for this life and saved him for the life that is to come. He was afterward attorney general of the United States; but, higher than all, he became the consecrated disciple of Jesus Christ. Kind words are so cheap it is a wonder we do not use them oftener. There are tens of thousands of people in these cities who are dying for the lack of one kind word. There is a business man who has fought against trouble until he is perfectly exhausted. He has been thinking about forgery, about robbery, about suicide. Go to that business man. Tell him that better times are coming, and tell him that you yourself were in a tight business pass, and the Lord delivered you. Tell him to put his trust in God. Tell him that Jesus Christ stands beside every business man in his perplexities. Tell him of the sweet promises of God's comforting grace. That man is dying for the lack of just one kind word. Go to-morrow and utter that one saving, omnipotent, kind word. Here is a soul that has been swamped in sin. He wants to find the light of the Gospel. He feels like a shipwrecked mariner looking out over the beach, watching for a sail against the sky. O, bear down on him. Tell him that the Lord waits to be gracious to him; that though he has been a great sinner there is a great Saviour provided. Tell him that though his sins are scarlet they shall be as snow; though they are red as crimson, they shall be as wool. That man is dying forever for the lack of one kind word. There used to be sung at one of the great pianos all through the country a song that has almost died out. I wish somebody would start it again in our social circles. There may not have been very exquisite art in the music, but there was a grand and glorious sentiment:

> "Kind words never die, never, die.
> Cherished and blessed."

O, that we might in our families and in our churches try the force of kindness. You can never drive men, women or children into the kingdom of God. A March northeaster will bring out more honey suckles than fretfulness and scolding will ever bring out Christian grace. I wish that in all our religious work we might be saturated with the spirit of kindness. Missing that, we miss a great deal of usefulness. There is no need of coming out before men and thundering to them the law unless at the same time you preach to them the Gospel. The world is dying for lack of kindness.

These young people want it just as much as the old. The old people sometimes seem to think they have a monopoly of the rheumatisms, and the neuralgias, and the headaches, and the physical disorders of the world; but I tell you there are no worse heartaches than are felt by some of these young people. Do you know that much of the work is done by the young? Raphael died at 37, Richlieu at 31, Gustavs Adolphus died at 38. Innocent III. came to his mightiest influence at 37, Cortez conquered Mexico at 30, Don John won Lepanto at 25, Grotius was attorney general at 24, and I have noticed among all classes of men that some of the severest battles and the toughest work came before 30. Therefore we must have our sermons and our exhortations in prayer meetings all sympathetic with the young. And so with these people further on in life. What do these doctors and lawyers and merchants and mechanics care about the abstractions of religion? What they want is help to bear the whimsicalities of patients, the browbeating of legal opponents, the unfairness of customers who have plenty of fault finding for every imperfection of handiwork, but no praise for 20 excellencies. What does that brain-racked, hand-blistered man care for Zwingle's "Anthropology?" You might as well go to a man who has the pleurisy and put on his side a plaster made out of Dr. Parr's "Treatise on Medical Jurisprudence."

In all our sermons there must be help for every one somewhere. You go into an apothecary store. We see others being waited on; we do not complain because we do not immediately get the medicine; we know our turn will come after awhile. And so while all parts of a sermon may not be appropriate to our case, if we wait prayerfully, before the sermon is through, we shall have the divine prescription. I say to these young men who are going to preach the Gospel, these theological students—I say to them, We want in our sermons not more metaphysics, nor more imagination, nor more logic, nor more profundity. What we want in our sermons and Christian exhortations is more sympathy. When Father Taylor preached in the Sailors' Bethel, at Boston, the jacktars felt they had help for their duties among the ratlines and the forecastles. When Richard Weaver preached to the operatives of Oldham, England, all the workingmen felt they had more grace for the spindles. When Dr. South preached to kings and princes and princesses, all the mighty men and women who head him felt preparation for their high station.

Do you not know that this simple story of a Saviour's kindness is to redeem all nations? The hard heart of this world's obduracy is to be broken before that story. There is in Antwerp, Belgium, one of the most remarkable pictures I ever saw. It is "The Descent of Christ From the Cross." It is one of Rubens' pictures. No man can stand and look at that "Descent from the cross," as Rubens pictured it, without having his eyes flooded with tears, if he have any sensibility at all. It is an overmastering picture—one that stuns you and staggers you and haunts your dreams. One afternoon a man stood in that cathedral looking at Rubens "Descent from the Cross." He was all absorbed in that scene of a Saviour's sufferings when the janitor came in and said: "It is time to close up the cathedral for the night. I wish you would depart." The pilgrim looking at that "Descent from the Cross," turned around to the janitor and said: "No, no; not, yet. Wait until they get Him down." O, it is the story of a Saviour's suffering kindness that is to capture the world. When the bones of the great behemoth of iniquity which has trampled all nations shall be broken and shattered, it will be found out that the work was not done by the hammer of the iconoclast, or by the sword of the conqueror, or by the plain, simple, overwhelming force of the "soft tongue that breaketh the bone."

Kindness! We all need more of it in our hearts, our words and our behavior. The chief characteristic of our Lord was kindness. A gentleman in England died, leaving his fortune by will to two sons. The son that stayed at home destroyed the father's will and pretended that the brother who was absent was dead and buried. The absent brother, after awhile, returned and claimed his part of the property. Judges and jurors were to be bribed to say that the returned brother and son was no son at all but only an imposter. The trial came on, Sir Matthew Hale, the pride of the English courtroom and for 20 years the pride of jurisprudence, heard that injustice was about to be practiced. He put off his official robe. He put on the garb of a miller. He went to the village where that trial was to take place. He entered the courtroom. He somehow got empanceled as one of the jurors. The briber came around and the man gave ten pieces of gold to the other jurors, but as this was only a poor miller, the briber gave to him only five pieces of gold. A verdict was brought in rejecting the right of this returned brother. He was to have no share in the inheritance. "Hold! my lord!" said the miller. "Hold! we are not all agreed on this verdict. These other men have received ten pieces of gold in bribery and I have received only five." "Who are you? Where do you come from?" said the judge on the bench. The response was: "I am from Westminster Hall; my name is Matthew Hale, lord chief justice of the king's bench. Off of that place, thou villian!" And so the injustice was balked, and so the young man got his inheritance.

It was all for another that Sir Matthew Hale took off his robe and put on the garb of a miller. And so Christ took off his robe of royalty and put on the attire of our humanity, and in that disguise He won our eternal portion. Now, are we the sons of God? Joint heir! We went off from home sure enough, but we got back in time to receive our eternal inheritance. And if Christ was so kind to us, surely we can afford to be kind to each other.

Cecil Rhodes' mission among the Matabeles was a pronounced success, and the war is over.

RESOLUTION OF MATTHEWS.

Can Anyone Tell the Meaning of This?

This preamble and resolution was introduced in congress December 6, 1877, and passed January 25, 1878, and is still in force.

In 1878—five years after the bill that substutied the trade dollar of 420 grains of standard silver and made a legal tender for five dollars for the original dollar of 412½ grains of standard silver, and which was a legal tender in any amount—the congress of the United States, by a two-thirds vote in a democratic house and a three-fourths vote in a republican senate, adopted the following preamble and resolution introduced in the senate by Stanley Matthews, of Ohio:

Paste this in your scrap book.

"Whereas, By the act entitled 'an act to strengthen the public credit,' approved March 18, 1869, it was provided and declared that the faith of the United States was thereby solemnly pledged to the payment in coin, or its equivalent, of all the interest-bearing obligations of the United States, except in cases where the law authorizing the issue of such obligations had expressly provided that the same might be paid in lawful money or other currency than gold or silver; and

"Whereas, All the bonds of the United States authorized to be issued by the act entitled 'An act to authorize the refunding of the national debt,' approved July 14, 1870, by the terms of said act were declared to be redeemable in the coin of the then present standing value, bearing interest payable semi-annually in such coin; and

"Whereas, All bonds of the United States authorized to be issued under the act entitled 'An act to provide for the resumption of specie payments,' approved January 14, 1875, are required to be of the description of bonds of the United States described in the said act of congress approved July 14, 1870, entitled 'An act to authorize the refunding of the national debt;' and

"Whereas, At the date of the passage of said act of congress last aforesaid, to-wit, the 14th day of July, 1870, the coin of the United States of standard value of that date included silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains each, declared by the act approved January 18, 1837, entitled 'An act supplementary to the act entitled "An act establishing a mint and regulating the coins of the United States," to be legal tender of payments, according to their nominal value, for any sums whatever; therefore

"Resolved, by the senate—the house of representatives concurring therein—that all of the bonds of the United States issued, or authorized to be issued under said acts of congress hereinbefore recited, are payable, principal and interest, at the option of the government of the United States, in silver dollars, of the coinage of the United States, containing 412½ grains each of standard silver, and that to restore to its coinage such silver coins as a legal tender in payment of said bonds, principal and interest, is not in violation of the public faith, nor in derogation of the rights of the public creditor."

This resolution has never been rescinded and is still in force. Every bond issued since then has been issued in the same form, and has the declaration on its face that it is issued under the act which makes bonds redeemable in coin, either of gold or silver, of the standard value of July 14, 1870, a date three years prior to the demonetization of silver. From that date to this, every purchaser of a United States bond not only has notice; printed upon his bond, that he cannot decide for himself whether it shall be paid in gold or in silver, but that he will receive whichever is most convenient for the government. In addition to the notice printed upon his bond, every bondholder has had the foregoing preamble and resolution of congress to teach him how false and fraudulent are the promises made to him in newspapers and by presidents and secretaries of the treasury that he shall be paid in gold. This notice has been standing for 18 years. No gold monometallist has dared to offer a resolution to rescind it. Mr. Cleveland and the Morgan syndicate themselves bore testimony that the bonds were not payable in gold when they beset congress last year and the year before to pass a law making them payable in gold. It will be remembered that Mr. Cleveland lectured congress severely on this subject, and plainly declared that the reason he could not sell the bonds at a higher price was because they were not payable in gold. An effort to make them payable in gold was defeated in congress.

Who was Stanley Matthews? Stanley Matthews was a good lawyer, and it is well known that he was appointed supreme judge of the United States by President Garfield at the request of Mr. Hayes, who did not appoint him because he was his relative. His resolution, above quoted, concurred in by the great body of the people's representatives in both houses of congress, declares that all the obligations of the United States which are in the form of bonds "are payable, principal and interest, at the option of the government of the United States, in silver dollars of the coinage of the United States, containing 412½ grains each of standard silver."—Peoria Journal.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CAMPAIGN.

Mr. Bryan Receiving the Support of Great Men.

One of the features of the progress of Mr. Bryan in his eastward trip was the presence of Gen. James B. Weaver, the celebrated populist leader, for whose presidential candidacy over 1,000,000 votes were cast four years ago.

Gen. Weaver is a man of high patriotism and of distinguished ability, with a mind large enough to comprehend great principles, and entirely too broad for such narrow conceptions as gather around a scramble for small offices. He represents, more than any other public man, the issues which gave rise and strength to populism and which look to the accomplishment of great governmental reforms. In his campaign of four years ago, in which the populists of the country honored him with their suffrages, he announced that those behind him cared nothing for the mere husks of office, but what they were concerned in was that the government should be run in the interest of the people—of all the people—and that they should not be regarded as the hewers of wood and drawers of water for the few men who passed their time in clipping coupons.

When the democratic convention met in Chicago and put itself on record for pure government—for the people instead of the coupon clippers — Gen. Weaver declared the readiness of his people to join in the triumphal march of the democracy toward the white house. He declared it to be the duty of every true populist, now that an organized army was in the field, to join with it, and forgetting party and mere men, to fight for success of principle.

If Gen. Weaver had been a small man —a mere seeker after office, indifferent as to whether it came from republican fusion or other such means—he might have been "in the middle of the road." He could have excused himself with the same balderdash about proscription at the hands of mere office-holding democrats, for he had been treated with indignity in Georgia. But he was too big a man for such ignoble memories, and too true a soldier to refuse to fight the battle of his convictions, because he saw in the ranks men who four years before had been against him.

Now that the campaign has taken shape, Gen. Weaver lends the influence of his presence to the gallant young leader from Nebraska. In doing so he undoubtedly represents the hundreds of thousands of populists who care more for the accomplishment of governmental relief than they do about some Mr. Nobody's candidacy for an office with a salary attached. These men were brave enough when they saw their old parties—whether democratic or republican—in the shackles of a machine, to get out and fight for themselves; and now that Chicago has pointed the way to victory, they will be just as independent of the new machine which would trade them off in fusion to McKinley in return for a few state offices.—Atlanta Constitution.

QUEEN MAKES FEW MISTAKES.

Why Her Opinion Is Respected by All of Her Subjects.

Just think of the blunders all living monarchs have made, even Francis Joseph, of Austria, whom men now account a nestor, and all the premiers of our time and then reflect on this reign, in which there has never been a blunder great enough to be perceptible to the million eyes which always watch a court. It seems to us that wholly apart from the difficult question of the proper limits of loyalty to an individual, there is enough in the known facts to justify all the reverence with which the queen is regarded and which extends far beyond the limit of her scepter, wide as the limit has now become.

Foreigners occupy in many respects the position of posterity, and among foreigners capable of judging the reverence for the queen is at least as great as in England, her opinion when known to foreign court weighing at least as heavily as it does with her own ministers. This is due, say several of our contemporaries, to the intermarriages which have made her majesty the common ancestress in so many courts, in every court, indeed, not strictly Catholic, and no doubt the strange position of the queen in that respect is one reason for the special honor in which she is held abroad, but it is not the principal one. Relatives can hate one another very hard, and the queen is as greatly respected in Washington or New York as in Berlin or St. Petersburg.

Her majesty is great because her reign has been great—great in its enterprises, great in its success, great, above all, in that compatibility which, owing mainly to the character of the sovereign, it has shown to be possible between a more than republican freedom and monarchial institutions. The British empire is the greatest object lesson ever given to the world to show that a state can enlarge its borders without living under tyranny and without universal military service.—London Spectator.

Fallacy of Food Tables.

Tables giving the respective percentage of nutriment in animal and vegetable foods are quite common and are often consulted by those wishing to gain nourishment from the smallest quantity of food matter. Such persons forget that the measure of nutrition to any individual case is not to be judged by a table showing the nutritive parts of food as determined by chemical analysis, but depends upon its digestibility in his or her particular case. Cheese, measured by the elements of its composition, is far more nourishing than beef, yet cheese is to most people difficult of digestion, and therefore beef in the majority of cases affords much more actual nourishment. All depends on the person. Many times food that is practically poison to one is nourishing and invigorating to another. We are not only fearfully and wonderfully made, but we are made so unlike in many respects that we must not take it for granted that another man's diet will suit us till we have tested it well.—What to Eat.

Grammarian at the 'Phone.

The chief clerk hung the receiver on the hook after he had been talking in the telephone and said:

"I called for Canal, double 12 double nought, and the telephone girl made the same old mistake."

"What did she give you, double nought, double 12?"

"No, it wasn't that. She gave me the right number, but she called it double 12, double ought."

"You got your number all right, didn't you?"

"Yes, but why don't them girls talk grammatically?"

The rest of the conversation was lost in the commercial hum of the typewriters and it was a long time before the telephone bell rang.—Chicago Chronicle.

MAKING A TERRACE

This Article Explains How to Construct a Durable One.

Whatever may be one's personal opinion as to the beauty of terraces, it is certain that men and women will continue to like them and to construct them. It is important, therefore, to know how to construct them in the best manner. But before explaining a wrinkle or two that are of value in terrace building, I want to protest vigorously against the making of double terraces. They are an abomination in the sight of good landscape gardening; and as for three terraces, one above another—well, words fail me fitly to characterize such atrocious mutilation of the "old sod."

In making a single terrace, it is a somewhat difficult matter to make a loose bank of earth remain in place until the sod is applied, and even after the sod is in place any pressure on the top of the terrace is likely to cause the whole upper edge to slip off. To prevent this trouble, drive two or three rows of stakes along the extent of the proposed terrace, and to the upper part nail rough boards, as shown in the cross section in Fig. 1. This will hold the heaped-up earth in place till the sod is applied, and thereafter will give great firmness to the terrace until nature so compacts all the materials as to make slipping impossible, as shown in Fig. 2.

There is shown in this cross-section an excellent point in applying turf to terraces. The end of the roll is begun on the level top of the terrace, and is carried out over the edge and down the slope, thus giving no open crack at the upper edge, where an opening is specially detrimental to the well-being of a terrace. As sharp and distinct an edge can be made in this way as where the opening comes at the edge, while the results of the former practice are far superior.—Country Gentleman.

CARE OF IMPLEMENTS.

Now Is the Time to Clean and Store Them Away Under Shelter.

Now that the greater part of the season's work is finished, it will be a good plan to gather up all of the implements, plows, harrows, cultivators, mowers, rakes, binders and all such tools and store them away under shelter. It is not only necessary to get them under shelter, but to store them away in a good condition. If left exposed to the weather considerable damage will be done by rain, sun, wind and snow. If proper care is not taken in storing away, considerable injury will be done to the iron and steel from rust, and to the woodwork by decay. The dirt should all be cleaned off. If allowed to remain on, as is often done, it will increase the conditions for decay. Clean off the dirt of every kind, washing if necessary, and then paint well. Linseed oil and Spanish brown, red vermillion or red ochre mixed to a proper consistency makes not only a cheap paint but a durable one, and it will pay to keep the woodwork of all the implements and the wagons covered with it.

Black asphaltum paint is best for the iron and steel except the working parts—the share and mold-boards of the plows, the sickles of the mowers and parts of this kind that need to be kept bright. These should be well oiled all over or covered with unsalted grease and then covered with a thick whitewash into which a small quantity of glue has been stirred. This will prevent rust and save much time in getting the implements in condition for work in the spring.

The work of cleaning and painting can be done better now than at any other time, and the tools will be all the better for it. Some time in the spring can be saved if a little care is taken in storing them away. Put the implements like the mower, binder and hay rake in first, and the plow, cultivator and harrow that will be needed first in the spring, last. This will save overhauling in the spring. If the tool shed has no floor, put boards under the wheels and under every part of the machinery that comes directly upon the ground.

Shelter for the machinery, and putting away in good condition will pay as well as good sheltering of the stock. Summer sun and rain are almost, if not quite, as injurious as winter wind and storms.—St. Louis Republic.

It is cheaper and better to get the straggling stumps and stones out of the fields than to attempt to work around them with a reaper, mower, cultivator or harrow. Many valuable implements are annually injured needlessly from stumps or stones.—Colman's Rural World.

KILLING HORN FLIES.

Instructions Furnished by the Director of the Indiana Station.

The following bulletin on this subject is issued by the Purdue university agricultural experiment station:

At this season of the year cattle are suffering from the persistent biting of the horn fly. This fly, which is smaller than the house fly, congregates in colonies about the base of the horns, along up the back and sides, at tender points about the flanks and udder, and on the belly.

This fly sucks blood from cattle, and so irritates them as no doubt to retard the laying on of flesh with beef cattle, and the production of milk by milch cows.

Many substances have been recommended to keep away the flies. The Mississippi Experiment station recommends two parts cottonseed oil or fish oil and one part pine tar. This station applied this mixture to 350 head, at a total cost for material of 52.20.

Kerosene emulsion has also been used, spraying it over the cattle with a knapsack sprayer. The flies are killed by the emulsion if it touches them. The emulsion may be made by mixing at the rate of one pint of soft-soap (or one-fourth pound of hard-soap dissolved in boiling water) and one pint of kerosene in 15 pints of water, thoroughly whipped and churned together.

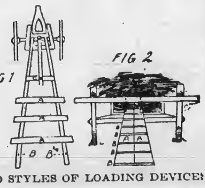
At the Indiana experiment station, we have tried different substances to keep away the flies. None of these were effective over two or three days. We have tested a preparation called "Shoo Fly," which answered very well for two days. The main objection to this is its cost, 50 cents a quart, or $1.50 per gallon in three, five and ten gallon cans. One quart will do for one application on about 50 animals. We have, however, secured fully as satisfactory results by using a quart of fish oil in which was mixed about two tablespoonfuls of crude carbolic acid. Fish oil is 60 cents per gallon in Lafayette. These liquids are applied on the body with a flat paint brush about four inches wide. Fish oil is especially disagreeable to flies, and is probably largely used in the special preparations sold at high prices. There is one objection to using any form of tar, in that it makes the hair sticky, which accumulates dirt, and so gives it a bad appearance.

Stockmen would do well to break up the manure in the pasture whenever possible, as the flies deposit their eggs in it, from which the young are developed. If the manure is gathered up or broken to pieces within a day or so, and if remedies to keep off the flies are applied to the cattle, the insects will disappear only in the season.

TWO LOADING DEVICES.

Very Useful When Bulky Forage Has to Be Handled.

The device showed in Fig. 1 represents the front part of the running gear of a common farm wagon, to which is attached a sort of fodder or brush frame. The frame is constructed as follows: Take two 3 by 3-inch poles, 12 feet long, place them in positions as shown at Fig. 1; a a a are hardwood boards eight inches wide. The last one is eight feet long, with the other two to correspond. These are nailed to the poles. At b b are holes in which stakes are placed to prevent fodder or brush slipping off. The upper ends of the poles are placed on the bolster of the wagon; the lower drag on the ground. A coupling pole runs from the axle to the crosspiece, c. This attaches the fodder drag securely to the wagon and permits of turning, etc. The figure shows the drag in position as seen from above. As no iron work is necessary, any farmer can easily construct one himself. The illustration renders its building perfectly easy. The drag is not only useful in hauling fodder, but comes handy in disposing of brush or any bulky material which is difficult to load upon wagons. A variation of this device, made especially for loading corn fodder, is shown in Fig. 2. Cut a 16-foot 2-inch board 12 inches wide into two equal lengths. Place these side by side flatwise, a a, and secure firmly by means of 2 by 2-inch cleats, b. Bore an augur hole near the upper end of each board, and with stay chains fasten this ladder to back end of the rack. Take up an armful of fodder, walk up the ladder and deposit it on the front of the rack. Continue piling as high as desired until the load is complete.—Farm and Home.



TWO STYLES OF LOADING DEVICES.

Feeding Corn Alone to Pigs.

The Illinois experimental station, in bulletin No. 6, gives the results in tabulated form of 16 experiments made in feeding corn alone to pigs. These experiments were made in nine different months of the year, and showed excellent work. The average of the 16 lots showed 11½ pounds live weight made from 56 pounds of corn; with corn worth 35 cents per bushel this would make pork cost a trifle over 3 cents per pound. The poorest results were obtained from work done in January, which showed 6.93 pounds from one bushel of corn fed to pigs weighing 108 pounds each. The next poorest results were obtained in June, July and August, and showed 8.28 pounds per bushel of corn fed to pigs weighing 208 pounds each. The third poorest result was in July, and showed 8.66 pounds per bushel fed to pigs of 223 pounds weight. The best work was done in December, and showed 16.81 pounds from one bushel of corn.

LAUNDERING SILK VESTS.

A Suggestion for Renovating Delicate Handkerchiefs and Silk Parasols.

The very popular blazer suits when not worn with a regular shirt waist often have only wash or china silk fronts as a finish, particularly if the suits themselves are of cotton or linen duck, or grass linen, and as these soil quite quickly they need frequent laundering in order to preserve the desired daintiness of appearance. Too often, however, they are ruined by careless washing and ironing, and are useless thereafter.

A very simple and pretty front is made of wash silk, curved out of the throat lines and basted on a stiff collar, about which a ribbon is tied, finishing in a bow at the back. The silk is long enough to hang a little full at the waist, a thread is run about two inches from the bottom, drawing the fullness into the front, and this is tucked under the band of the skirt and held firmly in place by the belt of leather or ribbon. To launder this all that is necessary is to rip it off the collar, let out the drawing thread, wash it thoroughly in warm soap suds, rinse in cold water, and while still very wet pin it, stretched tightly, on a lapboard or any smooth surface. When dry it will be as free from wrinkles as if ironed and as soft as new silk. It is a great mistake ever to iron thin silk, as, if done when damp, it becomes as crackly as paper, while if allowed to partly dry first it is almost impossible to entirely remove the rough dry appearance unless a very hot iron is used, in which case there is danger of scorching. Hot irons are not always convenient things to obtain when not in one's own home, and a knowledge of how to obtain satisfactory results without them is not to be ignored.

Delicate handkerchiefs, if carefully washed, and while very wet spread on a mirror or window pane and left there till perfectly dry, will look as though beautifully ironed.

Chamois gloves should be washed on the hands, all the seams pushed into their right places, and the gloves partly dried with a soft towel before being gently removed, stretched as when new, and left to complete the process in the fresh air. Before wearing they should be rubbed slightly to take away the stiffness, which is characteristic of chamois after being wet.

A good scheme for freshening the appearance of white silk parasols, or any silk that will stand water, is to wet them thoroughly all over, open them and let them remain so until dry. All wrinkles are done away with and instead of a mussy, half-worn-looking article one has an apparently new parasol, with all the beauty of its pristine whiteness restored.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

DUSTY CARPETS.

How They May Be Cleaned in a Convenient Manner.

To those who know the true inwardness of things the sight of a housemaid brushing a dusty carpet is suggestive, a medical contemporary says, of many evils. The death of Pasteur has reminded the world of what is constantly present in the minds of medical men, namely, that, while micro-organisms are the great producers of disease, dust is the great carrier of micro-organisms. Now that we know these things, now that we understand that in the quiet hours of the night the germ-laden dust settles down upon the floor, it is distressing to find how little our knowledge is put to practical use, and to see old customs still unchanged, old habits, which we know to be destructive, carried on, and to find the housemaid on her knees, with her brush and dustpan, stirring up the dust to the detriment of every one, and breathing germ-laden particles to her own possible destruction.

It needs but a small amount of common sense to see that, if the carpets must continue—a thing greatly to be deprecated—they should be rubbed with a damp cloth rather than brushed; and that, if, in deference to prejudice, they must be brushed, this should be done by a covered American sweeper, with plenty of damp tea leaves. Of all ways of removing dirt from a carpet, the worst is by the use of the ordinary short brush, which involves the housemaid kneeling down in the midst of the dust, which she so needlessly creates, and drawing it into her lungs with every breath. For ordinary household use something like linoleum—something which can be washed with a wet cloth every morning—would seem to be the best covering for floors. But, if carpets must be, and if it is impossible to teach the present generation the evils of seeking present comfort at the expense of future risks, at least let us remember that carpets may be washed even where they lie—that, till the day of washing comes, a closed sweeper is far better than a brush, and that the worst form of brush is one with a short handle.—N. Y. Ledger.

A Cream Soup.

Which has for its foundation a good stock and boiled or scalded milk is easy to digest. Even simply thickened milk makes an excellent spring soup, because it is stimulating and soothing, without in the least burdening the digestive powers. This preparation in France often takes the place of a soup. It should be a perfect cream, just thick enough to coat the spoon dipped in it. Mix two tablespoonfuls of the best pastry flour with a pint of milk, adding the milk slowly to prevent lumps. Stir in another pint of milk. Pour the whole into a Puritan boiler, and when the water boils in the outer kettle stir the thickened milk for ten minutes. Season it with salt. Some cooks also add a dessertspoonful of sugar. This soup may be made heavier by adding a "liaison" of the yolks of two eggs beaten with half a cup of milk and stirred into the thickened milk by degrees. Do not let the soup cook any longer, but add a tablespoonful of butter, stir well and pour it at once into the tureen over a cupful of little squares of toasted bread.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

NOT WHAT HE EXPECTED.

Her Reply to the Chump Who Asked Pardon for Not Having Proposed.

They had not met for 15 years.

He thought her rather improved. Aged, of course, but then she had so gained in expression, and her figure was superb.

Her hair was dressed more becomingly than it used to be, and that woman-of-the-world air suited her. He had hardly thought she would develop into this.

She observed that he was a trifle too stout—just a trifle—and a slight baldness had made the insignificance of his nose more noticeable. She had always known his nose was insignificant. That charm of manner he always had. Well—

"Come down on the shore," she said, graciously. "I want to talk to you."

"That is delightful of you," he assured her. "I had scarcely hoped you would remember our old—friendship!"

She looked at him and smiled.

"If she had known how to smile like that long ago," he thought.

He helped her down some steps, and they strolled along the beach. He was critical of woman's attire, and noted with approval the perfection of hers. There was something of discontent in his reflection that she had not used to dress so well.

He inquired for her husband.

"He is well, thanks," she answered, indifferently, and spoke of her boys; then of the hotel and its guests, the bathing, the scenery, presently of the last new book and its author. Her talk was charming—"sublimated gossip" he named it to himself—the perfection of talk, precisely what one desired from a woman. He felt some chagrin that he had failed in the past to appreciate her cleverness.

Presently she led the conversation to a trip they had once taken—members of the same party—through Holland and Belgium, and reminded him of his admiration for a head of Giorgione's in the Brussel's gallery.

The tide had ebbed, and they were sitting on some big flat rocks.

"Tell me," she said, suddenly, "I have sometimes wished to know—did you love me then, or were you only making love?"

"Candidly?" he asked.

"Candidly."

He poked with his stick at some sea urchins in the pool at his feet.

"I was in love with you," he replied.

"Then why—"

"I was in love with you," he repeated, slowly, "but—I was not in love with marriage, and you were not—then—a good match."

"Was that all?"

"No."

"Go on."

"You didn't—make it difficult enough! Stop! I don't mean that you yielded easily. But you believed too easily. You seemed to feel no doubts—wanted no protestations—accepted all with a sort of childlike faith which needed no convincing. It was beautiful, but it—"

"Palled?" she smiled.

"Pardon me, yes. In what followed, in breaking it off—but it never was very definite, was it?—I was to blame. Yet, perhaps not wholly. That also you made—after awhile—so very easy! You ould not have cared—much."

"Of course not," she interjected, lightly.

"Yet," he pursued, "I have wished for an opportunity to ask your forgiveness—"

"Oh, no, not that!" She was friendly and deprecating. "Believe me," with her enchanting smile, "you have my warmest gratitude."

Somehow, that was not quite what he expected.—Chicago News.

As Usual.

"What on earth," asked the inquisitive neighbor, "does that 'as usual' mean that you put on Abner's tombstone?"

"At rest, of course," answered the widow, and the conversation debouched into other fields.—Philadelphia News.

What He Meant.

"What does the superintendent of schools mean by proposing to cut down the course of penmanship?"

"Oh, probably he expects all the children to become lawyers and doctors."—Detroit News.

NOTES.

The music was splendid.

The attendance was estimated at 1,000

The children missed the merry-go round.

The new company made a very good start.

The dancing was kept up until quite late.

It was not a good day for the refreshment stand.

The grounds were in fine condition—no dust nor mud.

The directors had hard work to secure judges for the baby show.

Those who delight in tripping the light fantastic, had a very enjoyable day.

Everything passed off quietly, there not being a thing to disturb the pleasure of anyone.

A handsome Masonic banner, belonging to C. H. Fisk, of Covington, was on exhibition.

John H. Aylor had a fine sheep to die in the wagon while on its way to the Harvest Home.

Sam C. Johnson, of Walton, has our thanks for a basket of very fine tomatoes that did not take the premium.

The cooler weather seems to be killing off the worms that have done considerable damage to the Western Tobacco crop, especially in the Dark belt. There is no doubt but what the crop of dark tobacco has been curtailed millions of pounds by these pests, the tobacco actually eat up on the stalk, and so generally damaged in many fields that planters abandoned it altogether, or turned it under to get rid of the pests and prevent their ravages on other fields.

In the Burley belt considerable damage has also been done, but the general condition of the crop was so good that the loss in this particular is not so noticeable, and the crop left promises to be one of the finest gathered for years, and the average yield is so good that it promises to be a large crop, and owing to its early maturing it will likely escape damage from frost, or from cutting green to escape frost. It is said some cut the crop green to escape damage by worms, but this is only in isolated cases, and cuts little figure in the general results. From Eastern Kentucky the least complaint has come from damage by worms. Some complaint as to dry weather is coming from the Western and Central section of Kentucky, and lack of rain may cut some figure in the quantity of the crop but the dry spell is too late to do any material damage. The Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia Burley crops seem to have suffered little from the worms and promise something unusual.

It might be a help to values if the crop is cut short before the end of the season, as with the very dull condition of the manufacturing trade, and the rather doubtful prospect as to the future, the demand is bound to be anything but active if the 1896 crop proves as good as is now promised. The improved character of the crop, though, will help to increase the compensation of planters, yet it would not be surprising to see stocks accumulate in greater quantities, as the consumption by manufacturers would be relatively less, and the crop largely beyond the rather moderate needs of our manufacturers, judging by of amount tax paid so far this year.

At present, prices paid in the country are far below prices paid earlier in the year by large manufacturers and shippers, and have reached very close to "rock bottom" in the estimation of close observers, and if there is any recuperation in general business after the election, it is confidently predicted by the gentlemen referred to above that the demand for tobacco will insure a higher range of values.

OWEN COUNTY.
[News]

A large crowd was in attendance at county court Monday and business was brisk with our merchants.

Farmers are busy cutting and housing tobacco, and the crop is one of the finest in the banner "Sweet Owen."

Hon. Chas. J. Bronston was greeted by two thousand voters last Monday and delivered a powerful argument in behalf of free silver.

[Herald.]

Col. William Lindsay, one of Owenton's most prominent lawyers and President of the Farmers' National Bank, who was a strong gold advocate until recently, has come out for free silver. He has given the subject the closest and most careful study and is thoroughly convinced that he was wrong before and is right now.

Another honor has fallen to the colored people of Owenton. Emma Stanton, daughter of J. W. Stanton, has received the appointment as private secretary to Rev. E. N. Stanton, Presiding Elder of the Newark, N. J., district, and has gone there to assume her duties. Elder Stanton is a brother of J. W. Stanton.

Monday was the biggest court day that Owenton has had for twelve months. A large crowd was in town and there seemed to be a better feeling than for a long time. It was, however, a rough day on the candidates. The back country voters were very, very dry and the dryness had to be quenched in some way by somebody, and the poor candidates caught it on every side.

[Courier]

H. Z. Allphin happened to a serious accident Sunday morning in which he came near losing his life. His oldest son and Neat Roland were with him, they were riding in a two horse wagon and he was sitting on the back seat and coming up the hill from Rattlesnake the horse gave a quick jump, the seat turned and he fell backwards, landing on his head and shoulders in the pike. Being a very large man and falling with such force rendered him unconscious for several minutes. They worked with him for some time and hauled him home. He is now lying very low and can scarcely move in his bed. A physician was summoned at once, but has not decided whether there are internal injuries or not, if so they may prove fatal, if not he will probably be up in a week or two. He received quite a gash in his head.

On last Friday afternoon two barns were struck by lightning and burned to the ground in the neighborhood of Mason Station, in this county. The barn of General Simpton containing some twenty tons of hay was the first to catch the bolt of the storm king; but before it had got to burning good the barn of C. Vallandingham, about half a mile away, was also in flames. At the time the last barn was struck Fred Vallandingham and Charley Sewards were in the barn, and Fred had just got up off of a bale of hay where he had been dozing while the rain fell and walked away when the bolt descended and tore open and fired the very bale of hay on which he had been asleep but a minute before. Fred's escape was a very close one.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1896. NO. 46.

W. J. BRYAN, Democratic candidate for President, will make several speeches in Kentucky next week.

WHEN was Gen. Palmer disinfected? It has not been long since he was catering to the Populists of Illinois.

IT is said that Secretary Carlisle will make speeches for the nominees of the Indianapolis convention, and that President Cleveland will write a letter in their behalf.

MANY of those who two years ago denounced Col. Breckinridge as the chief among sinners, are now among his greatest admirers. Strange things happen in politics.

THE Republicans got about all the votes cast at the State election in Vermont, last week. The Democrats were divided, and many of them sulked, while others voted the Republican ticket.

IF the Ohio voters manifest as much enthusiasm in Bryan's behalf in November as they did during his recent tour through that State, Major McKinley will not touch side edge nor bottom in that State.

GEN. BUCKNER should have had the Indianapolis convention adopt that favorite resolution of his pledging all the delegates to support the nominees, as there appears to be some danger of Gen. Bragg flying the coop.

THERE are several conflicting statements of what purport to be the facts in regard to the murder, last Friday, on the bar near the mouth of Garrison. The young man who did the killing is in jail here, and will have his examining trial to-morrow.

THE "National Democratic party held a convention in Indianapolis, last week, and nominated Gen. Palmer, of Illinois, for President, and Gen. S. B. Buckner, of Kentucky, for Vice-President. The impossibility of their election made possible their nomination.

THE Indianapolis Boltererat convention furnished President Cleveland a most excellent opportunity to use on Henry Watterson that knife which he had been carrying up his sleeve, for him, (Watterson) since 1892. It went into Watterson's political carcass below the fifth rip with fatal effect.

THE Courier-Journal is now claiming that it was the first paper demanding the calling of the Boltercrat convention which was held in Indianapolis last week. In 1886 the C.-J. was claiming that of all the papers in the United States it was the only one that was calling the people's attention to the cause of silver.

THE call for a Democratic convention to nominate a candidate for Congress in this district appears in another column. As the call now stands the plan for selecting delegates is uniform throughout the district, and does not indicate that the cards are stocked in favor of any particular gentleman who has Congressional aspirations.

THE silliest talk in which Kentuckians ever indulged was that of nominating Buckner or Watterson for the Presidency. The nomination of either would have been a burlesque. There is but one Kentuckian who is in any manner qualified for the position of President, and he could not carry his own State at this time.

IN 1892 Henry Watterson declared that if the Democratic party nominated Grover Cleveland for President, that it would walk through a slaughter house into an open grave. Mr. Cleveland kept the run of Watterson until last week at the Indianapolis convention, where he had him put in his coffin and the lid securely nailed down, and Henri was first to have use for a grave.

The following interesting letter by a man who knows whereof he writes, tells of the effects of free silver in Mexico. It was written by Gen. Jules A. Randle, a citizen of Texas, residing in Monterey, Mexico, to J. W. Gaines. The two gentlemen met at the unveiling of the confederate monument in Chicago, July, 1895. Shortly afterwards the letter was written, and, in part, reads as follows:

J. W. Gaines, Esq., Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Sir: You desire to know the effect of free coinage of silver in Mexico. I have been doing business in Mexico since 1866, and since 1880 have lived in Mexico: consequently, I have had a good opportunity to know the country and its condition. I operated, bought and sold property there from 1866 to date.

I have known the eagle dollar of Mexico—I mean the present silver dollar of Mexico—when it was sold all over New York for $1.06 and $1.12 in greenbacks. Then Mexico was not in a flourishing condition. A few men controlled the finances and the country was in constant revolution. The poor and middle classes had but few rights and privileges. and hence naturally arose dissentions.

To-day, we have a liberal, progressive government, paying its debts, and its affairs managed for the benefit of Mexico and its people.

In the past few years we have built thousands of miles of railroad and with but two exceptions, none of them have been in the hands of a receiver, and no reaaon on God's earth for one of these, save from a sharp financiering standpoint often adopted by American speculators. The Mexican government has giving large sunsides, and notwithstanding the Lombard and Wall Street brokers, who seem to run the great American government they have signally failed to cripple or demoralize Mexico.

We have free and unlimited coinage of silver, and being full legal tender it buys everything we want in Mexico, without inquiring what London and its sister city, New York, is paving for silver.

Mexico is prosperous under free coinage.

We have no strikes, no corners on money or merchandise.

No trusts or syndicates controlling the people or government.

The panic of 1893 in the United States was unknown in Mexico, except through American visitors, and the wager, products and landed interests have no way been affected by American panics or the low price of silver. There is not a vacant house in my city—Monterey—nor have we had a business failure. Monterey has 60,000 population.

I live in the city of Monterey, State of Nnevo Leon, and since 1880 we have doubled in population and have increased our business a hundredfold. High tariff in the United States and speculation in silver, backed by the American government has made Monterey, in particular, and Mexico, generally, the most prosperous section of the North American continent. The Windom rule on the lead ore that was flowing into the United States and right afterwards the McKinley bill made Monterey one of the greatest smelting towns on the globe.

That ruling and the tariff caused a large portion of the Mexican trade to go to Europe, and added millions of money to the people who seemed to manipulate Washington. Our country and its customs and habits seemed to be catering to England, and adopting or trying to ape England customs and habits.

The wealth of the United States is rapidly falling into the hands of the favored few, and if these things go on for twenty-five years more, lords and dukes will be as plentiful as they are in Eupope.

I am an American, have retained my citizenship and have always felt proud to say that I was an American, but now I see my country drifting into such an aristocratic government, that I tremble for the future. The all-gold money proposed by Cleveland is hum-buggery. If all the gold and silver in the world were put into circulation you would injure about one thousand men by reducing the rate of interest, or tribute they are able to exact from business men, and benefit millions. Being a Democrat I am for the great majority.

I am a democrat. but if in the next election we cant find good democrats to lead us we will vote for the man who, or the party which, has nerve enough to stand by the nerve of daddies.

Very Truly,

JULES A. RANELE.

POLITICAL.

A Bryan banner, 20x30, was unfurled from a pole 100 feet high at Harrodsburg last Saturday afternoon in the presence of the largest crowd that ever attended a political gathering there.

In Pendleton county the "Farmers' Alliance" organization has come over to the Democrats in a body—eight hundred strong. This it is said, insures a majority for Bryan of about one thousand in that county. The Falmouth Guide, which has heretofore supported the Populists, has come out straight for the Democratic ticket.

Hon. W. C. Owens has withdrawn from the race for Congress in this district. During his term in office Mr. Owens acquitted himself very creditably both to himself and to his constituents. There are no doubt many in the district who regret that they will not this year have an opportunity to support him.—Henry County Local.

The bolting Democrats and Republicans are greatly rejoiced on account of Vermont going Republican last Tuesday. Verily, did they expect the silver crusade to sweep the old parties from the face of the earth? There is just as much significance in the Republicans carrying Vermont as in the old saying that "The Dutch had taken Holland."

Republicans say that if the election had been ten days after the Chicago convention Bryan would have carried almost every state, but that he is now losing. When the Republicans show up a column of men who were Bryan men for ten days but have changed it will do to talk that way. The fact is Bryan is gaining and will gain until November.—Trimble Banner

As the case now stands the Congressional race in this district is between Messrs. Berry and Ernst. That is the long and short of it, so to speak. There are a few Campbell County politicians who are pouting a little over the situation, but these appear to be inspired with a personal jealousy of Mr. Berry rather than by an ambition to go to Congress. Come out into the open, gentleman and stand the fire of public comment.—Commonwealth.

CHAS. BRONSTON, of Lexington, finally acceded to the wishes of his friends, and is making the canvass for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Seventh District. Hon. W. C. Owens has declined to enter for a renomination and reelection.

H. C. McNeal, of the Constance neighborhood, has sold his farm to A. W. Osler, of Cincinnati, and will have a sale of his crop, stock and farming implements on the 26th of this month, after which he will move to the city.

William Hallam, of Washington, D. C., who has been visiting his uncle, J. C. Revill, for several weeks, left for home Monday morning. While here he made a host of friends.

The colonial fathers were for free silver.

The stockholders of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association will meet on their grounds near Florence, at 2 p. m. to-day, and elect officers for the ensuing year.

The Democrats in the Burlington voting precinct perfected the organization of a Democratic club last Monday. Dr. Furnish was elected president; B. W. Adams, vice-president; J. S. Clutterbuck, secretary; W. L. Riddell, treasurer; John Cloud, marshal; D. M. Hewitt and Richard White, assistant marshals. D. E. Castleman, W. P. Sullivan, John P. Utz, Alfred Cason, D. M. Hewitt were appointed a committee on membership. The club has a membership of about 80, and will meet again next Saturday afternoon, when it is hoped that several more names will be added to the roll.

I will commence school at Burlington, Monday, September 14th, 1896. The regular course of study as recommended for Common and High Schools by the State Board of Education and Kentucky Educational Association, will be pursued. In Norway the average length of life is greater than in any other country on the globe.

It is usually considered that an adult should drink about three pints of liquid a day.

FALLING WALLS

Crush the Life Out of Eleven Firemen at Benton Harbor.

The Flames Gained Much Headway Before the Alarm Was Turned In—Some of the Victims Were So Badly Mangled That Identification Was Difficult.

Benton Harbor, Mich, Sept. 7.—Yore's opera house and adjoining buildings were burned early Sunday morning, causing the death of 11 firemen and injury to a number of others, and entailing a loss of $65,000.

Killed: Frank Watson, married, of St. Joseph; Edward H. Gange, married, St. Joseph; Arthur C. Hill, married, St. Joseph; Frank Seaver, married, St. Joseph; Robert Rolfe, single, St. Joseph; John Hoffman, married, Benton Harbor; Thomas Kidd, single, Benton Harbor; Frank Woodley, married, Benton Harbor; Scott Rice, Benton Harbor; Will Matten, married, Benton Harbor; Louis Hoffman, single, Benton Harbor.

The seriously injured are: Ex-Fire Chief John A. Crawford, Benton Harbor, burned and overcome by heat and smoke, seriously injured.

Frank Paget, of St. Joseph, legs mashed by falling brick.

Will Freund, of St. Joseph, cut about the head and burned.

Jack McCormick, Benton Harbor, legs broken and internally injured.

Several others were injured by falling walls, but will recover. Shortly after midnight Yore's opera house, a large four-story brick structure was discovered to be on fire. It had gained much headway before the alarm was given and when the four city departments arrived the building was a mass of flames. The St. Joseph departments were sent for and arrived soon after. The fire continued to gain on them and was spreading to other buildings when the hook and ladder companies went to the rear of the building, hoping to be able to direct a stream into the mass of flames from a second-story window. Hardly had they arrived there when the wall, with a mighty crash, came down upon them, burying 15 men under the red hot bricks. Other portions of the wall were weakening and the rescue of the imprisoned firemen was deterred some time, as it was expected every moment the remainder of the wall would fall. Finally some of the crowd rushed into the mass to rescue the shrieking and struggling men. Frank Watson, of St. Joseph, was the first man reached, but he was dead and his body was a mass of broken bones and mangled flesh. The search continued until 5 o'clock, when the last victim, Arthur Hill, was removed. They were carried to offices and private houses where doctors from both cities were in waiting to render aid. Some of them died en route and others died while their wounds were being cared for. The dead were taken to the city hall, which was turned into a temporary morgue. Some of the men were so badly mangled that identity was only had by means of letters and papers in their pockets. As the bleeding forms were carried through the streets they were followed by throngs of awe-sticken men and women, eager to learn whether the victim was a friend or relative. After the falling of the rear wall, which took with it the lives of at least eleven men, the roof and other walls soon collapsed, one of the side walls fell upon a two-story brick building owned by Wm. Frick and completely demolished it and its contents of shoes. The fire had not been confined alone to the opera house, but had crept across the alley and soon the rear of the two store buildings were a seething mass of flames. These, however, were gotten under control before they reached the main part of the buildings. The fire was under control at five o'clock and the search for more bodies was begun and continued all day until to-night, the firemen, exhausted, gave up the search until Monday.

The occupants of the several buildings will lose several hundred dollars. The origin of the fire is unknown, but Guy Prescott, who stated Sunday that he knew how the fire started, but was not going to give any one away, was arrested and will be brought before the coroner's jury. The wardrobe of the Katie Putnam company, which gave a performance for the benefit of the firemen in the evening was also burned, as was the wardrobe of the Mexican Troubadours, who are spending their vacation here. Several of the dead firemen have large families. The funerals will be all held together Tuesday and will be under the auspices of the firemen and fraternal societies, of which the deceased were members.

THE QUEEN

Makes a Direct Threat to the Sublime Porte—Stringent Measures Must Be Taken to Prevent Further Outrages.

London, Sept. 7.—Sir Philip W. Currie, the British ambassador to Turkey, who left London on his return to Constantnople on Monday last, was directed before his departure to obtain an early audience with the sultan and to deliver to his majesty a message from Queen Victoria protesting against the massacres which have taken place and demanding that stringent measures be taken to prevent further outrages. At the same time the ambassador will present to the porte a formal note from Lord Salisbury of a menacing character.

The Relay Bicycle Race.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 7.—In the face of a storm and over roads into which the tires sank over the rim, the hardy young athletes, to whom was entrusted the Journal-Examiner packet, brought it through from Erie Saturday night, reaching this city at 7:10 a. m.

Rochester was reached at 12:05 p. m. The Buffalo section, Erie to Rochester, 175 miles, was run in just 17 hours. The run from Buffalo to Rochester, 70 miles, was made at the rate of 14 miles an hour. Rain fell during the entire journey from Erie and the roads were in bad condition.

IN WASHINGTON.

Li Hung Chang Calls on the Government Officials and Sees the Sights at the National Capital.

Washington, Sept. 5.—After transacting a certain amount of business and partaking of an elaborate Chinese luncheon at the Chinese legation building Friday the great Li Hung Chang returned tardily to the hotel, where all the suite and his United States army escort were awaiting him. They disappeared until 3 o'clock, when he had an appointment to go to the top of the Washington monument.

At that hour Maj. Gen. Miles, Gen. Beck, Gen. Ruggles, Gen. Greeley and others called to pay their respects. The viceroy asked Gen. Miles how old he was, and when the general told him he had served with Grant, the viceroy became deeply interested and asked numerous questions about Grant's army life. After this interview ex-Secretary Foster took the viceroy, Lord Li, and Dr. Mark to call on Secretary Carlisle at the latter's residence. The visit turned out to be the most important, as it resulted in the complete demolition of the afternoon programme. The viceroy spent over an hour in a discussion of finance and tariff with the secretary. He was amazed with the secretary's knowledge of the Chinese systems and the firm grasp and clear perception he had of the subjects that had puzzled China's chief thinkers. When the discussion had continued until half past four o'clock, the viceroy drove to Secretary Lamont's, where he left his card, repeating this courtesy at the residence of Gen. Miles and Secretary Francis.

At 7 o'clock he sat down to an elaborate dinner, tendered by Secretary Foster. Besides the host and the viceroy the followikg guests were present:

His Excellency Li Ching Fong (first son of the viceroy), secretary to Lo Feng Luh; Li Ching Sou (second son of the viceroy); Dr. Irwin and Dr. Mark, medical attendants; the Chinese minister, Yang Yu; the Mexican minister, Senor Romero; Secretary Carlisle, Secretary Lamont, Secretary Francis, Justice Harlan, Gov. Lowndes, of Maryland; Gen. Miles, Gen. Rnger; Assistant Secretary Rockhill; Mr. E. B. Drew, Gen. James H. Wilson, of New York; Dr. W. W. Johnston, of Washington.

During the repast the United States Marine band, under special orders from the navy department, gave a serenade.

At the conclusion of the dinner Gen. Foster made a few remarks to which Li Hung Chang responded through his interpreter, in written speech. He said:

"Since the establishment of our treaty realtions there have always been evidences of good friendship between our two countries, but all these evidences I dare say have now been eclipsed by the cordiality and warmth displayed by the American government and citizens in welcoming and receiving by special mission. Though I regret my time does not allow me to make as long a sojourn in this country as I wish, in order to appreciate more fully the accomplishment and progress of the United States as a nation, I can not help during my brief visit here to be struck and impressed by the liberty and freedom enjoyed by the people, by the welfare and prosperity in their industrial and commercial pursuits, by the characteristics of their classical, historical, philosophical and poetical literature, by the manner of application of the scientific discoveries and inventions for promoting the happiness of mankind and by the display of their artistic taste in the architecture of the public buildings, sculpture and paintings of historical figures and facts, which my old friend, J. W. Foster, has been kind enough to show me.

"These impressions I will carry home, not only as augmentations to my store of knowledge of the points of western modern civilization, but as the means of enlightening the millions I represent and inculcating the introduction of those very means and ends of civilization into China and amalgamating the oldest civilization of the far east with the most modern of the extreme west.

"Gentlemen," said the viceroy in concluding, "I propose the toast to the friend of China, Hon. J. W. Foster."

The banquet proper, which began at 6:50, closed at 8 o'clock, but Li Hung Chang remained until 9:15 conversing with those present.

His programme for Saturday includes a visit to the money vaults of the treasury and to the executive departments generally and to the Washington monument.

At 8 o'clock a trip to Mt. Vernon is in order. He has ordered a magnificent floral piece to be placed on Washington's tomb.

Millers' Trust Goes to the Wall.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—A special from Milwaukee, Wis., says: The Northwestern Millers' association, also known as the Flour trust, has gone to the wall. It was organized a year ago to maintain a uniform price of flour and do away with competition. The books were closed, and the penalty of one cent a barrel, which every manufacturer of flour paid into the trust as a guarantee that he would keep faith, was divided among those who remained faithful.

To Relieve Short Service Men.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The navy department has made arrangements to relieve the short service men on the South Atlantic station. The Castine will visit the various ships on the station and take from them the men who have but a short time to serve, replacing them with "long service" men from her crew. She will bring the men to Norfolk, take on a new crew and return to the South Atlantic.

Our Fruit Abroad.

London, Sept. 5.—At the sale of the latest consignment of California fruit, consisting of 5,000 half cases, the prices realized averaged 2s better than last week's sale, owing to the scarcity in the market.

Arkansas State Election.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 5.—The Arkansas state election takes place Monday, the 7th inst., and will be one of the hottest political contests that has occurred in this state since reconstruction. There are four tickets in the field—democratic, republican, populist and prohibition. The cause of the first two is championed by Col. Dan. W. Jones and Hon. H. L. Remmet, respectively, while Col. Abner W. Files, for years a wheel horse in the democratic party, represents both the head and tail of all the intermediate stations thereof and thereunto of the populists.

FORTIFYING.

Weyler Believes There Will Be Trouble Between Spain and Uncle Sam.

The Insurgents Make Terrible Use of Dynamite—A Government Train Attacked and Wrecked—Forty Spaniards Killed and Eighty Wounded.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 7.—The activity of the Spaniards in Strengthening the fortifications around Havana and other coast cities is due, it is said, to the fear of war with the United States. Col. Ordonez, the chief engineer of the Spanish army, has arrived at Havana from Madrid, and is superintending the work. Capt. Gen. Weyler is reported to have said that he wants the fortifications rendered as nearly impregnable as possible, as he is convinced that Spain will have trouble with the United States soon after President Cleveland vacates the white house.

The patriots are using dynamite very effectively against the Spaniards, according to advices received here. The Spanish authorities sent out a military train over the United railway last Tuesday. The train carried a great quantity of ammunition, several thousand rifles, four field pieces, medical supplies, clothing and money for the troops operating in Santa Clara province. Three hundred soldiers acted as escort, and two armored cars were attached, into which they might retreat in case of attack by patriots. The patriots attacked the train soon after it left the village of Esperanza.

The locomotive was ditched by a dynamite bomb, and the engineer and fireman killed. Spanish troops tried to disperse the patriots, but were met by such a hot fire that they retreated to the armored cars. The troops were called upon to surrender, but refused, and the patriots hurled dynamite bombs against the armored cars, wrecking them and killing and wounding many soldiers. It is said that 40 Spaniards were killed outright, and about eighty of them wounded, many of them mortally. The patriots then looted the train of arms, ammunition and money.

IDA MARSH'S

Terrible Experience With a Negro Burglar—The Latter Jumps From a Second Story Window and is Badly Hurt.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 7.—Ida Marsh, the 16-year-old daughter of Wm. Marsh, a photographer of Homestead, awoke about 2 o'clock Sunday morning feeling a hand clutching at her throat. She opened her eyes and saw a Negro standing over her. He told her that if she made an outcry he would knock her brains out. But she managed to shake off the hand on her throat and scream. Her father, who was sleeping in the next room, went to her assistance with a revolver. The intruder leaped from the second-story window. His foot caught on an electric wire and he fell headlong to the ground. Both his arms were broken, his right leg injured, his head and face cut and he is now in the county jail, along with three others, charged with being accomplices. A fifth man escaped. The leader was Isaac Mills, and the others were James Johnson, a Homestead barber; Henry Armstrong, and an unknown colored man. The arrests were made on information furnished by a colored boy who slept in an adjacent house, from which an entrance to the Marsh house was effected.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

A St. Louis Book-Keeper Robs His Employer's Safe—Other Crooked Transactions.

St. Louis, Sept. 7.—Charles U. Taylor, book-keeper for the Merchants' Manufacturing Co., of this city, was arrested Sunday morning while robbing the safe of his employers. The company has been missing money and employed detectives. Besides the marked money that had been placed in the safe, there was found on Taylor a check for $7,300, drawn by the First national band, of Meridian, Tex., and payable to Dr. I. F. Anderson, of Sidney, O. Taylor formerly lived in Perry, Okla., and Dr. Anderson boarded with him. The doctor sold a ranch in Texas over a year ago and the check found on Taylor was part of the purchase money. It was lost and payment stopped. Dr. Anderson was taken sick with a mysterious malady while Taylor's guest, and is said to be dying at his home in Sidney. It is thought that he is a victim of poisoning by Taylor. The police assert that their prisoner is a "good man" and that his crime history will cover the country.

JAIL DELIVERY.

Six Prisoners Made Good Their Escape at Huntington, W. Va.

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 7.—By the aid of chisels, secured in some unknown way, John Love, who was awaiting trial for murder, escaped from the jail in this city Saturday night, accompanied by five other criminals. The alarm was given by other prisoners, and posses started in pursuit, but as yet without success. There were 13 prisoners in the jail at the time. Those who escaped were John Love, charged with murder; Douglass Roach and Terrence Gilveny, sentenced to the penitentiary for two years for forgery; Joseph Taylor, a notorious moonshiner and bad man, and John Rowe and John Morrow, indicted for grand larceny.

An Exodus From Armenia.

Paris, Sept. 7.—The Paris edition of the New York Herald has a dispatch from its correspondent in Constantinople stating that the Armenian exodus is in full swing. All steamers for the Pirearues, Marseilles and Alexandria are conveying batches of deported Armenians. Everything is quiet in Constantinople.

The Egyptian Cotton Crop.

Cairo, Sept. 7.—The Egyptian cotton crop promises to be the largest ever known. It is estimated that it will amount to 6,000,000 cantares (570,000,000 pounds.)

TRADE REVIEW.

Failures in the United States During the Week 334—The Heavy Imports of Gold Creates an Increase of Confidence.

New York, Sept. 5.—R. G. Dun & Co. says Saturday in their weekly review of trade:

Failures have been for the week 334 in the United States against 186 last year, and 31 in Canada against 38 last year.

There is a distinct increase of confidence, due largely to the continuing and heavy imports of gold, which have put an end to monetary anxiety and also to political events which are closely watched. While it does not yet start more mills and factories than are closing for want of work, it crops out in heavy speculative purchases of pig iron, wool and some other materials, by experienced men who believe that a revival of business is not far off, and for the first time in nearly two months a slight upward turn appears in prices of manufactured products.

Wheat had suddenly risen a week ago, but reacted with better crop news until Thursday, when another advance came of 1 cent, making the net decline for the week 1⅝ cents. Western receipts continued large.

Corn has reached, at Chicago, the lowest point ever touched, 20 cents, in 1861, and has again broken all records here, declining to 25⅝ cents, at which it closed.

Cotton fell to 7.87 cents, but with revival of confidence rose to 8.50 cents, although the prospects is clearly more favorable than some weeks ago. Estimates are still very wide apart. The New Orleans exchange puts the last crop at 7,157,346 bales, whereas official and unofficial predictions a year ago were 400,000 to 600,000 bales smaller.

After many weeks of decline, so that the average of prices of iron and its products was the lowest since early last year, prices have started up a shade. Heavy speculative purchases of Bessemer at the west and of southern iron here, the latter mainly by New Yorkers at $6.40 for No. 2 and $5.90 for gray forge, have so strengthened the market that Bessemer at Pittsburgh commands $11.25 and gray forge $9.50. The various associations have not reduced prices, believing that it would not stimulate demand at present, which is extremely narrow and as yet shows no improvement.

The starting of some woolen mills which have been idle and accumulating orders for a short run, is still balanced by the stopping of others, and the volume of orders does not increase. No gain as yet appears in demand or prices. But a marked speculative buying of wool shows belief that prices will improve and sales for the week were 4,377,600 pounds, of which only 555,700 were foreign, much over half the domestic sales being of Texas and far western states at prices ranging from 7 to 8½ cents. Cotton goods are growing stronger, more grades having advanced and, though sales are moderate, there are more buyers, indicating exhaustion of dealers' stocks.

The volume of trade indicated by clearings was for the week 10.7 per cent. less than last year.

MEMORIAL BUILDING

To Perpetuate the History of the Southern Confederacy and Deeds of Southern Bravery.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 5.—The movement inaugurated by Charles Broadway Rouss, of New York, to perpetuate the history of the southern confederacy and deeds of southern bravery by erecting a magnificent memorial building, was promoted by the action of the board of trustees, whose first session was brought to a close Thursday night on Lookout mountain. Corporate existence will be given the movement by a charter obtained in Mississippi for the Confederate Memorial association. The idea of a battle abbey has been abandoned as impracticable and the structure to be erected will be called the Confederate Memorial institute. The board organized by electing Gen. W. D. Chipley, of Pensacola, Fla., president, and Gen. C. A. Evaus, of Atlanta, Ga., vice-president.

Col. Robert C. Wood, of New Orleans, will continue to act as general manager, while the Fourth national bank of Nashville was designated as treasurer and depository of funds, both subject to change by the board at its next meeting, which was set for October 1, at Belle Meade, near the home of Gen. W. H. Jackson. Gen. W. H. Jackson, of Tennessee; Col. Robert White, of West Virginia; Gen. Briggs, of Kentucky, and Gen. Ross, of Texas were constituted an executive committee. The plan for raising the necessary funds provides for appointment of agents in each county to make a thorough canvass in every state in the south. The board of trust is composed of 18 members besides Col. A. G. Dickinson, of New York, the personal agent of Mr. Rouss. The board is made self perpetuating and divided equally into two and four year term membership. The charter holds good for 50 years. Fifteen states, the District of Columbia, Oklahoma and the Indian territory are represented on the board. It is estimated that the institute will involve an outlay at least of $500,000 before completion. Its chief mission will be educational in character, by collecting together the correct facts at issue in the history of the late war. Capt. J. M. Hickey, of Washington, D. C., was seated as a member of the board over W. A. Gordon, contestant.

An Exposition at Kiev.

Washington, Sept. 5.—There will be an agricultural exposition at Kiev, Russia, from July to October, next year, and in the opinion of United States Consul Stephan at Annberg, the United States should be represented, although our exhibits may not compete for prizes.

Count Von Schouvaloff Seriously Ill.

One of the Best Trains to Be Found in the World.

"If you will go down to the Union Station almost any evening now you will see the finest mail train in the United States, or elsewhere for that matter," said Chief Clerk P. M. Coates of the Railway Mail Service in charge of the Chicago and Omaha fast mail. "The cars have nearly all been remodeled, renovated, and painted anew. The third set of cars is now in the Burlington company's shops undergoing treatment. All the old oil lamps have been removed and instead the entire train of five cars is lighted with Pintsch gas. There are seven lamps of four burners each to each car.

The cars have been furnished with new trucks, or the old ones taken apart and refitted piece by piece. All the most modern appliances in the matter of couplings and air brakes help to give the flyer the best possible equipment of any train extant.

The new fast mail engine No. 590, built especially for service on trains No. 7 and 8, by which Uncle Sam's trains on the "Q." between Chicago and Omaha are known, has been trained into fine service, and others of the same pattern will soon be on the rails.

HINTS FOR THE HOME LAUNDRY.

The difficulty experienced by housekeepers generally in having washing done at home causes many who can ill afford the expense to send their clothes to laundries, where inferior soap and injurious washing fluids are used, while if proper attention is given the work it may be done quite as satisfactorily in the home laundry.

Assort the clothes, divide the table and bed linen from the wearing apparel, and the fine garments from the colored. First immerse the white articles in hot water and wash carefully with Ivory soap. After all are taken through the suds, put in a tub, pour boiling water over them, let cool, wash out in clear water, rinse in blue water, wring, starch and hang on the line. The colored clothes should then be washed in the same way, without scalding. When all are dry they should be taken from the line, sprinkled, folded evenly and laid in the clothes basket. The ironing must be done with hot, clean irons, and the clothes hung up to air.

PALMER AND BUCKNER.

The Standard-Bearers of the Sound Money Democratic Party.

The Vote on President Was Palmer 769½, Bragg 118½—Buckner was Nominated by Acclamation—Platform Favors Maintainance of Gold Standard.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 3.—The national convention of the gold democrats was called to order in Tomlinson hall shortly after noon Wednesday by Senator Palmer with the remark: "This is the first national convention held in 1896"

Hanging high over the platform was the United States coat of arms, with the eagle done in gold. To the right of this were likenesses of Jefferson, Jackson and ex-Senator McDonald, and to the left pictures of Cleveland, Hendricks and Tilden. The appearance of the hall was, on the whole, attractive.

There was much applause as various prominent democrats entered the hall and took their seats with their delegations. Among those specially honored were Buckner and Breckinridge, of Kentucky, but Senator Palmer, of Illinois, came in unnoticed and took his seat among the delegates from his state.

SENATOR JOHN M. PALMER.

Nominated by the Sound Money Democratic Convention at Indianapolis.

All the delegates wore bright-colored badges on the lapels of their coats, the prevailing hue being golden yellow, and many of them had in addition twigs of golden rod. The character of the convention was asserted in unmistakable emblems. Even the color of the window shades was old gold.

Senator Palmer, who had taken a seat on the stage as temporary chairman, rose and called the convention to order.

Rev. John Hazen White, Episcopal bishop of the diocese of Indiana, then advanced to the platform, and while the audience reverently arose delivered the opening prayer.

The call for the convention was then read. When the name of Cleveland was read in the call in connection with the names of Jefferson and Jackson the members of the convention arose and cheered

The next business in order was declared to be the call of the states in order to ascertain who were present Most of them reported full delegations Montana reported a unanimous delegation of one. New York was called amid great cheering and reported present 72 delegates and 72 alternates.

Ohio was cheered when its name was called A full delegation for gold was reported. Utah failed to respond.

Wisconsin reported a full delegation. "All Democrats." the chairman said. At this there were cheers. The call complete, shows that 41 states are represented. Territories were then called. Delegates from several answered. Eight hundred and fifty delegates in all were found to be present

The report of the executive committee was read, and it was agreed that the convention be governed by the rules of the democratic convention of 1892.

The announcement that ex-Gov. Flower, of New York, had been chosen for temporary chairman was received with great cheering. When he was conducted to the chair all the delegates were on their feet.

When quiet had been restored the chairman delivered a short address. At the mention of President Cleveland's name by Gov. Flower the delegates arose and cheered heartily. Then someone asked: "What's the matter with Cleveland?" and the reply that "He's all right!" came thundering back.

At the close of Chairman Flowers' address the states were called for the selection of members of the committees on credential rules and resolutions, and also vice presidents.

The convention at 2:10 took a recess until 4 p. m.

The convention reassembled at 4:30 with a full attendance of delegates and the galleries packed with spectators.

The chairman of the committee on credentials, Mr J. H. Brennan, of Wisconsin, made a report to the effect that there were 824 delegates present, representing 41 states and three territories, and recommending that those present be entitled to cast the full votes of their states and territories. The report was agreed to without question.

Dr. Everett, of Massachusetts, was introduced to fill up the time with a speech until the report on permanent organization should be ready. He said Massachusetts had sent her delegation to aid in repelling the invasion which had risen up against the honor and distinction between classes, between rich and credit of the country. Massachusetts was for gold. Massachusetts democracy knows no poor: between the man who raises the grain and the man who takes it to market.

"And above all, the democracy of our state will not stand any insult against that man who has protected the credit and honor of America We stand to-night by President Cleveland."

The report of the committee on permanent organization was then presented by the chairman of the committee, Mr. James W. Eaton, of New York. It recommended Secretary Deaclson Caffery, of Louisiana, as permanent chairman, and Mr. J. R. Wilson, of Indiana, for permanent secretary, and further recommended the establishment of a permanent national organization. The report was adopted without a dissenting voice. Senator Caffery was escorted to the chair by Mr. Bullitt, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Lawler, of Minnesota, delivered his speech.

Senator Caffery's remarks were delivered with much force and were greeted with continued cheering.

At the close of Mr. Caffery's speech Mr. John P. Irish, of California, was introduced and made a speech to the convention.

Mr. Irish's address was received with enthusiastic demonstrations of applause throughout. As he resumed his seat the band played "Rally Round the Flag," and there was quite an ovation.

The committee on platform not being ready to report, the convention, at 5:50, adjourned until Thursday at 11 a. m.

CONVENTION HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 4.—The delegates were tardy in getting to the hall Thursday morning. At 11 o'clock, the hour when the convention was to convene, there were not fifty delegates present, but the galleries were being fast filled up.

When Senator Palmer, of Illinois, entered the hall and took his seat on the platform, he was complimented with a round of applause

Soon after 11 o'clock the delegates, with the exception of those on the committee on resolutions, began to crowd in, coming in solid delegations, and the space assigned to them was in a short time fully occupied. The arrival of each state delegation was indicated by the musicians, who played the air most appropriate to the locality—"Yankee Doodle" for a New England state, "Maryland, my Maryland" for the delegation from that state. "Old Kentucky Home." "Dixie," etc. As usual the popular acclaim was in favor of "Dixie" and "Maryland."

About this time Mr. Buckner, of Kentucky, entered the hall and was greeted with cheers. Then Mr. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, came in with his delegation, and "Hurrah for Breckinridge" was shouted from scores of throats.

The shouts for Breckinridge were kept up from the galleries as if it were expected that he would deliver the speech which he failed to make at the mass-meeting Wednesday night. He took no notice of the shouts but engaged in conversation with Gov. Buckner who sat by his side.

At 11:40 Senator Caffery, of Louisiana, as chairman of the convention, rose and stated: The chair desires to announce to the convention that the opening of the convention is delayed for a few moments to ascertain whether or not the committee on resolutions is ready to report. The chair is informed that the committee will report shortly. I beg you, therefore, to be patient for a few moments to see whether that committee is ready.

This was a signal for a renewal of the shouts for Breckinridge which finally became overwhelming, though a few hisses were heard intermingled with them.

Mr. Breckinridge, advancing to the platform, was received with great cheering. He delivered a speech of great power and eloquence, which was listened to with profound silence and attention, except when broken in upon by shouts of applause.

At 12:27 Breckinridge concluded his address and was loudly applauded.

Griffin, of New York, asked that the rules be suspended and a resolution concerning the money question be read. Declared out of order.

A Tennessee delegate offers resolutions of regret at the death of ex-Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts. Adopted by rising vote.

Judge Savage, of Kentucky, read a telegram from Judge Lindsay saying if a proper platform was adopted and good men named Bryan could not carry Kentucky. Judge Savage said: "There is no more chance of Bryan carrying Kentucky than there is of the Blessed Master visiting Chicago

Mr. Warner addressed the convention briefly, and at 12:51 Mr. Outhwaite moved that the convention take a recess until 2:30. Not seconded.

Messrs. Lehman, of Missouri and Bynum, of Indiana, filled in the time by short speeches.

Senator Vilas, chairman of the committee on resolutions, then took the stand and read the platform as follows:

PLATFORM

This convention has assembled to uphold the principles upon which depend the honor and the welfare of the American people, in order that democrats throughout the union may unite their patriotic efforts to avert disaster from their country and ruin from their party.

The democratic party is pledged to equal and exact justice to all men of every creed and condition to the largest freedom of the individual consistent with good government; to the preservation of the federal government in its constitutional vigor, and to the support of the states in all their just rights: to economy in the public expenditures; to the maintenance of the public faith and sound money; and it is opposed to paternalism and all class legislation.

The declarations of the Chicago convention attack individual freedom, the right of private contract, the independence of the judiciary, and the authority of the president to enforce federal laws They advocate a reckless attempt to increase the price of silver by legislation to the debasement of our monetary standard, and threaten unlimited issues of paper money by the government. They abandon for republican allies the democratic cause of tariff reform to court the favor of the protectionist to their fiscal heresy.

In view of these and other grave departures from democratic principles, we can not support the candidates of that convention, nor be bound by its action. The democratic party has survived many defeats, but could not survive a victory won in behalf of the doctrine and policy proclaimed in its name at Chicago.

The conditions, however, which make possible such utterances from a national convention are the direct result of class legislation by the republican party. It still proclaims, as it has for years, the power and duty of government to raise and maintain prices by law and it proposes no remedy for existing evils, except oppressive and unjust taxation.

The national democracy here reconvened therefore renews its declaration of faith in democratic principles, especially as applicable to the conditions of the times.

Taxation, tariff, excise or direct, is rightfully imposed only for public purposes, and not for private gain. Its amount is justly measured by public expenditures, which should be limited by scrupulous economy. The sum derived by the treasury from tariff and excise levies is affected by the state of trade and volume of consumption. The amount required by the treasury is determined by the appropriations made by congress. The demand of the republican party for an increase in tariff taxation has its pretext in the deficiency of revenue, which has its causes in the stagnation of trade and reduces consumption, due entirely to the loss of confidence that has followed the populist threat of free coinage and depreciation of our money and the republican practice of extravagant appropriations beyond the needs of good government. We arraign and condemn the populistic conventions of Chicago and St Louis for their co-operation with the republican party in creating these conditions which are pleaded in justification of a heavy increase of the burdens of the people by a further resort to protection. We therefore denounce protection and its ally, free coinage of silver, as schemes for the personal profit of a few at the expense of the masses, and oppose the two parties which stand for these schemes as hostile to the people of the republic whose food and shelter, comfort and prosperity are attacked by higher taxes and depreciated money.

SIMON B. BUCKNER,

The Nominee for Vice President.

In fine, we reaffirm the historic democratic doctrine of tariff for revenue only.

We demand that henceforth modern and liberal policies towards American shipping shall take the place of our imitation of the restricted statutes of the eighteenth century, which were long ago abandoned by every maritime power but the United States, and which, to the nation's humiliation, have driven American capital and enterprise to the use of alien flags and alien crews, have made the stars and stripes, an almost unknown emblem in foreign ports, and have virtually extinguished the race of American seamen We oppose the pretense that discriminating duties will promote shipping: that scheme is an invitation to commercial warfare upon the United States, un-American in the light of our great commercial treaties, offering no gain whatever to American shipping, while greatly increasing ocean freights on our agricultural and manufactured products.

The experience of mankind has shown that by reason of their natural qualities, gold is the necessary money of the large affairs of commerce and business, while silver is conveniently adapted to minor transactions, and the most beneficial use of both together can be ensured only by the adoption of the former as a standard of monetary measure, and the maintenance of silver at a parity with gold by its limited coinage under suitable safeguards of law. Thus the largest possible enjoyment of both metals is gained with a value universally accepted throughout the world, which constitutes the only practical bimetallic currency, assuring the most stable standard and especially the best and safest money for all who earn their livlihood by labor or the produce of husbandry.

They can not suffer when paid in the best money known to man, but are the most defenseless victims of a debased and fluctuating currency which offers continual profits to the money changers at their cost.

Realizing these truths, demonstrated by long public inconvenience and loss, the democratic party in the interests of the masses and of equal justice to all, practically established by the legislation of 1834 and 1853, the gold standard of monetary measurement, has likewise entirely divorced the government from banking and currency issues. To this long established democratic policy we adhere, and insist upon the maintenance of the gold standard and of the parity therewith of every dollar issued by the government and are firmly opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and to the compulsory purchase of silver bullion. But we denounce also the further maintenance of the present costly patch-work system of national paper currency as a constant source of injury and peril.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN FLOWER.

We assert the necessity of such intelligent currency reform as will confine the government to its legitimate functions, completely separated from the banking business and afford to all sections of our country a uniform, safe and elastic bank currency under governmental supervision, measured in volume by the needs of business.

The fidelity, patriotism and courage with which President Cleveland has fulfilled his great public trust, the high character of his administration, its wisdom and energy in the maintenance of civil order and the endorsement of the laws, its equal regard for the right of every class and every section, is its firm and dignified conduct of foreign affairs, and its sturdy persistence in upholding the credit and honor of the nation, are fully recognized by the democratic party, and will secure to him a place in history beside the fathers of the republic.

We also commend the administration for the great progress made in the reform of the public service, and we indorse its effort to extend the merit system still further. We demand that no backward step be taken, but that the reform be supported and advanced until the undemocratic spoils system of appointments shall be eradicated.

We demand strict economy in the appropriations and in the administration of the government.

We favor arbitration for the settlement of international disputes.

We favor a liberal policy of pension to deserving soldiers and sailors of the United States.

The supreme court of the United States was wisely established by the framers of our constitution as one of the three coordinate branches of the government. Its independence and authority to interpret the law of the land without fear and favor must be maintained. We condemn all efforts to degrade that tribunal or impair the confidence and respect which it has deservedly held.

The democratic party ever has maintained and ever will maintain the supremacy of law, the independence of its judicial administration the inviolability of contract, and the obligations of all good citizens to resist every illegal trust, combination or attempt against the just rights of property, and the good order of society, in which are bound up the peace and happiness of our people.

Believing these principles to be essential to the wellbeing of the republic, we submit them to the consideration of the American people.

The platform was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Mr. Breckinridge the convention proceeded to the call of states for candidates for president of the United States.

When Kentucky was reached A. J. V. Carroll took the stand and said Mr. Watterson did not desire his name presented to the convention.

California yielded to Michigan and L. L. Kilburn took the platform. He placed in nomination John M. Palmer. Great cheering.

Connecticut yielded to Wisconsin and Senator Burr W. Jones took the stand and nominated Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin.

J. E. Hartridge, of Florida, took the stand to make a statement. He said it was the purpose of the Florida delegation when they came here to present President Cleveland's name for renomination, but now they seconded the nomination of Mr. Palmer. Mr. T. D. Corrigan was recognized and seconded Mr. Palmer.

Maryland had no candidate, but said Palmer was good enough for them.

Illinois asked to be passed for the present.

Mr. Cutcheon, Minnesota, said they had intended to present Daniel W. Lawler, but withdrew him in favor of Palmer.

Mr. Lehmann, of Missouri, said his state had intended to present James O. Broadhead: but, as the latter had declined to run, Missouri seconded the nomination of Gen. Bragg.

When Nebraska was called a delegate said: "Nebraska thinks she has already furnished one too many candidates." (Great cheering.)

New Hampshire seconds Palmer. Oregon seconds Bragg. One delegate from Oregon seconded Palmer. Tennessee seconds Palmer. Texas seconds Palmer. Vermont seconds Palmer. Virginia seconds Palmer. Washington seconds Palmer.

Judge Moran, of Illinois, was recognized. He explained that Illinois was silent when that state was called because their lips were sealed by Palmer. He now seconded Palmer's nomination without his consent.

Roll call finished and a vote taken, which resulted as follows: Palmer 769½. Bragg 118½.

Gen. Bragg moved to make Palmer's nomination unanimous. The motion carried, followed by three cheers for Bragg. The states then gathered around the Illinois delegation with their standards, and then marched around the hall to the tune of the "Star-Spangled Banner."

The chair then ordered a roll call for vice president When Kentucky was called the band struck up "Old Kentucky Home," the crowd joining in the singing. Wm. B. Browder then placed Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner in nomination.

Three cheers were given for Buckner. The band played "America," and the states with their banners marched around the hall. Buckner received the nomination for vice president by acclamation.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Broadhead, of Missouri, and was carried:

Resolved, that the national committee shall have full power to arrange for the placing of all candidates nominated by the national convention on the ballots of the respective states in the manner required by the election laws of said states: that said committee have power to fill all vacancies, to arrange for the notification of the candidates nominated by the convention, and generally to exercise the powers of this convention after the adjournment thereof.

Resolutions of thanks to the members of the temporary national committee and of the temporary national executive committee for their good and wise work, and to the people of Indianapolis for the manner in which the convention was entertained, were presented and adopted, and then, at 4:55 p. m. the convention adjourned sine die to the music of "Auld Lang Syne."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 4.—John McAuley Palmer was born in Scott county, Kentucky, September 13, 1817. In 1831 he removed with his father to Illinois, and afterward going to Alton college for a short time. Then he taught school. In 1839 he walked to Carlinville, where his brother Elihu was preaching to a Baptist congregation. He entered the law office of John L. Greathouse, at that time the leading attorney of Macoupin county. He studied hard, but in less than two months was deeply involved in local politics, and the upshot of it all was that he became the democratic candidate for county clerk and was beaten by 121 majority. Years afterward Palmer was again a candidate and was elected.

In December, 1839, he was admitted to the bar, after an examination by Stephen A. Douglass and John Young Scammon. The night after his admission Palmer attended a whig meeting at Springfield and heard Abraham Lincoln make a speech. The next day he was introduced to Lincoln, and then began a friendship that lasted all Lincoln's life, though they were often bitterly opposed to each other politically. In 1841 Palmer married Melinda Ann Neely, the belle of Macoupin county. In succeeding years he held numerous political offices, including that of probate judge and county judge of Macoupin county.

Gen. Palmer's military record was brilliant and extended, ending with his resignation as military governor of Kentucky, February 19, 1866. He abandoned his law office at the first call of troops, and entered the service as colonel of the 14th Illinois. He won his major-general stars by distinguished action at Stone river. In 1868 he was the republican candidate for governor against his own protest. In 1872 he refused a nomination. He said: "I do not believe that President Grant should be renominated, and will not say; or nor will I consent to canvass the state to promote his reelection, unless the candidate that may be placed in the field against him is more objectionable."

One of the leading causes of Mr Palmer's opposition to Grant was because the president had permitted Gen. Sheridan to use four companies of United States soldiers as police after the great fire in Chicago, thus reflecting upon the ability of the state to maintain order And so Mr. Palmer "Went off after Greeley." In 1874, when the liberal and democratic parties in Illinois were fused, Gov. Palmer became a recognized democratic leader, and was at once the champion of hard money, urging the adoption of a hard money platform in the coming state convention. On August 26 the convention met and Gov. Palmer was made chairman, and in a powerful speech he advocated his views. A model hard money and states rights platform was the result and the party went before the people. But the independent and prohibition vote of 75,000 stepped in between and gave the republicans a plurality of 34,805.

Since then Gen Palmer has been a democrat and was elected to the state senate by that party in 1877. In 1890 he was elected United States senator from Illinois, which position he still holds.

Simon Bolivar Buckner was born in Hart county, Kentucky, in April, 1823. He was graduated at the West Point Military academy in 1844 and was a brave and gallant soldier in the Mexican war from the beginning to the end. He served in the United States army until March 26, 1855, when he resigned his commission as first lieutenant and engaged in civil affairs. He was appointed superintendent of the erection of the Chicago custom house in March, 1855. In 1857 he became adjutant general of the state of Illinois, with the rank of colonel. He returned to Kentucky in 1858 and turned his attention to farming. When Kentucky as a state refused to secede from the union, Gen. Buckner offered his services to the southern confederacy and was created a brigadier general. He was one of the commanders at Fort Donelson when it surrendered to the union troops, and was imprisoned in Fort Warren, Boston harbor. Upon his exchange he was promoted to major general and placed in command of a division. Later he was transferred to the district of Louisiana, with the rank of lieutenant general. As such he surrendered to Gen. Canby.

Since the war he has held various high political positions, among them governor of Kentucky. He is a man of large wealth and is engaged in farming in his native county.

IN THE QUAKER CITY.

The Chinese Ambassador and Suite Visit Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 4.—Li Hung Chang, his suite and the government's representative, Maj. Gen. Ruger arrived here from New York over the Pennsylvania railroad at 10:25 Thursday morning on a special train of six cars. The train was stopped at Germantown Junction, a suburban station on North Broad street, and here Li Hung Chang alighted. Thousands of persons were assembled on the sidewalks and the distinguished visitor was enthusiastically cheered. The viceroy was escorted down Chestnut street to Independence hall, where Mayor Warwick delivered an address of welcome, to which Li Hung Chang made an appropriate response.

Decorations in honor of Li Hung Chang were general, the display of bunting on many buildings in connection with Chinese emblems being lavish.

During the day Li visited Cramp's shipyards and took a rest before leaving for Washington in the evening.

WHAT THEY THINK OF IT.

Opinions of the New Ticket Expressed at the Democratic and Republican Headquarters.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—The nomination of Gen. Palmer for president, and of Gen. Buckner for vice-president by the sound money democratic national convention, was very favorably commented upon at republican national headquarters Thursday afternoon. Chairman Hahn, of the speakers' bureau, declared the ticket "as strong as the democrats could have made it."

At democratic national headquarters, Chairman Jones replied as follows to inquiries as to his opinion of the new ticket: "I did not nominate Senator Palmer; I don't know anything about it and care much less. That is all I have to say about the matter."

Want the Opening of Proposals Postponed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—A Sun special from Washington says: The leading ship builders of the country have taken an unusual course with regard to the three new battleships and 12 torpedo boats for which bids will be opened in about ten days, and have requested the naval authorities to postpone opening of proposals until after the November election on the ground that the present unsettled conditions of affairs render bidding for such large contracts inadvisable.

Children Suffocated in a Fire.

CHADRON, Neb., Sept. 4.—The two children of Assistant Postmaster Donnelly, aged four years and 14 months, were suffocated to death by a fire in the family residence early Thursday morning. The parents narrowly escaped. There is little doubt but that the fire was of incendiary origin.

An unknown woman, about 30 years old, leaped from the platform of the elevated station at 125th street and Third avenue, New York, Thursday morning and, landing on the track in front of an approaching train, was cut to pieces. Her unborn child, fell from the tra[illegible] the street.

Adj. Gen Mullen Unanimously Elected Senior Vice-Commander—Charles W. Buckley, Junior Vice-Commander—A. E. Johnson, Surgeon General—Buffalo Next Meeting Place.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 3.—Twenty-five thousand veterans of the Grand Army marched proudly Wednesday morning under a canopy of red, white and blue, flanked by pillars of white and between lines of 75,000 applauding citizens. The route was two miles long, ending at an immense reviewing stand, where Commander-in-Chief Walker stood with his staff after leading the old soldiers to that point at Smith park. The spectacle as the army on foot, the bands of music and mounted officers of national renown came down the hill on Sixth street with flags and banners flying was inspiring and beautiful in its martial aspect.

MAJ. THADDEUS S. CLARKSON.

Elected Commander-in-Chief.

It was arranged to start the column at 10 o'clock but there was an hour's delay. The Second regiment of the Minnesota national guards kept the multitude to the limits of the sidewalks with bayonetted rifle and the assistance of the police. On the arrival of the commander at the reviewing stand, a salute of 21 guns from battery B of the Minnesota militia was fired at Smith park. The Illinois posts were first in procession and in numbers.

Clouds threatened rain but there was none to mar the grand march.

A meeting of the national staff, G. A. R., was called for at 8:30 Wednesday morning at the headquarters in the Hotel Ryan. The business transacted was pleasant and a surprise to those most interested, the commander-in-chief and Mrs. Walker and Col. H. S. Dietrich, chief of staff. The parlor was crowded with veteran officers and their feminine allies. The meeting was opened by Col. Dietrich, who made a little complimentary speech at the close of which he presented the commander-in-chief with a diamond badge of his rank on behalf of the staff, and to Mrs. Walker was presented a diamond star. The commander happily responded for himself and wife. Then a member of Columbia post, Chicago, presented a gold badge to Col. Dietrich. A handshaking reception followed.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 4.—Officially the 30th annual encampment of the G. A. R. opened Thursday morning in the Auditorium before an immense audience of Grand Army men and citizens generally from far and near.

Gen. E. C. Mason, president of the St. Paul citizens committee, was chairman of the public exercises with which the encampment was opened. On the platform were high officials of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Commander-in-Chief Walker, vice-Commanders Hobson and Cosgrove, Surgeon General Whiting, Chaplain-in-Chief Iliff, members of the national staff, past commanders-in-chief and officers of the women's organizations. It was a brilliant semi-military and civic assemblage.

PAST COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF WALKER.

Chaplain Iliff offered prayer and a warm welcoming speech was made by Mayor Doran on behalf of St. Paul. Capt. Henry A. Castle, chairman of the press committee spoke in a similar sentiment, and the Modoc club, of Topeka, Kas., sang "Up in Old St. Paul."

Gov. Clough extended the greetings of Minnesota and Gen. Walker returned the thanks of the Grand Army for the lavish and hearty hospitality which had been showered upon the city's guests.

After the exercises all but Grand Army men were requested to leave the hall and the encampment went into executive session. The first business done was to hear the report of the commander-in-chief.

The report shows that the total membership of the Grand Army of the Republic is 385,406, of which 340,610 are in good standing and 42,511 are carried on the suspended list for non-payment of dues, a decrease in this list during the past year of 7,089. The gain by muster during the year was 13,467. In this recapitulation the department of Pennsylvania shows a loss of 5,553 members that have been erroneously carried on the rolls for several years and were counted in the last report. The total loss during the year was 11,400, of which number 7,293 was by death, which is a decrease of 75 from last year.

The report of the quartermaster-general shows the finances to be in good condition, and that there has been a reduction in expenses aside from that paid out by order of the encampment in fitting up rooms for our archives and custodian's salary, and in prosecuting the Long pension case.

There was no apparent change in the contest for commander Thursday morning. The fight is conceded to be between Clarkson and Linehan, with the Omaha comrade slightly leading.

The New York delegates in caucus gave Adm. Meade only four votes, the rest going to the New Englander.

Another military street spectacle was provided for visitors Thursday morning in the parade of the First brigade, Minnesota Military guard, comprising the first, second and third regiments of infantry, two batteries of artillery and cavalry. The brigade was commanded by Brig. Gen. W. B. Bend. Gov. Clough, as commander-in-chief, rode at the head with his staff.

Buffalo will entertain the Grand Army of the Republic next year. It did not take the national encampment long to settle that question, which has in other years provoked a lively contest. Denver, the only other city which was presented, was withdrawn before a ballot was taken and was never seriously regarded as competitor for the honor.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 5.—Maj. Thaddeus S. Clarkson, of Omaha, was elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. by acclamation by the national encampment Friday morning. When nominations were in order the following candidates were presented to the encampment: Maj. Thaddeus S. Clarkson, of Nebraska, nominated by Judge L. M. Hayward, of that department: John C. Linehan, of New Hampshire, by Comrade Cogswell, of that state; D. R. Ballou, of Rhode Island, by Comrade Spooner, of that state; Rear Adm'l Richard W. Meade, of New York, by Comrade Brown, of North Dakota, and Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief Hobson, of Kentucky, by his state. He came as a dark horse, as his name had not been mentioned before. Gen. Given, of Iowa, made a speech declining to allow his name to be presented because he was a judge of the supreme court of Iowa.

New York seconded Linehan's nomination.

The election of Clarkson was forecast by the outburst of applause which greeted his nomination.

MRS. LIZABETH A. TURNER.

The Retiring President.

The friends of the other candidates realized the hopelessness of the situation and accepted it with the grace of good comradeship. Ballou, Linehan, Meade and Hobson withdrew in favor of the winner before a ballot was taken. The election was then made by acclamation.

Gen. Walker appointed Comrades Meade, Linehan and Ballou a committee to escort his successor to the platform, which was done amid demonstrative applause. Maj. Clarkson, in accepting the command of the army, made a speech expressing his deep appreciation and warmest thanks.

Adj Gen. J. D. Mullen, of Minnesota, was unanimously elected senior vice commander, that office always going to the state where the encampment is held.

The junior vice commander went to the south. Charles W. Buckley, of Alabama, was elected. Comrade Shoales, of Georgia, was also a candidate.

A. E. Johnson, of the department of the Potomac, Washington, D. C., was elected surgeon general, and Rev. Mark B. Taylor, of Massachusetts, chaplain-in-chief.

The encampment installed the new officers and adjourned at 1 o'clock.

Mrs. Agnes Hitt, of Indianapolis, was elected president of the Women's Relief corps.

The convention of the Women's Relief Corps elected the following officers:

President, Mrs. Agnes Hitt, of Indianapolis; senior vice president, Miss Marie Hazen Winkle, of St. Paul; treasurer, Mrs. Isabelle Bagley, of Zanesville, O.; junior vice president, Mrs. Amelia J. Colgan, of Virginia.

The recommendation in the president's report that Andersonville prison site be purchased by the corps and kept permanently in condition as a war exhibit was adopted. A committee was appointed to attend to the matter and every member of the corps was asked to contribute five cents toward the purchase and maintenance of the fund.

Over $2,500 was subscribed to the fund by the delegates present.

INDIANAPOLIS

To Be the Next Meeting Place of the Knights of Pythias.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 5.—The Indianapolis Pythians, aided by local committees have been planning for several months to capture the 1898 conclave of the national body of Pythians, and Friday afternoon Mayor Taggart received a telegram from Cleveland, signed by the committee, stating that its efforts have been crowned with success. All of the subordinate lodges in the state are enlisted in the welcome to be extended in 1898, and it is intended to make a better showing in this city than marked the recent national gathering of the G. A. R. here.

Last Friday a foul murder was committed on this side of the river, just above the Lawrenceburg ferry. From the postoffice they took about $5 worth of two cent stamps, and a lot of one centers. In the store they secured several watches valued at $50, and a lot of trinkets. They next went to John Souther's mercantile grocery, where they blew open an unlocked iron safe and got 60c in coppers for their trouble. At this place the tools were abandoned. No clue.

He received a common school education, was elected to the office of magistrate before he was old enough to legally qualify for the office, was high Sheriff in 1848, held the position of deputy county clerk for 16 years consecutively, was one of the organizers and until a few years before his death was a director in the Farmers and Traders National Band of Covington. In latter years he was frequently solicited to run for different offices but steadily refused. He leaves a widow, two sons and owo daughters.

The financial question here as elsewhere is the all absorbing topic, great stress is put upon "sound money" by the Republicans and the McKinley adjunct that held a convention in Indianapolis last week. They claim gold as sound money, because, like thieves in the night the conspirators in England and in this country aided by the same kind of men that would have been tories in the war for the Independence of this country, fraudulently robbed the people of one of there dearest rights. And now these robbers claim that the nefarious scheme was right by denying that silver has any right in law. What kind of men are these who, knowing the infamy of the transaction, uphold the men who committed the crime? They are the men who call decent, honest, but poor people, anarchists and repudiators. In all transactions where by carelessness or deliberate intention a party is wronged the law has a way of righting the matter and where the tort was committed with deliberate intention the wrong doer may be severely punished, morally speaking, the man who will take advantage of a benefit which occured from a criminal action can be classed as no better than the one who committed it. And these who so loudly denounce the men who strive for their just rights are really aiders and abettors of the man or men who perpetrated what Carlisle called the greatest crime of the age.

T. F. Curley, Chairman.

The public school will open at this place Monday the 14th inst., with Prof. Collins as teacher. No doubt there will be a larger attendance than usual and the proper officers should see that the school room is scrubbed and thoroughly cleaned before school begins, as a filthy house will be very unhealthy where so many small children are congregated.

THE FAIR.

Thousands Witnessed Each Day's Splendid Exhibition.

The Great Success Exceeded The Most Extravagant Anticipation.

The Arrangements Pleased Everybody.

THE PREMIUM LIST IN FULL.

Last Thursday morning found everything in readiness at the Florence Fair grounds for the first exhibition, and at an early hour people who anxiously awaited the first day of the fair, commenced putting in their appearance, and the older persons were much surprised to see how faithfully the arrangements at the old fair had been reproduced on the new grounds. Of course the new grounds and improvements have some advantages over the old one, the principal of which is the Floral Hall, which presented a most attractive appearance, when it was ready for the awarding committees.

The unsettled condition of the weather Thursday morning kept away many who expected to attend the Fair on the opening day, and while the attendance was not as large as was expected, the exhibitions in the ring and Floral Hall were of a high standard, and the first day was pronounced by all a splendid success.

Hon. R. P. Ernst, Republican candidate for Congress, was mixing with the crowd.

The plank walks are so arranged that the ladies can keep out of the mud, no matter how much of it there is.

Col. Milton Hamilton, of Georgetown, came early, and was meeting as many of his old friends as possible.

The forenoon Thursday was devoted to the exhibition of draft animals, and a large number of good ones were on exhibition.

Frank Russell commenced early to make a fortune out of the check-room. His handsome daughter was his assistant.

FRIDAY.

All roads lead to the Florence Fair Friday, and by noon 5,000 or 6,000 people were present, and witnessing an exhibition of horses that is seldom equaled. Every ring was large and in many instances it was with difficulty that the judges selected the most deserving animal.

NOTES.

The exhibition grew better as it progressed.

The seating capacity of the amphitheater was taxed to its utmost capacity.

The strong competition made the winning of a premium a credit to an animal.

Richardson and Aylor were the principal sheep exhibitors, each having about his usual luck.

The exhibit in Floral Hall did not come up to that of the first day, although it was pretty good.

Congressman Berry was on hand at an early hour, and spent a pleasant day with his Boone county constituents.

A Kentuckian is as great an admirer of a fine horse when horses are cheap as when they command good prices.

At the close of the second day's exhibition it was conceded that there are many very handsome harness animals in this part of the State.

Graddy, Lail and Riddell, exhibitors of ye olden times, were very much in evidence in harness rings, and each captured several blue ties.

The large number of horses on hand for exhibition created a lively scene about the stalls, and the rubbers were as much interested in the rings as were the owners of the horses.

J. M. Conner, of Cincinnati; Milton Goodridge, of Oldham county; C. N. Cropper, of Louisville; S. W. Carpenter, of Delhi, Ohio; Johnson Clore, of Crawfordsville, Ind., and Jacob Rouse, of Missouri, were among the old Boone Countyites, who were seen mixing with the crowd and meeting many old acquaintances. They each pronounced it the old Florence Fair over again.

While showing his roadster in a ring with ten or eleven others, Chester Davis' cart turned over and threw him out. The horse was going at the top of his speed, and when Mr. Davis got on his feet he ran across the ring and caught the horse around the neck and checked him. The horse had not become frightened when captured. For about a minute it looked very much like considerable damage would result from the accident, but it was prevented by Mr. Davis' fearless act.

SATURDAY.

The unsettled weather conditions Saturday morning seemed to have no effect on those who desired to attend the last day, and at an early hour there was a jam at the gates, and it was evident that the crowd of the previous day would be equaled if not exceeded.

This was cattle day, and the show in every class was again far beyond what was anticipated. Mr. Warfield, of Bourbon county, was on hand with a herd of fine short horns, and was a successful exhibitor. The following is the third day's awards.

The betting crowd was organized and began business on the first day.

Commonwealths Atty. M. D. Gray pronounced the Fair a grand success.

"It reminds me so much of the Old Boone Fair," could be heard every few minutes.

Boone's handsome daughters were out in full force each day, each wearing her sweetest smiles.

At noon each day there was a grand display of genuine Kentucky hospitality, as the numerous excellent spreads were discussed.

Craddock, of the Kentuckian-Citizen, came in about noon and spent the remainder of the day admiring Boone's handsome young ladies.

The directors are entitled to much credit for the success of the three days exhibition, and especially for the ample and well arranged accommodations for the immense crowds that attended.

A purse was made up for gentlemen to ride for the last thing Saturday afternoon, Chas. Keith and Will Riddell were the only entries, and the young ladies who were the judges, gave each a blue string.

This was the day upon which R. L. Crigler's special premium, a handsome silver pitcher and goblet, was to be awarded to the prettiest lady on the ground. The names of several handsome young ladies were sprung, and their gentlemen friends commenced hustling for them. The ballots began coming in at an early hour, and shortly after noon the committee, B. L. Rice, J. L. Frazier and Chas. Schramm, commenced counting. About 75 different young ladies were voted for, the five receiving the largest number being as follows: Miss Fannie Willis, 857; Miss Lizzie Dye, 591; Miss Maud Mayberry, 375; Miss Fannie Latham, 233; Miss Susie Graut, 201. After the announcement of the result Miss Willis was escorted to the Judges' stand, where she was presented with the prize in a neat speech by J. M. Lassing.

A GREAT OVATION.

William J. Bryan Receives One at Cleveland, O.

Fully 50,000 People Turn Out to Hear the Brilliant Orator's Views on the Money Question—A Plea for the People—Great Enthusiasm.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 1.—When the train containing William Jennings Bryan, the democratic candidate for president, rolled into the Union depot here it was greeted by many thousands of people who gave him a most hearty greeting, and so great was the rush to see the nominee that the force of policemen stationed in the big building was powerless to prevent the crowd from closing around the party on their way to the carriage in waiting for them and several minutes elapsed before the procession could begin its march up town.

Thousands of people from surrounding towns had come in during the day, the number from Canton alone being estimated at 4,500. Pennsylvania towns were also well represented, several by marching clubs. The Ohio visitors comprised delegations from Akron, Sandusky, Norwalk, Elyria, Alliance, Chagrin Falls, Ravenna and Massillon. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan were seated in an open carriage drawn by four white horses and they were conveyed to the Hollenden hotel while a national salute was fired by a battery of the Ohio National Guard stationed in Lake View park. The route to the hotel was lined with great multitudes of cheering people.

After partaking of supper at the Hollenden Mr. Bryan was escorted to the Central armory, an immense structure capable of seating more than 7,000 people. Double that number were crowded into the building, while on the outside thousands still clamored for admission. Mr. Bryan was given an enthusiastic ovation on his arrival. Mr. C. P. Salen was chairman of the meeting and as he stepped forward to introduce Mr. Bryan the immense audience rose to its feet and cheered for several minutes.

When the applause and enthusiasm with which he was greeted subsided, in a measure, Mr. Bryan commenced his masterly speech, which was thoroughly appreciated by the immense audience who frequently interrupted him with wild bursts of applause. The speech is as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: What is the meaning of this enormous outpouring of the people? No ordinary occasion would produce this scene. No ordinary campaign would stir men's hearts as they are being stirred to-day. Your presence, your enthusiasm, testifies to the fact that this year people are thinking as they have not thought before in recent years. And well they may. In this campaign two mighty forces are arrayed, and they are engaged in a struggle which means much to both. When Mr. Carlise in 1878 was discussing the money question he said: "If this measure (meaning the Bland act) could be intrusted for its enforcement to a public official who was in sympathy with the struggling masses who produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country, rather than with the idle holders of idle capital, the amendment would be of little importance because he would coin the maximum instead of the minimum provided by law."

John G. Carlisle divided society into two classes. He declared that the money question affected one class in one way and another class in another way. We have met in this campaign to decide upon the money question as the paramount issue before the people, and on this issue now, as then, the people are divided into two classes. On the one side we find the idle holders of idle capital and on the other side the struggling masses who produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country.

The question comes to you as it comes to me: On which side shall we fight? Ah, my friends, do not overlook the importance of this struggle. After describing it, after setting it before the people, Mr. Carlisle closed his speech with these words: "The struggle now going on cannot cease, and ought not to cease, until all the industrial interests of the country are fully and finally emancipated from the heartless domination of syndicates, stock exchanges and other great combinations of money grabbers in this country and Europe."

Have the people been emancipated from the heartless domination of those syndicates, of heartless syndicates and money grabbers of this country and Europe? No, for the last 20 years that heartless domination has increased its severity and within the last three years that heartless domination has grown more and more intense until today the people are confronted with this proposition: "Are the American people able to govern themselves or must this government be thrown over to the syndicates to carry on as they think best for their private profit?"

It has been customary in the past for many years for the two leading parties to adopt platforms ambiguous and meaningless and then go before the people and tell them that the platforms are about the same and make the fight on some other issue. But it has changed in this campaign. There is an issue now and the line is drawn so that no one need be deceived. Is there anybody, any party, declaring that the gold standard is good? Not one. Never in the history of the United States has a national party dared to write in a national platform a single sentence in approval of a gold standard. The gold standard was conceived in avarice. It was fastened upon this country by fraud and it can only be continued by deception.

The gold standard never fought an open fight in all its career. It carries the mask of the burglar and the knife of the assassin. When it was fastened upon the country in 1873 the American people had never discussed it and no party had ever gone before the people urging a single measure that leaned toward a gold standard. Every step has been taken at night and without the knowledge or consent of the people.

The republican party had at St. Louis such an opportunity as seldom comes to a party. The present administration had advanced the gold standard, had forced through under whip and spur a law that repealed the purchasing clause of the Sherman law. The administration had issued bonds in time of peace, and worse than all, it entered into a contract with a few financiers in New York and London by which it had paid those financiers an enormous profit for protecting the treasury, which 70,000,000 of people stood ready to protect. What an opportunity for the republican party. Why didn't the convention denounce the financial policy of the democratic party? Why did it not demand the abandonment of the gold standard and the restoration of the gold and silver coinage of the constitution? Why did it not do it? Because their convention was dominated by the same influences that have dominated the controlling affairs of both great parties.

The financiers of New York wrote the republican platform. The laborers of this country, the farmers of this country were looking and longing for relief, but the republican party was deaf to all sounds save the clinking of gold and blind to all colors save the glittering yellow. It wrote its platform. Did it say the gold standard was good? In the presence of the misery that it has wrought, even the republican party, with all its audacity, did not dare to advocate a gold standard. If anybody comes to you and tells you that the gold standard is good you ask them who said so. If anybody tells you that it is a blessing, ask him why no political party in the United States has ever found it out? What does it say? Why, it pledges—pledges the republican party to get rid of the gold standard and substitute bi-metallism—when? When foreign nations will help us to do it. It confesses the gold standard bad when it says it ought to be abandoned, and yet confesses its impotency to govern the country when it confesses that it must ask for foreign aid. That is the platform. I am not writing the republican platform. I am simply quoting to you what the writers of it have said.

Did they say that you shall suffer for one year? No, they did not limit it to that. Did they say you should bear it for four years? No, they did not limit it to four years. What is the duration of the time during which you must suffer from the gold standard? Forever and ever.

When will foreign nations come, when will they have pity on you? What hope is there, my friends? If the republican party, which you have made, has no pity upon you, how can you expect pity for you across the ocean? If you cannot excite pity in the minds of that party in this country which you yourself have made great, how can you expect pity from the nations from whom you have wrested an empire? My friends, our opponents preach the gospel of despair. There is not a hope, not a promise, not a prospect. They ask you to enter upon a night illumined by no star, to embark upon a sea whose farther shore no mariner may find, to travel upon a desert when the oasis when reached only makes disappointment a thousand times more keen.

Against this policy, against this surrender of the right of self-government, against this vesting of legislative power in the hands of aliens, the democratic party presents a platform which is so clear and emphatic that he who runs may read.

The republican party says that we must maintain for a time at least the gold standard.

The democratic party declares unalterable opposition to the gold standard.

The republican party says that when other nations are willing to restore bimetallism we will do it.

The democratic party says, we demand the immediate restoration of the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1 without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation.

There is an issue, my friends, and you can decide upon which side of this question your interest lies. We have not finished the gold standard yet. You think you have suffered? Our suffering has just begun if we have a continuation of the gold standard. We have not reached the end of it. We are but upon the threshold of a period of depression which is indefinite in duration and cannot be described in intensity. Hard times? Why, only a few of the nations are now suffering from gold. Wait until they all demand gold. My friends, you say you are not concerned in what others may do. Let me beg you to beware of subjecting the interests of the greatest nation upon earth upon a gold standard until you are prepared to accept the legitimate and natural results of such an act.

If greed and avarice can blind the judgment or stifle the consciences of 70,000,000 of people in the United States, do you not think that when this policy is so consummated here the same influences will be turned toward other silver using countries? If they can drive silver out here, what nation can withstand its influences? Wait until these influences, wait until these heartless, merciless influences have driven silver from here and they will turn to other nations. Wait until they have driven silver from India and 250,000,000 of people reach out after their share of the world's supply of gold. Wait until they have driven silver from China and left 350,000,000 of people who will reach out after their share of the world's supply of gold; wait until they have driven Japan and Mexico and South America into the gold standard and then they will put gold on an auction block and every toiler under the sun will bow to it and work a little harder to get a little less of the yellow metal. And at whose bidding do you destroy silver? At the bidding of the farmers of the world? The farmers of the world have never asked for the crucifixion of silver. At the bidding of the laborers of the world? The laborers of the world have never demanded the death of the white metal. Who has demanded it?

The money changers, whom the Saviour drove out of the temple. Go to the great money centers where a few men can corner the world's gold and then let it out for a little while to the nation that will pay the highest price for it. Go to the large holders of fixed investments who find that their property rises as stagnation and distress prevails through the world. These are the ones who come to you and in the name of honesty beg you to give to them the bread by the sweat of their brow. They appeal to the laboring men to help them fasten this standard upon the country. My friends, you have the right to ask them, when they tell you that they are laboring for the benefit of the laboring men, you have the right to ask them to produce some proof of the statement that they feel an interest in those who toil. The Bible tells us that the tree is known by its fruit. These trees have been bearing fruit for years and yet they have never borne fruit that the laboring men [illegible] in his house.

When did these Sauls of Tarsus become converted to ministers of our religion? When did these men who stoned the prophet turn around and say "Peace on earth and good will toward men." When did they do it? You have a right to consider the manner and the words of those who come to preach a gold standard; you have a right to measure the candor and frankness of those who tell you that sound money, without telling you what sound money means, is a good thing. You ask the farmers why they want bimetallism? They tell you it is because it is good for them. They are not worrying about somebody else. They have troubles enough of their own. You ask the laboring men why they want bimetallism. They tell you it is because it is good for them. They have troubles enough without worrying about any one else.

Ask the business men who favor bimetallism why they favor it and they will tell you it is because it is good for them. All these followers of bimetallism tell you it is good for them and they believe it good for all the great masses of the people. Ask one of the followers of a gold standard why they are in favor of a gold standard and what does he say? Does he say that it is because it is good for him? You never heard one of them say it.

If I started out by telling them that the free coinage of silver would help them, they say they don't want to be helped, that they want the gold standard, because it helps someone else. They say they want the gold standard because it is good for the laboring man, because the dollar will be a great big dollar. They want the gold standard because it is good for the farmer, so when the farmer gets hold of the the dollar it will be a high priced dollar. They say they want the gold standard because it is good for business men, but they do not want it because it is good for themselves at all. You tell them that the laboring man, the farmer and the business man all want bimetallism, that they are willing to risk themselves for the consequences, and this defense of the gold standard, these defenders, raise themselves to the full height of their moral stature and say: "Shall we allow these poor, ignorant, incompetent people to ruin themselves? No."

Why do they say no? We will ram the gold standard down their throats whether they want it or not because we love them better than they do themselves. Do you believe them? I don't.

They are made out of the same kind of mind as other people. They are men who like parties for themselves, the influence which influences them, and when they tell us that they are doing this for our good I think they add hypocrisy to avarice. When I find a man who says he wants a certain thing because it is good for him, I say that is a natural sort of fellow. I have seen men like him before. But when I find a man who has always wanted to do something for me against my will, he wants to do me good when I don't want him to do it; when I find somebody who is always feeling for me I am always thankful that he does not reach me.

Now let us assume that what they say is true. Let us assume that the free coinage of silver is going to be a great help to these financiers. It makes me so glad to have them say they are going to be benefited by it. It relieves my mind and gives me an opportunity for which I have been waiting for years. These men have been legislating for us. These men have been sacrificing for us, to hear them tell it. And now our time has come to return good for good. If they have suffered for us for 20 years and if the free coinage of silver is a good thing for them, let us give them that pleasure of having it. Now, if the gold standard is a bad thing, I don't believe that the American people should submit to it for one moment. If it is a good thing we ought to have it all the time. (A voice: "By what means is money put in circulation?")

I am glad my friend asks the question. There are a great many people who wonder how it is that money can get in circulation. The best way to investigate the question is to put yours in circulation. I have never had any trouble in putting my money in circulation. My trouble has been to keep my money from getting into circulation before I wanted it to. How do they get money into circulation? How does any man get his money into circulation? Suppose a man raises a crop of wheat and sells his wheat for money, how does he get his money into circulation? Suppose a man owns a railroad and collects fares, how does he get his money into circulation? You get a certain amount of money and then putting it into circulation is a thing so familiar that I need not attempt to describe it. How do you get gold into circulation? (A voice: "We don't see any." Applause.)

I stand corrected. You produce gold from the mines. You take that gold to the mint and have it stamped into money. That money is yours, as the bullion was yours before the mints stamped it. You take the gold back and you pay the man who produced it from the mines. You pay the interest upon any debt that may hang over the mine. You pay all the expenses of production, and then the profit that remain is yours to spend. That is the way you do with gold. That is the way you do with silver.

I want you to take this money question and settle it for yourselves. I understand that sometimes some people in some places, when they want the votes of employes, go to the employers and arrange for delivery. My friends, when we want votes for the Chicago ticket we go to the sovereigns themselves, who are the only owners of their votes. If the employes of the railroads want to vote for the Chicago ticket, those who are in charge of the roads have no right to prevent them, and under the Australian ballot they cannot prevent them. We do not ask any person to vote for the Chicago ticket if you think that by so doing you will injure your country. My desire to hold office is not great enough to induce me to ask a single citizen to violate his conscience or to go contrary to his judgment. I don't want to be elected in that way.

I want to feel that I have behind me a majority of the American people who will stand by me while I put in force every word of the Chicago platform, if there is power enough in this government to do it. My friends, they call us anarchists. No man who owns property that he came by honestly need fear that a hair upon his head will be disturbed. And as the Chicago platform, if it means anything, means that we shall go back to the period when the motto of this government was equal rights to all and especial privileges to none, we do not want to appeal to those who wish to use the government for private ends. We do not appeal to those who want the government to stand by and protect them while they trample upon the rights of citizens. We want the support of those who will want to secure for this government the love of every citizen for making the government so good as to deserve the love of every citizen.

It was intended that the Hon. Martin A. Foran and Mr. Thomas Fitzsimons should follow Mr. Bryan, but after such a masterly speech the people were simply unwilling to listen to any person. They rose en masse at Mr. Bryan's splendid peroration and then broke for the doors, vainly hoping to catch some further glimpse of him before he left. The remaining speeches were therefore dispensed with.

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Bryan was taken to Music hall, where another immense crowd had gathered. Ground floors, galleries, aisles and every available spot was occupied, and the tremendous crowd, composed of members of both parties, most prominent among them workingmen, listened with eager interest to the able arguments of this magnetic and distinguished man. They were pleased by his keen eye, honest looking features, decisive enunciation and versatile argument. For nearly ten minutes they applauded when he made his appearance in the hall, and the ovation was repeated frequently during the address. It was one of the most rousing receptions mortal was ever given.

Mr. Bryan commenced his address by saying:

I am not vain enough to believe that any part of the intense enthusiasm which I have witnessed here and everywhere is any part of a personal tribute. It simply illustrates that in a government like this the people have a right to take one of their number and make him their instrument to accomplish their purpose. I say that this campaign illustrates that the American people are indifferent to geographical position or to age or to anything else, provided they believe in the platform upon which the man stands and that he will carry out that platform if elected. * * *

No man need be ignorant of the question upon which this campaign is being fought. We have the gold standard. It came to us without our desire, it is said against our will, and we have begun a war that shall not end until it is exterminated. We have begun a war that knows no truce, we ask no quarter, we give no quarter. It is war, war, war. We do not say that the gold standard is bad, but that we must endure it. We say that it is bad and that we must get rid of it at once. We don't say that we hope foreign nations will help up. We don't care what foreign nations do or think. That's the issue, my friends.

The republican party declares that it is in favor of maintaining the gold standard until foreign nations join in relieving the American people. We are opposed to the gold standard, and being opposed to it, we want to rid ourselves of it right now, because bimetallism is good, and it cannot come too soon. Our opponents are not only afraid to say what they want, but they are afraid to say how they want to get what they want, and they cannot agree on the line of argument by which they will define any position which they dare to take. Listen to two of their speakers. One man will tell you that the gold standard is the standard of the civilized world. He will tell you that every civilized nation has it. Speak of its blessings, and then the next man will speak, even if he stands on the same platform, and tell you that the republican party is just dead in earnest to get rid of this standard of civilization. When the republican party pledges itself to substitute bimetallism for a gold standard it contradicts itself.

Why do we want bimetallism? Because the gold standard does not give us enough money. The gold standard by lessening the amount of standard money raises the value of each dollar and increases the purchasing power of it, and as gold goes up, property must go down. How can you stop hard times? By stopping falling prices; by stopping the rising dollar, and in that way only. How can you stop a rising dollar? By voting more dollars. That is the only way. They say to the laboring man that the gold standard is a good thing for him. I ask you to cast your eye back over history and point out a period when the laborer was prosperous when there was hard times. They ask the laboring man to join them in fastening a gold standard upon the world. They forget that the laboring man must first get hold of a dollar before he becomes concerned with its purchasing power. He must have opportunity to work before he comes to consider the value of his wages at all. What gives man an opportunity to work? Why, it is making enterprises productive. Raising the standard makes it more profitable to hoard money than it does to develop our resources. Why, they tell you that if we had the free coinage of silver that gold would go into hiding, but I believe that if we have the free coinage of silver the gold dollars will run a race to see which will get invested first. There is one thing that you should always remember when you are discussing the money question. That is human nature. Never overlook human nature in discussing any question. What is human nature? To make as much money out of money as possible, and whenever dollars are such that it is more profitable to hoard money men will hoard it. When dollars are such that it is more profitable to invest them people will invest. Laws make conditions. Do you want to make conditions favorable to the hoarding of money in this country? It seems to me that this is a simple question and yet our opponents are always trying to make it a complicated question. * * *

During this campaign you will have an opportunity to study this money question and apply it to yourselves and come to an intellectual conclusion. You will not need the aid of any person to tell you how to vote. I wish I had more time as I would like to go over the whole subject.

After talking to the people at Music hall for an hour Mr. Bryan hastened back to the Hollenden and from the balcony of that hotel delivered a third address to a vast crowd gathered in the street. This speech was followed by a reception in the lobby of the hotel and then the tired candidate retired to his room to rest.

It is estimated that fully 50,000 people endeavored to hear the brilliant speaker give his views on the issues of the campaign. Speeches were also made by L. A. Russell, Martin A. Foran, Charles P. Salen, L. E. Holden and other local celebrities.

TALKS TO FARMERS.

Mr. Bryan Attends a Picnic at Knowlesville, N. Y.

Tells His Hearers That the Money Problem Overshadows All Others—Quotes Carlisle's Free Silver Speech.

Knowlesville, N. Y., Aug. 29.—The Bryan party reached here at 1:10 p. m. yesterday. During the afternoon Mr. Bryan attended a Farmers' alliance picnic and addressed a large audience Mr. Bryan spoke as follows:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: My voice is so husky that you will have to help me to speak by being perfectly quiet This is a very unusual spectacle. I have had immense audiences in the cities where a great many people live in small territory, but this is the largest audience that I ever saw assembled in the midst of an agricultural county.

Quotes from Carlisle.

"Politics is a practical question. It is so simply because it can be comprehended by our people. I want to talk practical politics to you for a little while this afternoon. I want to read to you an extract from a speech made by John G. Carlisle in 1878, and I want you to mark the political philosophy therein set forth. He was speaking on an amendment to the Bland act and he used these words: 'If the execution of this measure could be intrusted to a public officer whose opinions on the subject were in accord with those of a great majority of the American people, and whose sympathies were with the struggling masses who produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country rather than with the idle holders of idle capital, the provision alluded to would be of little consequence because he would coin the maximum instead of the minimum amount allowed by the amendment, but, situated as we are, we all know, or at best, we all have reason to believe, that not a dollar beyond the minimum amount will be coined, and consequently the process of getting this money into circulation will be too slow to afford the full measure of relief which the people now demand and need.'

Analyses the Sentiment.

"Mark those words. John G. Carlisle divided society into two classes. On the one side he put the idle holders of idle capital, on the other side he put the struggling masses, who produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country. If the division existed then it exists to-day. More than that, John G. Carlisle said that a public officer sworn to do duty would be controlled in his official conduct by his sympathies, and if his sympathies were with the idle holders of idle capital he would coin as little money as possible, whereas, if his sympathies were with the struggling masses he would coin as much as the law would permit him. This is the language of John G. Carlisle.

The Issue To-Day.

"My friends, the issue to-day is an issue between the idle holders of idle money and the struggling masses who produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country: and, when this question is understood, when men find out about the money question, you will find that, if there is a man in your community whose interests or whose sympathies are with the idle holders of idle money, he will be in favor of a gold standard, and, not daring to say so, he will talk about 'honest money' and a 'sound money' and a 'sound dollar.' But if his sympathies are with those who produce the nation's wealth, he will be for the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, no matter how many times you call him an anarchist.

Will Not Stop a Bolt.

"They tell us that these financiers are going to leave the democratic party because it declares for the restoration of silver. We shall not go into court to secure an order to prevent their going. The democratic party has been weighted down by these millstones long enough. It is glad to be rid of those who want to use the party organization for private gain and their country for public plunder.

Follows Up Carlisle.

"What is going to be next? Mr. Carlisle knew. In 1878 he said: 'Under its influence the exchangeable value and the commodities, including labor, will soon begin to rise.' That is what he said in 1878. But, what will be the effect of it? 'Thus inviting investments, infusing life into the dead industries of the country and quickening the pulsations of trade in all of its departments.' He understood the laws of finance.

"He understood what was the effect of adding this money to the circulation, and, my friends, if he stated the truth then, that truth has not changed since then, nor can it be changed, though every one who spoke for it should turn his back upon it. Truth lives. It is the one thing that will not die. I quote these words to you to show you that by the increase of the volume of money we expect to stop the constant depreciation of property.

"I assert that the gold standard could not live for one day in any other nation under the sun without the aid of the money owners and the money changers to keep it in existence. I assert that the gold standard has never received the indorsement of any class of people except those who prosper as society is destroyed by a rising dollar.

He Offers Proof.

"Now, I want to say to you that my denunciation of the gold standard is sustained by events which you can see. Let me give you a proof. If a man tells you the gold standard is a good thing, you ask him why it is that no party in the history of the United States has ever declared itself for gold standard in its platform. Isn't it strange, if the gold standard is a good thing, that no party has ever seen fit to say so in a platform? And that is true. It is true that no national party has ever indorsed a gold standard, and yet there are people who favor it. Why don't they have the courage to write a platform and risk an issue before the people? But no, they do not do that. They go to St. Louis and adopt a platform which says the republican party pledges itself to secure bimetallism, which, of course, is a denunciation of the gold standard. If the gold standard is good, why should we get rid of it? If the gold standard is good, why did not the republican party pledge itself to help keep a gold standard? But no, it pledged itself to get rid of the gold standard just as soon as other nations will help.

"That is not my language, my friends, but is the language of the republican platform, and that is the construction placed upon it by the candidate who runs upon it in his letter of acceptance. He says in his letter that the American people cannot enter upon bimetallism without the concurrent action of other nations. Does he say we shall maintain a gold standard for one year? No. For four years? No. But the conclusion is that we must maintain it forever if other nations say we must. It is not a question of politics, my friends. Whole parties are divided on this issue. It rises above the question of politics. They have declared against the right of the people of the United States to govern themselves. They have declared that, while we want to get rid of the gold standard, we must keep the thing we don't want until aliens shall bring us the relief which we should achieve for ourselves. [Applause.]

A Question of Rights.

"I know not what view you may take of it, my friends but, in my humble judgment, the American people are the only people who have any right to say what the Americans will have for legislation. They have driven down the price of your products. They have increased the burden of your debts. They have foreclosed your mortgages. They are degrading and lowering the standard of civilization by driving people who want to work out upon the streets, and then idleness breeds crime, and crime menaces the safety of every citizen of the land.

"My friends, it is not more taxes that the people want, but more money to pay their taxes with. But I care not how men may differ upon the subject of taxation. The subject of taxation is ever present with us. We can change our tariff system any time, but we have reached a crisis in our monetary affairs, and we have got to decide whether the American people will run our finances or turn our government over to syndicates to take care of us. Upon the action of the United States may depend the action of other nations.

Predicts Results Abroad.

"If the influences which are at work here succeed here, they will be turned against other nations that now use silver, and if they succeed in the United States they will succeed in other nations. Every nation that goes to the gold standard increases the demand for gold, and every increase in the demand for gold raises the purchasing power of an ounce of gold, and lowers the purchasing power of wheat and corn and other products of the farm. You enshrine gold as the one thing to be desired and all mankind pays tribute to the golden calf as the privilege of working a little harder in order to enjoy the worship.

All Civilization Interested.

"Civilization is wrapped up in the solution of the money question. It is the main question involved in this issue. The right of self-government and the existence of republican institutions is involved in it. If foreign nations can force a financial policy upon the American people, they will want to enforce the system of government which is the only system we can maintain, a system which is a monarchical system and which maintains itself by standing armies.

"Even now, my friends, when we speak out against unjust legislation, they say we are disturbers of the public peace and a menace to law and order. Do you mean to say that the farmers gathered here and the laborers who are congregated in our cities are enemies to our country? No. They have earned the epithets of our opponents, not because they menace law and order, not because they are going to annihilate justice, but because they say 'Thou shalt not steal' shall apply to the great corporation as well as to the burglar and highwayman. It is because they say that this government was not instituted in order that its instrumentalities should be monopolized by those who use the government for their own ends and put it in distress.

How He Was Converted.

"I have simply told you what I believe. I speak the sentiments that lie deep down in my heart. I used to be indifferent to the money question. Until six years ago I thought anybody was a crank who talked about money, but when I got to study the money question I found that it overshadowed all other questions, that it was deeper and greater and higher than all other questions which we had to deal with, and when I read in the address of Mr. Carlisle that the consummation of this scheme meant more misery to the human race than the worst pestilence that ever occurred in the history of the world, I began to realize the importance of the money question. I believe Mr. Carlisle spoke the truth, and it is because I believe that the gold standard has made more misery for the human race than wars and pestilence and famines—more misery than human mind can conceive or human tongue can tell—it is because I believe that prophecy, that, ever since I became convinced of it, I have cried out against the conspiracy and shall cry out against it as long as God gives me the voice to speak."

BRYAN'S FELICITY.

The New York World's Estimate of His Ability and Personal Merits.

The New York World is one of the few papers in the country which, while opposing the Chicago platform, has had the justice to estimate at their proper worth the ability and personal merits of Mr. Bryan.

It declares that the little speeches which he has made on his way to New York show considerable versatility, and that they have been as happy and graceful as has been his manner of greeting those who assembled at different points to do him honor.

"They are not repetitions," it says; "they are not dull, and they are well suited to the occasions which call for them. If they lack the dignity of McKinley's short speeches and the rare combination of felicity and seriousness that marked President Harrison's, they are still effective for the end he had in view—the capturing and holding of the plain people."

In this tribute to Bryan as a speaker the World is doing the democratic presidental nominee that simple justice which he has been denied by every gold standard paper in the country. Malice, misrepresentation and vituperation have been the weapons wielded by these journals ever since his nomination. Even in their news columns, which in all well regulated papers are supposed to tell the plain, unvarnished truth with regard to any event in which the public is interested, scoffs and falsehoods have taken the place of truth and fact.

Why the gold standard organs should adopt such methods it is difficult to see. Their policy is one which will not reflect any credit on the ability or judgment of their editors when the campaign has closed. Vituperation and willful misrepresentation in the press never yet injured the prospects of any candidate for public office. They will not injure the candidacy of Bryan.—Atlanta Constitution.

An English View.

The ticket nominated by the national republican convention at St. Louis will prove a strong one in a manufacturing sections of the east, and in all localities where the financial question is not understood. It is, however, essentially the rich man's ticket. It will nowhere have a strong hold upon the masses of the people. If elected next November it must be through the power of money at the polls. The action of the convention in adopting the financial plank of the platform was weak, unpatriotic and impolitic. It will give the democratic party the opportunity of a century to ally itself with the interests of the whole people, while the republican party must stand as the protector of the small class of rich men in the money-lending and importing branches of business. The meaningless statement in the platform that the republican party favors bimetallism under an international agreement will deceive no one. Dragging this section into the platform was cowardly and insincere. By the nomination of McKinley and Hobart and the adoption of a gold standard plank in the platform the republican party has abandoned the highest and best interests of the American people, and its managers will have no just cause to complain if the voters of the country express their indignation at such treatment at the polls next November.—London Times

BEAUTIFUL SERMON

By Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., on the Story of Joseph's Rise.

Famine Abroad in the Land When Jacob's Sons Went Down to Egypt—Joseph Warned Them to Bring Benjamin With Them the Next Time, or Suffer.

Dr. Talmage's text was Genesis xliii: 3: "And Judah spake unto him, saying, The man did solemnly protest unto us, saying: Ye shall not see my face unless your brother be with you."

Nothing to eat! Plenty of corn in Egypt, but ghastly famine in Canaan. The cattle moaning in the stall. Men, women and children awfully white with hunger. Not the failing of one crop for one summer, but the failing of all crops for seven years. A nation dying for that which is so common on your table, and so little appreciated; the product of harvest-field and grist-mill and oven; the price of sweat and anxiety and struggle—bread! Jacob, the father, has the last report from the flour-bin, and he finds that everything is out; and he says to his sons: "Boys! hook up the wagons and start for Egypt and get us something to eat." The fact was, there was a great corn crib in Egypt. The people of Egypt have been largely taxed in all ages, at the present time paying between 70 and 80 per cent. of their products to the government. No wonder in that time they had a large corn crib, and it was full. To that crib they came from the regions around about—those who were famished—some paying for the corn in money; when the money was exhausted, paying for the corn in sheep and cattle and horses and camels; and when they were exhausted, then selling their own bodies and their families into slavery.

The morning for starting out on the crusade for bread has arrived. Jacob gets his family up very early. But before the elder sons start they say something that makes him tremble with emotion from head to foot, and burst into tears. The fact was that these elder sons had once before been in Egypt to get corn, and they had been treated somewhat roughly, the lord of the corn-crib supplying them with corn, but saying at the close of the interview: "Now, you need not come back here for any more corn unless you bring something better than money—even your younger brother Benjamin." Ah! Benjamin—that very name was suggestive of all tenderness. The mother had died at the birth of that son—a spirit coming and another spirit going—and the very thought of parting with Benjamin must have been a heart-break. The keeper of this corn-crib, nevertheless, says to these elder sons: "There is no need of your coming up here any more for corn unless you can bring Benjamin, your father's darling." Now Jacob and his family were very much in need of bread; but what a struggle it would be to give up this son. The Orientals were very demonstrative in their grief, and I hear the outwailing of the father as these elder sons keep reiterating in his ears the announcement of the Egyptian lord, "Ye shall not see my face unless your brother be with you." "Why did you tell him you had a brother?" says the old man complaining and chiding them. "Why, father," they said, "he asked us all about our family, and we had no idea that he would make any such demand upon us as he has made." "No use of asking me," said the father, "I can not, I will not, give up Benjamin." The fact was that the old man had lost children, and when there has been bereavement in a household, and a child taken, it makes the other children in the household more precious. So the day for departure was adjourned and adjourned and adjourned. Still the horrors of the famine increased, and louder moaned the cattle, and wide open cracked the earth, and more pallid became the cheeks, until Jacob, in despair, cried out to his sons, "Take Benjamin and be off." The older sons tried to cheer up their father. They said, "We have strong arms and a stout heart, and no harm will come to Benjamin. We'll see that he gets back again." "Farewell!" said the young men to the father, in a tone of assumed good cheer. "F-a-r-e-w-e-l-l!" said the old man; for that word has more quavers in it when pronounced by the aged than by the young.

Well, the bread party, the bread embassy, drives up in front of the corn crib of Egypt. These corn cribs are filled with wheat and barley and corn in the husk, for modern travelers in those lands, both in Canaan and in Egypt, tell us there is corn there corresponding with our Indian maize. Huzza! the journey is ended. The Lord of the corn crib, who is also the Prime Minister, comes down to the newly-arrived travelers and says, "Dine with me to-day. How is your father? is this Benjamin, the younger brother whose presence I demanded?" The travelers are introduced into the palace. They are worn and bedusted of the way; and servants come in with a basin of water in one hand and a towel in the other and kneel down before the newly arrived travelers, washing off the dust of the way. The butchers and poulterers and caterers of the prime minister prepare the repast. The guests are seated in small groups, two or three at a table, the food on a tray; all the luxuries from imperial gardens and orchards and aquariums and aviaries are brought there, and are filling chalice and platter. Now is the time for this prime minister, if he has a grudge against Benjamin to show it. Will he kill him, now that he has him in his hands? O, no! This lord of the corn-crib is seated at his own table, and he looks over to the tables of his guests; and he sends a portion to each of them, but sends a larger portion to Benjamin, or, as the Bible quaintly puts it, "Benjamin's mess was five times as much as any of theirs." Be quick and send word back with the swiftest camel to Canaan to old Jacob that "Benjamin is well; all is well; he is faring sumptuously, the Egyptian lord did not mean murder and death; but he meant deliverance and life when he announced to us on that day, 'Ye shall not see my face unless your brother be with you.'"

Well, my friends, this world is famine-struck of sin. It does not yield a single crop of solid satisfaction. It is dying. It is hunger-bitten. The fact that it does not, can not feed a man's heart was well illustrated in the life of the English comedian. All the world honored him—did everything for him that the world could do. He was applauded in England and applauded in the United States. He roused up nations into laughter. He had no equal. And yet, although many people supposed him entirely happy, and that this world was completely satisfying his soul, he sits down and writes:

"I never in my life put on a new hat that it did not rain and ruin it. I never went out in a shabby coat because it was raining and thought all who had the choice would keep indoors, that the sun did not come out in its strength and bring out with it all the butterflies of fashion whom I knew and who knew me. I never consented to accept a part I hated out of kindness to another, that I did not get hissed by the public and cut by the writer. I could not take a drive for a few minutes with Terry without being overturned and having my elbow broken, though my friend got off unharmed. I could not make a covenant with Arnold, which I thought was to make my fortune, without making his instead, than in an incredibly short space of time—I think 13 months—I earned for him £20,000, and for myself £1. I am persuaded that if I were ever to set up as a baker everyone in my neighborhood would leave off eating bread." That was the lament of the world's comedian and joker. All unhappy. The world did everything for Lord Byron that it could do, and yet in his last moment he asks a friend to come and sit down by him and read, as most appropriate to his case, the story of "The Bleeding Heart." Torrigiano, the sculptor, executed after months of care and carving, "Madonna and the Child." The royal family came in and admired it. Everybody that looked at it was in ecstacy; but one day, after all that toil and all that admiration, because he did not get as much compensation for his work as he had expected, he took a mallet and dashed the exquisite sculpture into atoms. The world is poor compensation, poor satisfaction, poor solace. Famine, famine in all the earth; not for seven years, but for 6,000. But, blessed be God, there is a corncrib. The Lord built it. It is in another land. It is a large place. An angel once measured it; and as far as I can calculate it in one phrase that corncrib is 1,500 miles broad and 1,500 high: and it is full. Food for all nations. "Oh!" say the people, "we will start right away and get this supply for our soul." But stop a moment, for from the keeper of that corncrib there comes this word, saying: "You shall not see my face except your brother be with you." In other words, there is no such a thing as getting from Heaven pardon and comfort and eternal life unless we bring with us our divine brother, the Lord Jesus Christ. Coming without Him we shall fall before we reach the corn-crib, and our bodies shall be a portion for the jackals of the wilderness; but coming with the Divine Jesus all the granaries of Heaven will swing open before our soul and abundance shall be given us. We shall be invited to sit in the palace of the King and at the table, and while the Lord of Heaven is apportioning from His own table to other tables, He will not forget us; and then and there will be found that our Benjamin's mess is larger than all the others, for so it ought to be. "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive blessing and riches and honor and glory and power."

I want to make three points. Every frank and common-sense man will acknowledge himself to be a sinner. What are you going to do with your sins? Have them pardoned, you say. How? Through the mercy of God? What do you mean by the mercy of God? Is it the letting down of a bar for the admission of all, without respect to character? Be not deceived. I see a soul coming up to the gate of mercy and knocking at the corn-crib of heavenly supply, and a voice from within says, "Are you alone?" The sinner replies, "All alone." The voice from within says, "You shall not see my pardoning face unless your divine Brother, the Lord Jesus, be with you." O, that is the point at which so many are discomfited. There is no mercy from God except through Jesus Christ. Coming with him, we are accepted. Coming without him, we are rejected. Peter put it right in his great sermon before the high priests when he thundered forth, "Neither is there salvation in any other. There is no other name given under Heaven among men whereby we may be saved." O, anxious sinner! O, dying sinner! O, lost sinner! all you have got to do is to have this divine Benjamin along with you. Side by side, coming to the gate, all the storehouses of Heaven will swing open before your anxious soul.

Am I right in calling Jesus Benjamin? O, yes. Rachel lived only long enough to give a name to that child, and with a dying kiss she called him Benoni. Afterward Jacob changed his name and he called him Benjamin. The meaning of the name she gave was, "Son of My Pain." The meaning of the name the father gave was, "Son of My Right Hand." And was not Christ the Son of Pain? All the sorrow of Rachel in that hour when she gave her child over into the hands of strangers was as nothing compared with the struggle of God when He gave up His only Son, and was not Christ appropriately called "Son of the Right Hand?" Did not Stephen look into Heaven and see Him standing at the right hand of God? And does not Paul speak of Him as standing at the right hand of God making intercession for us? O, Benjamin—Jesus! Son of pang! Son of victory! The deepest emotions of our souls ought to be stirred at the sound of that nomenclature. In your prayers plead His tears. His sufferings, His sorrows and His death. If you refuse to do it all the corn cribs and palaces of Heaven will be bolted and barred against your soul, and a voice from the throne shall stun you with the announcement, "You shall not see my face except your brother be with you."

My text also suggests the reason why so many people do not get any real comfort. You meet ten people; nine of them are in need of some kind of condolence. There is something in their health, or in their state, or in their domestic condition that demands sympathy. And yet most of the world's sympathy amounts to absolutely nothing. People go to the wrong crib, or they go in the wrong way. When the plague was in Rome, a great many years ago, there were 80 men who chanted themselves to death with the litanies of Gregory the Great—literally chanted themselves to death—and yet it did not stop the plague. And all the music of this world can not halt the plague of the human heart. I come to some one whose ailments are chronic, and I say, "In Heaven you will never be sick." That does not give you much comfort. What you want is a soothing power for your present distress. Lost children, have you? I come to you and tell you that in ten years perhaps you will meet those loved ones before the throne of God. But there is but little condolence in that. One day in the year with them, and ten years is a small eternity. What you want is sympathy now—present help. I come to those of you who have lost dear friends and say, "Try to forget them. Do not keep the departed always in your mind." How can you forget them when every figure in the carpet and every book and every picture and every room calls out their names? Suppose I come to you and say by way of condolence, "God is wise." "Oh!" you say, "That gives me no help." Suppose I come to you and say, "God from all eternity, has arranged this trouble." "Ah!" you say, "that does me no good." Then I say, "With the swift feet of prayer go direct to the corn-crib for a Heavenly supply." You go. You say: "Lord, help me; Lord, comfort me." But no help yet. No comfort yet. It is all dark. What is the matter? I have found. You ought to go to God and say: "Here, Oh, Lord, are the wounds of my soul, and I bring with me the wounded Jesus. Let His wounds pay for my wounds, His bereavements for my bereavements, His loneliness for my loneliness, His heartbreak for my heartbreak. Oh, God! for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ—the God, the man, the Benjamin, the brother—deliver my agonized soul. Oh, Jesus of the weary foot, ease my fatigue. Oh, Jesus of the aching head, heal my aching head. Oh, Jesus of the Bethany sisters, roll away the stone from the door of our grave." That is the kind of prayer that brings help, and yet how many of you are getting no help at all, for the reason that there is in your soul, perhaps, a secret trouble. You may never have mentioned to a single human ear, or you may have mentioned it to some one who is now gone away, and that great sorrow is still in your soul. After Washington Irving was dead they found a little box that contained a braid of hair and a miniature and the name of Matilda Hoffman, and a memorandum of her death, and a remark something like this:

"The world after that was a blank to me. I went into the country, but found no peace in solitude. I tried to get into society, but I found no peace in society. There has been a horror hanging over me by night and by day, and I am afraid to be alone."

How many unuttered troubles among you! No human ear has ever heard that sorrow. Oh, troubled soul, I want to tell you that there is one salve that can cure the wounds of the heart, and that is the salve made out of the tears of a sympathetic Jesus. And yet some of you will not take this solace; and you try chloral, and you try morphine, and you try strong drink, and you try change of scene, and you try new business associations, and anything and everything rather than to take the divine companionship and sympathy suggested by the words of my text when it says: "You shall not see my face again unless your brother be with you." O, that this audience to-day might understand something of the height and depth and length and breadth and immensity and infinity of God's eternal consolations.

CATS AS SOUVENIRS.

Line of Felines That Traces Its Ancestry to Independence Hall.

As a historical souvenir the cat is a decided novelty, which comes from the sacred shadow of Independence hall, says the Philadelphia Record. Some time ago people whose business took them through the historic old hall and the surrounding square frequently saw a colony of common looking cats loafing about in that vicinity. All these animals could trace their ancestors back to a couple of good ratters which had been introduced into the cellars of the old hall to depopulate the rodents which thrived and fattened there. The cats cleaned out the one nuisance, and became nuisances in turn. They were cared for and fed by a colored man named Charley, employed in the sheriff's office. When the animals increased so rapidly as to threaten to overrun the place Charley conceived a brilliant idea. He decided to turn the cats into money. He found people were willing to pay as high as one dollar for a cat born and reared in Independence hall. He soon disposed of all but one or two of the cats. These few survivors were left in the hall when the sheriff's office moved up to the city hall and took Charley with it.

W. H. Green of Alexandria, Ohio, Has an Unenviable Experience.

Mr. Green Was for Years a Great Sufferer with Locomotor Ataxia—He, at Last Finds a Cure and Certifies Before a Notary to the Truth of the Statement.

From the American, Newark, Ohio.

If an article has the endorsement of all classes of people, it must have merit.

The merchant, the housewife, the farmer, are all loud in their praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Mr. W. H. Green, who lives near Alexandria, Ohio, in St. Albans township, is one of the most prominent farmers in Licking County, and his word as to the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will have an assuring effect on his many friends and neighbors. They have confidence in him.

Mr. Green was in the American office recently and was enthusiastic in his praise of these pills. His story told in his own words is about as follows:

"About six years ago I suffered from an attack of grip which resulted in locomotor ataxia. From this I suffered a living death. I was for a long time unable to help myself and was a constant burden to my family. One day I read in the Weekly American about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I concluded that as it had helped others similarly afflicted it might help me. I went to R. W. Smith, our druggist at Alexandria, and bought a box of the pills. The first results were promising and I purchased several more boxes. They had a wonderfully reviving influence on my system. From a helpless invalid not able to dress myself. I have increased in strength and health and now do my ordinary work about the farm, and walk to Alexandria, which is about a half mile away, every day. I tell you those pills have done me a wonderful amount of good, and I am willing to take my oath of that."

State of Ohio, }
Licking Co. } ss.

Personally appeared before me, a Notary Public in and for said county, Mr. W. H. Green, of St. Albans township, who being first duly sworn, says that he was a great sufferer from locomotor ataxia, and that he received great relief from that disease by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. W. H. Green.

Sworn to and subscribed before me by the said W. H. Green this 14th day of July, 1896. Jas. R. Fitzgibbon, Notary Public.

Mr. Green, whose venerable appearance, with his long, silvery beard and benevolent countenance adds conviction to his words, has lived in St. Albans township for nearly sixty years, and his word can be absolutely depended upon. He was deeply in earnest while talking of his cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

South Dakota has thousands of acres of choice farming and ranch land lying east of the Missouri river, and within one day's ride from Chicago or Milwaukee, which can now be bought reasonably cheap, but which before the end of another year may be advanced in price.

The stock raising industry in South Dakota is profitable, and eastern capital is now being invested in cattle and sheep growing in that state.

Diversified farming, the growing of live stock, and the products of the dairy, are placing South Dakota foremost in the ranks of the successful western states.

Those desiring full information on the subject, and particularly those who wish to seek a new home or purchase land, are requested to correspond with W. E. Powell, General Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill., or H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agent for South Dakota, 295 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

The Lexington Argonaut is finding some curiosities in the vegetable line. It says: "Mr. Fred Marshall, of this city, brought to the Argonaut office some wonderful beans, the pods of which were three feet long. Mr. Marshall says they were raised from the seed of the ordinary pole bean by W. E. Blakemore, on his farm in Jessamine county, near the Garrard county line. It will be remembered that not long ago Mr. Marshall had a radish which was raised in the same neighborhood, and which weighed nine pounds and was 17in. long."

The horn of plenty has emptied its contents over the Ohio Valley, says the Warsaw Independent, and particularly this section, for there never was a better or more abundant general crop of everything. The prices are very low, bnt the people are assured of plenty to eat and a full supply can be obtained for a very small amount of money. The corn crop is enormous and several parties have offered to engage their crops at delivering time at 20 cents per bushel. Toboeco is fine and a very extensive crop. Potatoes and other crops are in like supply, but the prices on all are at about the cost of production.

Robert Laughlin, the condemned Augusta murderer, has been sentenced to hang Sept. 18th. It is the order of this court that you be taken back to the jail of Bracken county, where you will remain until the 18th day of September, when you will be taken by the Sheriff of Bracken county, between the hours of 5 a. m. and 6 p. m. and hung by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

Of last week's tobacco market the Western Tobacco Journal says:

"The trade the past week has shown some slight change in the market. The common trashes and low lugs have been more active, and no doubt prices have advanced fully one-half cent, while the colory low grades, which have been in demand have not done any better, and probably a shade easier. The mediums have remained about the same, while the best grades, with liberal offerings, have fluctuated, some bringing excellent prices, while others of the same quality were neglected; in fact, the offerings were probably in excess of the demand, but there is a disposition upon the part of the buyers to hold up the price of the fancy grades, and we think our previous prediction will be a matter of fact, and that was, that what small proportion of the crop is good will be taken at good prices.

"The reports from the tobacco districts are very favorable, as a large portion of the crop is cut and in the barns, with seasonable weather for curing, so that we can safely depend upon a good crop of tobacco, instead of the inferior crop that we are now endeavoring to dispose of.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

A recent issue of your paper contained a criticism of a notice to form a people's club at Union. The writer, who pretends to represent "Many Democrats," might enlighten us as to his motive for rushing into print with such matters. The cause of Democracy did not require his assistance, and was in no peril whatever. The suggestion was entirely innocent, and only embraced a desire on the part of the people interested, to have a permanent, independent organization, open to all without regard to previous party affiliations, with the avowed purpose of endorsing Bryan and Sewall, and the other principles for which they stood. This club would represent the people in this fight for liberty and prosperity, as opposed to organized capital, trusts and other combines. It would stand for the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver, 16 to 1, without the assistance of anyother nation on earth. It would desire to educate our youth to love the above avowed principles, this country and American manhood. To vote for principles and not for selfish, designing politicians.

This much will suffice to show you the motive which prompted us to suggest such an organization. It would not be necessary to explain to a reasonable mind that this was democracy in its purity. This club would stand ready to defend a government by the people, of the people and for the people.

Doc Baker, in the jail here on the charge of stealing a horse from Dennis Lilly, as noted sometime since, made an unsuccessful attempt at escape. Some person from the outside furnished him with a piece of buggy spring, with which he had made an opening almost through the wall in the atic of the jail when detected last Sunday. It was his purpose to use a rope to let himself down when the job was completed. The clothes line to be found in the upper corridor could have been brought into requisition. Baker owned up. His Sunday promenade privileges will be somewhat abridged from this time on. The prisoner's brother-in-law, William Bishop, has visited him several times, and he is naturally suspected with furnishing the instrument to effect the escape.

Last Friday morning Sherman Wheeler shot John R. Broadus, filling his face, neck and breast with bird shot, the weapon used being an old-fashioned muzzle loading gun. Broadus' little three-year old son was riding behind him on the horse, and two or three shot hit him in the face, but did no serious hurt. Wheeler is a tenant on Broadus' place, about a mile and a half from town, and the trouble between them arose over the crop. They had had a difficulty the day previous, at which time Broadus beat Wheeler up pretty severely. Wheeler came to town and surrendered himself Saturday morning. He was placed under a bond of $100 and his trial was set for Monday. In the meantime a warrant was sworn out against Broadus and his case was set for the same time. He was unable to appear Monday and the cases were continued until Thursday. Broadus' wounds are painful but not serious. Wheeler has instituted a suit against Broadus for damages, through his attorney, J. B. Hutchesonfor, $1,000.

Last Saturday, the skeleton of the frame house adjoining the Commercial Hotel, fell while the workmen were repairing the building. The fall made a tremendous crash and noise, and caused considerable excitement at the time. Fortunately no one was hurt. H. D. Clore and J. W. Conner, a stone-mason, were in the basement at the time, but the ground floor kept the debris from coming in on them and they were soon released from their imprisonment without injury.

Thursday night of last week Marion Sturgeon, residing in Kentucky opposite Markland, started for his home in a skiff with a lot of lumber, and as he failed to reach his destination search was made next day, believing that he had been drowned. His skiff was found Saturday near Carrollton, in a sunken condition and with one of the ends stove in as if it had been run over by a steamboat. The body of the unfortunate young man was found the next day below Ghent, and his head was mashed and bruised in a manner to indicate that he had been struck by the wheel of a boat. As he left here Thursday night a short time before the steamer City of Louisville passed here, the conclusion has been reached, that on getting out into the river he had laid down on his lumber and went to sleep, and the boat run over him. He had been up late the night before, suffering with the toothache, and was no doubt tired and sleepy, causing him to lie down, a careless act which cost him his life.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1896. NO. 47.

THERE is no defense for a set of men who wilfully interfere with speakers of an opposite political party.

Governor Bradley refused to commute the death sentence of L. Brooks a Morgan County murderer who will be hanged the last of this month.

THE Democrats had a rousing meeting at Big Bone last Saturday afternoon, and as a result a club of 130 members was organized. Several speeches were made, among the speakers being Mr. Kinney, of Rising Sun, who has been a life-long Republican.

AT Louisville, last Saturday night, Palmer and Buckner were notified of their nomination for President and Vice-President. A large crowd gathered to witness the ceremonies, and the gold men say they are well pleased with the demonstratian.

IT is very evident that Col. Breckinridge is willing to profit by the overthrow of the Democratic party. And, by the way, it is strange how the Colonel has so soon attained such an exalted position in the estimation of many of those who, two years ago, considered him unfit to be invited to their firesides.

Thomas Ready, the Lexington mind reader, won a wager of $1,000 at Cincinnati last week. Ready was challenged to take a post-office key, go to the Cincinnati post-office and get a letter out of a certain box and read the contents without opening the missive. This he did in the presence of 5,000 people. Ready will will soon take the road under the management of veteran Billy Thompson.

THE following is an editorial which is credited to the Illinois State Register in February, 1878, at which time General Palmer was its editor: "If there is any dollar more honest than the silver dollar of 371¼ grains (of pure silver) it has not been discovered in the century or more than the Nation has existed. If there is any such thing as a dishonest dollar, that miserable sham trick and travesty of a coin, a gold dollar, exactly fills that designation."

They know how to argue the financial question in Vermont. They hung William J. Bryan in effigy and carried the State by the largest Republican majority on Record."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

But why "in effigy?" A literal execution of the sentence of the law applicable to Anarchists would be better. But the "largest Republican majority on record," is what we want in Kentucky.—Capital.

AND the Capital thinks Bryan ought to be hung. Does it think it can strengthen its party in Kentucky by making such declarations as the above? The foolkiller is certainly away from home.

THE authorities here have received pretty reliable information that an effort is being made to organize a mob to hang the man Miller, who is in jail here for the murder of his brother-in-law on the bar just below the mouth of Garrison, and arrangements have been made whereby the band of outlaws will be given a hot reception should it materialize. The jailer will defend his prisoner at all hazard, and if an attempt is made to enter the jail by a mob somebody will get badly hurt. The Florence correspondent has information which justifies the belief that the lynchers expected to get in their work last Sunday night. It is also believed that some of the would-be mob were in Burlington, last Sunday night, looking over the ground. A colored boy saw several strangers hovering about the jail late that night. one of them approaching him on the postoffice corner, and informing him that it was time he was getting in, and he says he "got," without stopping to argue the question with the stranger.

PALMER AND POPULISM.

[Post Dispatch.]

Affecting to scorn Populism the Wall Street convention at Indianapolis has nominated a renegade Populist. Charging the Democratic party with fusion with Popocracy, the Indianapolis convention nominated a Popocrat elected to the Senate by a fusion between Democrats and Populists in which the Populists dictated the terms which Democrats accepted because they were loyal to their party, of which Palmer was then the candidate.

In the treaty between Palmer and Populists Cockrell and Moore, the day before Palmer's election, Palmer pledged himself to the advocacy of measures looking to the remonetization of silver. He pledged himself to the support of nearly everything else in the Ocala platform. He satisfied Populist Moore a most contumacious stickler for Populist ideas and doctrines, that he was a fit colleague for Peffer, who had just then been elected in Kansas.

Palmer and Peffer went into the Senate at the same time and practically under the same auspices. It is nothing short of farcical that one of them should have been chosen by the Plutocratic convention called to protest against fusion between Democrats and Populists on the silver issue. How can any honest opponent of such a fusion vote for Palmer, who surrendered to Populists five years ago to make such a fusion possible? How can any man objecting to the Chicago platform vote for a candidate on the Ocala platform which even the Populists who made it have since abandoned?

A convention of bolters has nominated for President the most confirmed and persistent bolter in history. Men without a party have selected as their candidate the historical man without a party.

This is John M. Palmer's sixth bolt. The first was from the Democratic party. The second was from the Illinois Republican Senatorial caucus which had nominated Lincoln for Senator. The third was from the army of the United States in front of Atlanta. The fourth was from the Republican nomination of Grant in 1872. The fifth was from the Populist platform he indorsed at Springfield in 1891.

POLITICAL.

Hon. Robt. J. Breckinridge spoke in Williamstown last Saturday.

The Democrats of Massachusetts have endorsed Bryan and Sewall.

It is claimed that a majority of the negro voters in Central Tennessee are for free silver.

Bryan was stirring up Democratic enthusiasm in Kentucky Monday and Tuesday. He went to Tennessee last night.

Col. Berry helped his candidacy wonderfully by his splendid silver speech Saturday night, at Prestonville.—Carrollton News.

Mr. Ernst has told the Republicans here not to have any more joint debates; that it didn't do the party and good.—Carrollton News.

A vote will be taken at the November election to select successors to Senator Landes and Nell, and Representatives Brown, Dunlap, Walker and Moss.

Gov. Hog, of Texas, has been in New York and other eastern States, and says he would not be surprised if Bryan carried New York by 75,000. The Governor is getting hoggish.

Sam Jones hos a new idea of an honest dollar. He defines it as a "dollar which a man can put in his pants pocket, put his pants under his pillow and let the eagle on the dollar change into a nightingale and sing him to sleep."

Governor Bradley has ordered all vacancies in the Legislature to be filled at the coming election. This is taken as proof positive that he will call a special session of the Legislature to provide for the deficit in the State Treasury.

There has been a lack of harmony in the Democratic State Central Committee in Indiana. Several members of the committee are gold men, and, of course have manifested no enthusiasm, and as a result the committee has been given a shaking up.

Secretary John G. Carlisle sent the following congratulations to Gen. Buckner: "I congratulate you and the National Democratic Party Convention upon the result of its deliberations. The nominees are Democrats and the platform is Democratic."

Governor Bradley has ordered special elections to be held in the First Appellate District to elect a successor to Judge Joseph I. Landes, and in the Louisville Circuit District to elect a successor to Judge L. H. Noble. Both were appointed to fill vacancies caused by death.

In refusing a tender of a Republican nomination for Congress in the Twelfth New York district Bourke Cockran said: "While the Democratic organization remains a party to the Populistic conspiracy against wages, I shall labor untiringly for its defeat, but I will not contest to profit by its overthrow."

Governor Bradley has tendered his services for two weeks to the Republican national committee. He will speak chiefly in Northern States and Missouri. He will make a speech at St. Louis. He will speak at Corbin, Ky., Oct. 2, and will make ten or twelve speeches in other parts of this State, one of them at the Ludlow Lagoon.

Emmett Dickson, ex-Representative of Bourbon county, who was classed as a gold man previous to the Chicago convention, says the Democratic defection in Bourbon county will not foot up 150 votes. He says it is the same bolting element in the State that elected Bradley, and it will be overcome by accession from the Republican and other parties this fall.

French H. Thornhill, of Ohio, whom the goldites had designated as an elector on the Palmer and Buckner ticket, created a sensation when he refused to accept and declared he would support Bryan and Sewall. He says "the Indianapolis ticket is not a Democratic ticket, if it does embody a principle to which I adhere (sound mouey). It was not made up by, and for the people but by a class many removes from those who at the primaries elect representatives to national conventions," &c.

He has been using this home grown coffee on his family-table for some time and says it is very good to drink. He believes it will pay better than any grain the farmer can raise.—Midway Clipper.

A startling sensation was sprung at Louisa, the county seat of Lawrence county, in the vigorous caning of Rev. Seamon, of the Methodist church, by Cooksey McClure, a leading attorney of that place. The affair occurred in the parlor of the McClure residence, where the attorney surprised his wife and the pastor tete-a-tete, and refused to accept attempted explanations. McClure demolished a fine gold headed cane in his attack, and the dominie, when he reached the street, was in a decidedly dazed condition, and yet bears the marks of the encounter.

A HUGE GUN.

It Will Be of Sixteen-Inch Caliber and Will Cost $175,000.

A Single Shot From This Weapon Might Destroy the Heaviest War Vessel Afloat —Gen. Miles Will Make an Inspection of the Western Fortification.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11. — Forgings will shortly be delivered to the war department for the manufacture of a 16-inch gun for coast defenses, which the authorities intend assembling at the Watervale arsenal. The gun will be the largest ever attempted by either the army or navy, and will cost when completed fully $175,000. Congress, last session, authorized a gun of this calibre to be built as an experiment. and made the necessary appropriation to undertake the work. For years Gen. Flagler has advocated the manufacture of such a gun, although the navy has contended that a 12-inch caliber is sufficient not only for war vessels, but coast defenses. The army has maintained that the difficulties in mounting and handling a heavy gun on ship board did not prevail in shore batteries, and with vessels protected with armor of great toughness, the heaviest guns would be required to pierce their sides at great distance. Gen. Flagler says that a single shot from a 16-inch gun might destroy the heaviest battle-ship afloat, while several shots from lighter guns would not do half so much damage. He is confident the 16-inch gun can be manufactured, and expects to show that it is essential as a part of the coast defense plan, which some years ago included a number of these guns.

Gen. Miles, while on his western tour, will make an inspection of the great land fortifications the government proposes constructing on Puget Sound, nearly opposite the British defense at Vancouver. The plan of the war department, recently approved, includes a large expenditures from last session's appropriations for defending the northwestern ports, and Gen. Miles will urge that the greater part of it be used on the fortifications opposite Vancouver. For years he has regarded this point as particularly vulnerable, and one of the first that would be struck by Great Britain, should the two countries ever be at war with each other.

For this reason he will recommend that the government make Vancouver one of the most important places of defense on the Pacific coast, and that the heaviest guns and mortars be located there. Gen. Miles, while west, will also have the dynamite gun battery at San Francisco tested in order to see how it works under trying conditions. No thorough trials of these guns have been given since soon after their installation, and it is intended now that they be subjected to the severest tests possible to give them.

EX-GOV. BROWN

Badly Injured While Preparing to Board a Louisville Electric Car.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 11.—Ex-Gov. John Young Brown, of this city, the silver democratic nominee for congress from this district, was painfully injured at 7 o'clock Thursday evening while preparing to board a Fourth avenue car at the Louisville Southern crossing. He stepped on a cross tie two feet from the ground and put his weight on his lame left leg, which has been broken three times. The leg gave way and he fell face foremost down a bank, breaking the leg, left wrist and left collar bone, which had been broken once before. He was carried to his home at 1714 Fourth avenue and patched up, with the assurance of his physician that he can resume his campaign in three weeks.

Oscar E. Hill Pardoned by the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The president has granted a full pardon to Oscar E. Hill, sentenced in Utah three years ago to ten years' imprisonment for making false entries in the books of a national bank of which he was cashier. Last June the president commuted the sentence to five years on recommendation of the judge who tried him and the district attorney who prosecuted him. The pardon is granted by the president now "solely out of the pity of the convict's aged mother who has recently become a widow and who in her mental and physical weakness prays for the presence and assistance of her only son during her few remaining days."

POWDER MILL,

Near Youngtown, O., Explodes—Two Men Blown to Atoms.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 12.—A terrible explosion occurred at the mills of the Ohio Powder Co. Friday morning shortly after 8 o'clock. Two men were instantly killed—Dan Davis and Geo. Lynch.

The explosion occurred in the pressroom. It was heard for many miles in the country about Youngstown.

What caused the disaster is hardly known. The fireman claims that he left the pressroom about five minutes before the explosion. The machinery has been thoroughly examined, and no defect was found.

The foreman, who had been in the room, left just a moment before, and escaped. Only the two men killed were in the place at the time of the explosion. The property loss will be several thousand dollars.

HUBBARD, O., Sept. 11.—The explosiod in the Ohio Powder Co.'s mill was distinctly felt here. Geo. W. Lynch, the superintendent, who was killed, was 40 years old. He leaves a widow and four small children. Davis is 35 and leaves a widow. The bodies of both men were blown to atoms and no parts of them have been found. The property loss is $5,000. There was about a ton of powder in the mill at the time.

PARTING LOOK

At His Dead Wife's Face, Kissed His Five Children and Then He Shot Himself.

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 12.—There was a tragic sequel Friday to the sudden and peculiar death several days ago of Mrs. James H. Cramer. Her husband, driven to distraction by the awful remorse following her departure, shot himself dead. Before firing the fatal bullet he took a parting look at the face of his dead wife, and then kissed his five children farewell.

Cramer and his wife quarreled Tuesday night, and during the disturbance Mrs. Cramer attempted, it is asserted, to scald her husband with the contents of the tea kettle. A struggle ensued, during which both were scalded with boiling water.

On Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Cramer, in company with a neighbor, applied at the city hospital to have her injuries treated. While sitting in the surgeon's chair she suddenly threw up her hands and expired.

The police attempted to hush up the matter, but Mr. Boogher demanded the punishment of Maj. Rainwater. Both principals are of the first circle in business and society.

JOHN R. GENTRY

In a Match Race Beats Star Pointer by a Short Head; Time, 2:01 1-2.

Gentry Wins the Third Easily by a Length in 2:05 3-4—The Drivers Were Andrews, for Gentry, and McClary, for Star Pointer—Race for $5,000.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 11.—A special from Glens Falls to the Record says:

A perfect day and a fast track drew a crowd of 8,000 persons to the Glens Falls race track Thursday afternoon. The event of the day was the match race between John R. Gentry and Star Pointer. The race from start to finish was of the close and exciting order, and when after the second heat, which Gentry won by a short head, the time, 2:01¼ was marked up and it was realized that the world's record was broken, the spectators madly cheered the king of pacers and his driver, Andrews.

Before the first heat the betting was 2 to 5 on Gentry, Star Pointer at 3 to 2. They got away on the second score, Star Pointer at the pole. He led to the home stretch, when Gentry slowly forged ahead, inch by inch and won the first heat by a nose. Time by quarters: 0:31¼, 1:03¾, 1:35. 2:03¾.

In the second heat the excitement culminated. The horses got away on the first score and went around the track neck and neck, with the precision of machines, neither gaining nor losing until just before reaching the wire where Gentry made a magnificent spurt and went under the wire a neck ahead, amid wild enthusiasm. The time by quarters was 0:31, 1:02, 1:32, 2:01 1-2, the last half quarter being the fastest ever paced. The climax was over with this heat. The horses were tired and the race seemed, by a virtual agreement, to belong to Gentry, who won the third easily by a length. Time, 2:05 3-4.

The drivers were Andrews for Gentry, McClary for Star Pointer, and both are loud in praise of the track, now proved, according to one trainer, the fastest in the country. The race was for a $5,000 purse and the Breeders' association of this place offered $500 extra if the world's record was broken. Small interest was taken in the other events.

PERRY'S VICTORY.

Preliminaries to the Celebration of the Anniversary of the Event at Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 11.—As a preliminary to the celebration Thursday of the anniversary of Com. Perry's victory on Lake Erie in 1813, the marble statue of the naval hero in Wade park, first erected in 1861, was decorated with flowers and ex-Senator Butler, of South Carolina, a nephew of Perry, made an address, the subject of which was the era of peace and the good will between the north and the south. Gov. Lippitt, of Rhode Island, which is the native state of Perry, spoke briefly, thanking Cleveland and Ohio for honoring its distinguished son. Appropriate speeches were made by Rev. George W. Popper, ex-consul to Milan, Italy; Col. C. C. Dewstoe, J. G. W. Cole, president of the chamber of commerce, and others. Among those present was Col. Oliver H. Perry, of Elmhurst, Ct., a grand nephew of the commodore.

The anniversary of the battle of Lake Erie was made a holiday for the city. The majority of the shops and factories closed and the city put on a gala dress for the occasion. Commodore Perry's monument in Wade park was covered with flags and flowers. At the foot was placed an elaborate floral vessel bearing the inscription:

"Don't give up the ship."

Great numbers of visitors from northern Ohio, many of whom remembered the dedication of Perry's monument in 1860, came to the city on the early trains. The visitors from New England wondered that this monument had been taken from the public square in the center of the city and placed in an outlying park. The day was ushered in by the booming of cannon. Gov. Bushnell, of Ohio, presided at the morning exercises in the O. N. G. Armory. The immense building was well filled, many of the audience coming from the east. Gov. Bushnell suggested that congress ought to appropriate money to erect a monument on Put-in-Bay island to the memory of the men killed in the battle of Lake Erie. "If the general government is not able to do it," he said, "the state of Ohio ought to do it."

He then introduced Gov. Warren Lippitt, of Rhode Island, the orator of the day.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler, of South Carolina, a nephew and Oliver Hazard Perry, of Elmhurst, N. Y., a grandson of the commodore, were introduced and made remarks.

One of the most interesting incidents of the morning meeting was the introduction of Mrs. Elizabeth McPeters. She is a daughter of Ben Fleming, one of the gunners on the Lawrence. She is now an inmate of the city infirmary. Gen. Axline sprang to his feet and moved that steps be taken to take her from the institution and give her a comfortable home. L. E. Holden promised that one would be provided. Rev. C. E. Manchester, a cousin of Commodore Perry, delivered the closing prayer.

The battle of Lake Erie was reproduced on the lake front Thursday evening, closing the celebration. The display was a success and was witnessed by an immense crowd.

Vermonters to Call on McKinley.

CANTON, O., Sept. 11.—The delegation from Vermont, headed by Senator Proctor, which will call on Maj. McKinley at 10 o'clock Friday, will be received with a good deal of ceremony by the Canton people. Maj. McKinley has asked Gov. Bushnell, of Ohio, who is in Cleveland at present, to come to Canton with his staff to meet the Vermont delegation. Gov. Bushnell had arranged to call on Maj. McKinley some time Friday afternoon, but as there is a general desire to have him take part in the reception of the Vermonters, he will doubtless be among those who will welcome them.

ENCOURAGING.

Larger Demand for Finished Product Probable—Tide of Gold Imports Still Flows Strongly This Way.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade Saturday, says:

Better prospects and relief from monetary anxiety do not yet bring larger demands for finished products, though large buying of pig iron, wool, leather, hides, cotton and other materials continue to show a growing belief that a general upward movement in prices will come with the replenishment of dealers' stocks this fall. Most prices are extremely low, so that nothing more than an ordinary demand would advance them. But bank failures at New Orleans cause temporary hesitation, crop returns indicate disappointment in some cotton and some spring wheat states, prices of corn and oats make it unprofitable to sell at present, the number of manufacturing works and mines in operation does not gain, but rather decreases, reductions of wages are somewhat numerous, occasionally resisted by strikes, and all these conditions diminish for a time the buying power of the people. While many think general improvement can not come until the election has removed political uncertainties, others expect soon to see the result anticipated in trade.

The weekly output of pig iron decreased 26,578 tons in August to 130,500 tons against 217,300 in November, a shrinkage of 40 per cent. Other works still have stopped since September began. Unsold stocks increased 62,068 tons in August, exclusive of those accumulating in the hands of great steel companies. Sales of wool for the week cover about equaled the normal consumption for the first time in several months, not because manufacturers have more work, for no gain is seen in the time or output. The buying is mainly speculative, based on the belief that prices must advance. No considerable decrease appears in the enormous stock of print cloths, although the output has been reduced about half for two months, and a fifth of the year's production remains in the hands of makers, but they have advanced the price three-sixteenths during the week. For other goods there is a better demand and manufacturers have advanced prices because of the rising cost of material, the average for all cottons having risen 5.3 per cent. since August 6, but stocks of many kinds are large.

The Financial Chronicle's annual report, issued Friday, makes the last crop of cotton 7,162,473 bales. the consumption, north and south 2,695,810, and the exports 4,712,913 during the year. No account of southern mill stocks is attempted and no estimate is yet given of the crop now coming forward. Accounts of disappointing returns in spring wheat states are numerous, but it is difficult to reconcile short estimates with the heavy marketing at low prices. Corn is almost wholly out of danger and the yield is generally expected to be the largest, as the price here is the lowest ever known.

Stocks grew steadily stronger till Thursday, although railroad earnings are not stimulating. The average for railroad stocks has risen slightly, and for trusts over $1 per share, notwithstanding much realizing of profits, especially since the failures in New Orleans.

The tide of gold imports still runs strongly this way with further engagements lifting the aggregate to $28,620,000, of which $23,172,050 have arrived. The prospect led the Bank of England to raise its discount rates from 2 to 2½ per cent. and some selling on foreign account followed in stocks.

The New Orleans bank failures were followed by unusual offerings of cotton bills and the interior demand for money also increased, the net outgo being $1,350,000.

Liabilities in commercial failures for the fiscal week of September were $4,095,590, against $2,157,751 last year, $1,538,539 in 1894, and $5,319,098 in 1893.

The failures for the week have been 315 in the United States against 187 last year, and 47 in Canada, against 34 last year.

Magill, president of the Avenue Savings bank at Thirty-first street and Michigan avenue was arrested Friday morning on a warrant charging him with embezzlement, the complainant being Ira J. THE LATEST FAD.

Autograph Hats Now the Rage with College Students and Summer Girls.

One of the new fads that started with the Cornell university boys is the fashion of wearing autograph hats. One sees them everywhere, for college men in other colleges have taken it up, and have scattered themselves here and there among the summer girls. The hats are made of white canvas, with stitched brims. Names can be written in ink anywhere on the surface. One of these had several names of well-known men written upon it, among them the man who pulled stroke for the Cornell eight that won such a glorious victory over Pennsylvania, Harvard and Columbia in that memorable boat race at Poughkeepsie.

Sentimental young men collect the names of their sweethearts, though this has its drawbacks, because there is always the chance that the last girl will want to know all about the other girls whose names she finds written on the hat before hers. The words are usually printed, though script makes a prettier hat and looks less like an advertising device. To see stalwart young college men stalking along with these hats on gives one the impression of one of those impecunious individuals who march up and down upon the business streets with a printed placard on their backs to the effect that "a regular dinner can be had at the Blank dairy lunch for 20 cents."

However, the fad is growing, and by fall the white hats will be black.

NEGRO MOB

Of Several Hundred Marching on the Town of Blythe, Ga.

The Handful of White Men Await them With Some Fear, But Will Make a Firm Stand—Sheriff With Deputies Leave for the Scene Immediately.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 14.—A special to the Chronicle, from Blythe, this county, 22 miles from here, says:

Blythe is in a state of great excitement. Several hundred Negroes, armed, are supposed to be moving toward here, and the handful of white men are awaiting them, not, however, without some fear, though they are all fearless and will make a firm stand. If there is to be trouble it will be some time later than this, as it is not feared that the mob of Negroes will come before midnight.

"All day the whites here have been waiting with guns and revolvers near at hand for emergency."

Sheriff O'Connor with Deputy Sheriffs D'Antignae and Pritchard and a posse of ten men left Augusta Sunday afternoon and arrived at Blythe at eight o'clock. The cause of the trouble is the shooting of a Negro, Steven Boland, by M. A. Clark, for which the Negroes threaten to massacre several white men at the station.

PALMER AND BUCKNER

Notified of Their Nominations by the Gold Democrats—Cleveland and Carlisle Bolt the Silver Democratic Party.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 14.—The gold democrats held their notification meeting in the Auditorium, this city, Saturday night. Gen. John M. Palmer, of Illinois, and Gen. S. B. Buckner, of Kentucky, were formally notified by Senator Donaldson Caffrey, of Louisiana, and Col. John R. Fellows, of New York, that they had been selected to lead the gold democrats.

"I regret that I can not accept your invitation to attend the notification meeting on Saturday evening. As a democrat, devoted to the principles and integrity of our party, I would be delighted to be present on an occasion so significant, and to mingle with those who are determined that the voice of the true democracy shall not be stifled, and who insist that its glorious standard shall be borne aloft as of old in faithful hands."

This was the message wired from Buzzard's Bay to the Palmer-Buckner notification meeting by President Cleveland, and read by Hon. Wm. D. Bynum. Mr. Bynum had a number of telegrams, and when he picked up the last and read the date line, "Buzzard's Bay," a cheer went up that might have been heard all over Louisville. No need to tell who sent that telegram.

A few on the inside knew that Mr. Cleveland had, at the last moment, broken silence and given his adhesion to the cause of the Palmer and Buckner ticket, but so closely has Mr. Bynum guarded his precious message that not more than half a dozen knew its precious contents, and as he read line after line, was so punctuated by applause that half of it was lost to the audience, but they knew it was from Grover, and that they could read it in print, and for the moment this satisfied them. When Mr. Bynum read the signature, "Grover Cleveland," the whole house was on its feet cheering and yelling, and they kept it up for nearly ten minutes, winding up with three cheers for the president.

When Senator Palmer was shown the message Sunday afternoon he remarked: "I imagine some of the federal office holders will give heed to this."

While the president's message absorbed the most attention, the following from Secretary Carlisle's pen came in for its share of comment:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—To Hon. W. Bynum, Louisville, Ky.: Your telegram inviting me to attend the meeting at Louisville to-day has been forwarded to me at this place, and I greatly regret my inability to accept. The conservative and patriotic declarations of the Indianapolis convention on the public questions involved in the pending contest and the high character of its nominees can not fail to arouse the real democratic sentiment of the country and command the hearty support of all who sincerely believe in the preservation of the public honor, the public peace and the stability and value of the currency used by our people. I am proud to take my stand with the old-fashioned democrats who have refused to abandon their honest convictions in order to form unnatural alliances with political and social organizations, whose purposes are dangerous to the country and wholly inconsistent with the fundamental principles of our party, and I pledge to you and your associates such support and assistance as I can properly give during the campaign. J. G. CARLISLE.

TRAIN WRECKED.

Four Persons Killed Outright and a Number Seriously Injured.

The Accident Was Caused by the Collapse of the Strucure Spanning Mad River —Three Cars and the Engine Wrecked—Relief for Sufferers.

EUREKA, Cal., Sept. 14.—By the collapse of a bridge on the Arcata and Mad River railroad near this city Sunday afternoon, an accommodation train was precipitated into the bed of the creek below, four persons were killed outright and a number of others seriously wounded, some of whom will die.

The dead are: Alexander Cameron, brakeman; Miss Annie Holland, of Riverside; Miss Kirkham; an unknown child.

The injured—David Wood, Glendale, badly injured and can not survive; Mrs. David Wood, wife of the above, both legs broken and internally injured; the two little children of Mr. David Wood, badly crushed and bruised; Geo. Burke, engineer, severely scalded and bruised; Chas. Burke, fireman, badly burned; Harvey Sammons, conductor, fatally injured; Mrs. Kate Minor, arm and leg broken; Annie Vintera, face cut and leg broken; Mr. Vintera, internally injured; Daniel Mahoney, dangerously bruised; two children of Daniel Mahoney, seriously injured; an unknown Italian woman, unconscious and will die.

Details of the accident are difficult to obtain, there being no telegraphic communication with the scene nearer than Eureka.

As far as known, the accident was caused by the collapse of a bridge spanning Mad river, about five miles from town. The accommodation train which leaves Arcata at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon consisted of two coaches, one box car and engine, and carried about 20 passengers. Shortly after 5 o'clock a telephone message was received stating that the train had been derailed at Mad river bridge and was a total wreck on the river bed. A relief train with doctors, nurses, medical supplies, etc., was immediately dispatched from Arcata to the scene.

The three cars and engine were found lying beneath the bridge, a mass of splinters. The wounded had managed to drag themselves from the debris, and were nursing their cuts by the waterside.

Buried beneath the wreckage were found the bodies of Miss Holland, Miss Kirkham and Mr. Cameron. The unknown child was alive when found but died a few minutes later.

The injured were carried up a steep bank with great difficulty, and it was nearly 10 o'clock when the relief train started on the return trip to Arcata bearing the dead and wounded. The train was met at Arcata by the entire population of the town, and a sorrowful scene was enacted as the dead and injured were claimed by friends and relatives.

COAST DEFENSE.

Bids to Be Opened for Three New Sea-Going Coastline Battle Ships.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—On Monday, Sept. 14, bids will be opened at the navy department for three powerful sea-going coastline battle ships, for which congress provided by act of June 10 last, limiting the cost, exclusive of armament, to not more than $3,750,000. One of the vessels is to be built on the Pacific coast, provided a reasonable bid be received, and congress specifically stipulated that the award be made and contracts signed by October 8. Five firms have taken a remarkable interest in the plans and proposals are expected from the Cramps at Philadelphia, the Scotts at San Francisco, the Bath, Me., iron works, the Newport News Co. and John Dialogue, at Camden, N. J. The latter firm is making its first appearance as competitors for such large work. Proposals are required either on the plans of the department or such modifications as the builders choose to suggest, adhering in the latter case to certain specified requirements imposed by the naval construction bureau.

The vessels are a combination of the best natures of the Iowa and Kearsarge types, modified by such advances and improvements as experience has suggested most desirable.

The vessels will be 368 feet in length on load water line, 72 feet 2.5 inches extreme beam, have a normal displacement of 11,525 tons, 10,000 indicated horse power and an estimated speed of 16 knots. A coal supply of 800 tons is provided for with a total bunker capacity of 12,000 tons. The main battery consists of four 13-inch and 14 six-inch rapid fire breech-loading rifles and the secondary battery of 17 six-pounder and four one-pounder rapid fire guns, four machine guns and one field gun.

No premiums are offered for increased speed, but a penalty at the rate of $25,000 a quarter knot is imposed for the first half knot below the maximum requirements of 16 knots.

It is proposed to christen these ships California, Alabama and Pennsylvania.

INDORSES EVERY PLANK.

A Letter of Acceptance from W. J. Bryan.

Democratic Nominee for the Presidency Stands by All the Declarations of the Chicago Platform and Says One Term Will be Enough for Him If Elected.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 10.—The following is Mr. Bryan's letter accepting the nomination of the democratic party:

Hon. Stephen M. White and other members of the notification committee of the democratic national committee:

Gentlemen—I accept the nomination tendered by you on behalf of the democratic party, and in so doing desire to assure you that I fully appreciate the high honor which such a nomination confers and the grave responsibilities which accompany an election to the presidency of the United States. So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the constitution in the chief executive of the nation, and with the enormous influence which he can wield for the benefit or injury of the people, that I wish to enter the office if elected free from any personal desire, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my country. Human judgment is fallible enough when unbiased by selfish considerations, and in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of an office to advance any personal ambition, I hereby announce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for re-election in case this campaign results in my election.

I have carefully considered the platform adopted by the democratic national convention and unqualifiedly indorse every plank thereon.

Our institutions rest upon the proposition that all men, being created equal, are entitled to equal consideration at the hands of the government. Because all men are created equal, it follows that no citizen has a natural right to injure another citizen. The main purpose of government being to protect all citizens in the enjoyment of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, this purpose must lead the government first, to avoid acts of affirmative injustice and, second, to restrain each citizen from trespassing upon the rights of any other citizen. A democratic form of government is conducive to the highest civilization, because it opens before each individual the greatest opportunities for development and stimulates to the highest endeavor by insuring to each the full enjoyment of all the rewards of toil, except such contribution as is necessary to support the government which protects him. Democracy is indifferent to pedigree—it deals with the individual rather than with his ancestors. Democracy ignores differences in wealth—neither riches nor poverty can be invoked in behalf of or against any citizen. Democracy knows no creed—recognizing the right of each individual to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, it welcomes all to a common brotherhood and guarantees equal treatment to all, no matter in what church or through what forms they commune with their Creator.

Having discussed portions of the platform at the time of its adoption, and again when your letter of notification was formally delivered, it will not be necessary at this time to touch upon all the subjects embraced in the party's declaration. Honest differences of opinion have ever existed and will ever exist as to the most effective means of securing domestic tranquility, but no citizen fails to recognize at all times and under all circumstances the absolute necessity for the prompt and vigorous enforcement of law and the preservation of the public peace. In a government like ours law is but the crystallization of the will of the people; without it the citizen is neither secure in the enjoyment of life and liberty, nor protected in the pursuit of happiness. Without obedience to law, government is impossible. The democratic party is pledged to defend the constitution and enforce the laws of the United States, and it is also pledged to protect and defend the dual scheme of government instituted by the founders of the republic. The name United States was happily chosen. It combines the idea of national strength with the idea of local self-government and suggests an indissoluble union of indestructible states.

Our wise forefathers, fearing the tendency toward centralization as well as the dangers of disintegration, guarded against both and national safety as well as domestic security is to be found in the careful observance of the limitations which they imposed upon it. It will be noticed that while the United States guarantees to every state a republican form of government and is empowered to protect each state against invasion, it is not authorized to interfere in the domestic affairs of any state, except upon application of the legislature of the state, or upon the application of the executive when the legislature cannot be convened. This provision rests upon the sound theory that the people of the state, acting through their legally chosen representatives, are, because of their more intimate acquaintance with local conditions, better qualified than the president to judge of the necessity for federal assistance. Those who framed our constitution wisely determined to make as broad an application of the principles of local self-government as circumstances would permit, and we cannot dispute the correctness of the position taken by them without expressing a distrust of the people themselves.

ECONOMY.

Since governments exist for the protection of the rights of the people and not for their spoliation, no expenditure of public money can be justified unless that expenditure is necessary for the honest, economical and efficient administration of the government. In determining what appropriations are necessary the interests of those who pay the taxes should be consulted, rather than the wishes of those who receive or disburse public moneys.

BONDS.

An increased bonded debt of the United States at this time is entirely without excuse. The issue of interest-bearing bonds within the last few years has been defended on the ground that they were necessary to secure gold with which to redeem United States notes and treasury notes; but this necessity has been imaginary rather than real. Instead of exercising the legal right vested in the United States to redeem its coin in either gold or silver, the executive branch of the government has followed a precedent established by a former administration and surrendered the option to a holder of the obligations. This administrative policy leaves the government at the mercy of those who find a pecuniary profit in bond issues. The fact that the dealers in money and securities have been able to deplete or protect the treasury according to their changing whims, shows how dangerous it is to permit them to exercise a controlling influence over the treasury department. The government of the United States, when administered in the interest of all the people, is able to establish and maintain its own financial policy not only without the aid of any syndicates, but in spite of any opposition which the syndicates may exert. To assert that the government is dependent upon the assistance or good will of any portion of the people other than a constitutional majority is to assert that we have a government in form, but without vital force.

NATIONAL BANK CURRENCY.

The position taken by the platform against the issue of paper money by national banks is supported by the highest democratic authority, as well as demanded by the interests of the people. The present attempt of the national banks to force the retirement of United States notes and treasury notes in order to secure a basis for a larger issue of their own notes, illustrates the danger which arises from permitting them to issue their paper as a circulating medium. The national bank note, being redeemable in lawful money, has never been better than the United States note which stands behind it, and yet the banks persistently demand that these United States notes, which draw no interest, shall give place to interest-bearing bonds, in order that the banks may collect the interest which the people now save. To empower national banks to issue circulating notes is to grant a valuable privilege to a favored class, surrender to private corporations the control over the volume of paper money, and build up a class which will claim a vested interest in the national financial policy. The United States notes, commonly known as greenbacks, being redeemable in either gold or silver at the option of the government and not at the option of the holder, are safer and cheaper for the people than national bank notes based upon interest-bearing bonds.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

A dignified but firm maintenance of the foreign policy of the United States as set forth by President Monroe and reiterated by the presidents who have succeeded him, instead of arousing hostility abroad is the best guarantee of amicable relations with other nations. It is better for all concerned that the United States should resist any extension of European authority in the western hemisphere rather than invite the continual irritation which would necessarily result from any attempt to increase the influence of monarchial institutions over that portion of the Americas which has been dedicated to republican government.

PENSIONS.

No nation can afford to be unjust to its defenders. The care of those who have suffered in the military and naval service of the country is a sacred duty. A nation which, like the United States, relies upon volunteer service rather than upon a large standing army, adds to its own security when it makes generous provision for those who have risked their lives in its defense, and for those who are dependent upon them.

THE PRODUCERS OF WEALTH.

Labor creates capital. Until wealth is produced by the application of brain and muscle to the resources of this country, there is nothing to divide among the non-producing classes of society. Since the producers of wealth create the nation's prosperity in time of peace and defend the nation's flag in time of peril, their interests ought at all times to be considered by those who stand in official positions. The democratic party has ever found its voting strength among those who are proud to be known as the common people, and it pledges itself to propose and enact such legislation as is necessary to protect the masses in the free exercise of every political right and in the enjoyment of their just share of the reward of their labor.

ARBITRATION.

I desire to give special emphasis to the plank which recommends such legislation as is necessary to secure the arbitration of differences between employers engaged in inter-state commerce and their employes. Arbitration is not a new idea—it is simply an extension of the court of justice. The laboring men of the country have expressed a desire for arbitration, and the railroads cannot reasonably object to the decisions rendered by an impartial tribunal. Society has an interest ever greater than the interest of employer and employe, and has a right to protect itself by courts of arbitration against the growing inconvenience and embarrassments occasioned by disputes between those who own the great arteries of commerce on the one hand and the laborers who operate them on the other.

IMMIGRATION.

While the democratic party welcomes to the country those who come with love for our institutions and with determination and ability to contribute to the prosperity of our nation, it is opposed to the dumping of criminal classes upon our shores and to the importation of either pauper or contract labor to compete with American labor.

INJUNCTIONS.

The recent abuses which have grown out of injunction proceedings have been so emphatically condemned by public opinion, that the senate bill providing for trial by jury in certain contempt cases will meet with general approval.

TRUSTS.

The democratic party is opposed to trusts. It would be recreant to its duty to the people of the country if it recognized either the moral or the legal right of these great aggregations of wealth to stifle competion, bankrupt rivals and then prey upon society. Corporations are the creatures of law and they must not be permited to pass from under the control of the power which created them; they are permitted to exist upon the theory that they advance the public weal, and that they must not be allowed to use their powers for the public injury.

RAILROADS.

The right of the United States government to regulate inter-state commerce cannot be questioned and the necessity for the vigorous exercise of that right is becoming more and more imperative. The interests of the whole people require such an enlargement of the powers of the inter-state commerce commission as will enable it to prevent discrimination between persons and places and protect patrons from unreasonable charges.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The government cannot afford to discriminate between its debtors and must, therefore, prosecute its legal claims against the Pacific railroads. Such a policy is necessary for the protection of the rights of the patrons as well as for the interests of the government.

CUBA.

The people of the United States, happy in the enjoyment of the blessings of free government, feel a generous sympathy toward all who are endeavoring to secure like blessings for themselves. This sympathy, while respecting all treaty obligations, is especially active and earnest when excited by the struggling of neighboring peoples who, like the Cubans, are near enough to observe the workings of a government which derives all its authority from the consent of the governed.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

That the American people are not in favor of life tenure in the civil service is evident from the fact that they, as a rule, make frequent changes in their official representatives when those representatives are chosen by ballot. A permanent office-holding class is not in harmony with our institutions. A fixed term in appointive offices, except where the federal constitution now provides otherwise, would open the public service to a larger number of citizens without impairing its efficiency.

THE TERRITORIES.

The territorial form of government is temporary in its nature and should give way as soon as the territory is sufficiently advanced to take its place among the states. New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona are entitled to statehood and their early admission is demanded by their material and political interests. The demand of the platform that officials appointed to administer the government of the territories, the District of Columbia and Alaska, should be bona fide residents of the territories or district, is entirely in keeping with the democratic theory of home rule. I am also heartily in sympathy with the declaration that all public lands should be reserved for the establishment of free homes for American citizens.

WATERWAYS.

The policy of improving the great waterways of the country is justified by the national character of those waterways and the enormous tonnage borne upon them. Experience has demonstrated that continuing appropriations are, in the end, more economical than single appropriations separated by long intervals.

THE TARIFF.

It is not necessary to discuss the tariff question at this time. Whatever may be the individual views of citizens as to the relative merits of protection and tariff reform, all must recognize that until the money question is fully and finally settled the American people will not consent to the consideration of any other important question. Taxation presents a problem which in some form is continually present, and a postponement of definite action upon it involves no sacrifice of personal opinion or political principles; but the crisis presented by financial conditions cannot be postponed.

Tremendous results will follow the action taken by the United States on the money question and delay is impossible. The people of this nation, sitting as a high court, must render judgment in the cause which greed is prosecuting against humanity. The decision will either give hope and inspiration to those who toil or "shut the doors of mercy on mankind." In the presence of this overshadowing issue, differences of opinion upon minor questions must be laid aside in order that there may be united action among those who are determined that progress toward a universal gold standard shall be stayed and the gold and silver standard of the constitution restored.

TENDERED AN HONOR.

Bryan Notified of His Nomination by the Silver Party.

Hon. George A. Groot Tells Him of the Convention's Action—Mr. Bryan's Remarks in Accepting, Both for Himself and Mr. Sewall.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 9.—The national silver party, through its regularly-appointed committee, Tuesday night formally notified William J. Bryan of his nomination by its convention at St. Louis. The ceremony took place in the open air on the plaza and lawn in front of Nebraska's state capitol building. With the exception of those seated in a few score chairs on the speakers' platform and directly in front of it, all the audience was standing. Mr. Bryan did not read his speech in answer to the information formally given by the committee of the silver party. He made a speech neither long nor short, without the aid of notes, and was frequently applauded.

Before the meeting a parade occurred, and flambeau clubs and organizations of mounted men, bearing transparencies and torches and firing skyrockets and roman candles, gave vent to their political enthusiasm in a way that bordered on delirium. This was Mr. Bryan's escort, and when he appeared on the platform the crowd, that had increased with great rapidity after the procession was under way, cheered him repeatedly as his well-known figure was recognized.

The Notification.

Norris Humphrey, of Lincoln, called the assemblage to order and in a few words presented George A. Groot, of Ohio, chairman of the committee appointed by the national convention to notify Mr. Bryan. The other members of the notification committee and their alternates were present. Mr. Groot's address was somewhat lengthy, the major portion of it being directed to a discussion of the financial question. Nearing the end of his remarks, he turned to Mr. Bryan and said:

"The national silver convention with an unanimity unexampled in the history of national conventions in this country nominated you as the candidate of the national silver party for the distinguished office of president of the United States. You are now the candidate for the great office of president of three great political parties, of which the silver party is not the least. The convention selected a committee to formally notify you of its action and that committee conferred upon me the distinguished honor of advising you of your nomination as the candidate of the national silver party for the office of president of the United States.

"We are met, therefore, at this time and place for the purpose of performing the pleasant duty imposed upon us by the convention. I therefore, in obedience to the wishes of the committee and of the convention, hereby formally notify you that you have been nominated by the national silver party as its candidate for president, and request that you accept that nomination in the same spirit in which it has been tendered you. You are now the chosen commander of a grand army, composed of three grand divisions, which is now mobilizing for the purpose of fighting in behalf of humanity on November 3, 1896, the most important political battle of this or of any other age a battle which is to determine whether this nation shall be a province of Great Britain and be governed and controlled, as that nation is, by the money barons of Europe, or whether it shall be, as the fathers intended it to be, a free and independent and sovereign nation. The people who constitute that grand army, inspired as they are by the noblest sentiments of patriotism, under your leadership will, there can be no doubt, on that day lift high their banners in triumph over the defeated allied hosts of plutocracy."

Mr. Bryan's Reply.

Mr. Groot was frequently applauded. As he took his seat Mr. Bryan rose to reply, and there was a most enthusiastic scene, lasting for several minutes. Quiet being restored, Mr. Bryan replied as follows:

"Mr. Chairman, Chairman of the notification Committee, and to the members of that Committee: I beg to reply at this time without the formality of a letter. The platform adopted by the silver convention contains but one plank, and that plank, the plank upon the money question, or upon the silver question, is identical in substance with the silver plank of the Chicago platform. As I have already discussed at length that plank, and it will not be necessary to enter into any extended discussion at this time, I beg to assure the committee that I accept the nomination so generously tendered by them on behalf of the silver party, in the spirit in which that nomination was tendered.

Wouldn't Vote for a Gold Standard Man.

"I can appreciate the feeling which animated those who assembled in that convention. I can appreciate the hesitation in which those who assembled there turned their backs upon the party with which they had been associated. I know something of the strength of parties, and because I was in a position where I looked forward to a possibility of like action on my part, I can appreciate the depths of a conviction that led them to place the interests of their country above the welfare of their party. More than a year ago, when we were engaged in the struggle to bring the democratic party to an indorsement of free coinage, the question was put to me whether, in case of failure, I would support the democratic nominee if he were on a gold standard platform. I never believed that such action was probable in the democratic party, but when those who questioned me were not content with probabilities, but asked again whether in the case of that event I would support the nominee, I said, as you will remember, that under no circumstances would my vote be given to the man who would in the executive office use his influence to fasten the gold standard upon the American people. My convictions upon this subject are not shallow convictions. I may be in error, my friends. None of us can claim infallibility. But we have the experience of history to guide us, and our judgment and our consciences, and I stand where the members of that silver convention stood. I would rather have the approval of my conscience than the applause of the entire earth.

A Conspiracy Against the Race.

"I may be in error, but I believe that the gold standard is a conspiracy against the human race. I would no sooner join the ranks of those whose purpose it is to fasten that upon the American people than to enlist in an army that was marching to attack my home and kill my family. I can say, therefore, that I can appreciate the spirit which animated those who have just tendered me this second nomination, and I can, therefore, accept it in the spirit in which they present it. And I pledge them that if elected they shall never have cause for accusing me of being false to that trust.

"My friends, when I declared that I would not support a gold standard candidate I was standing upon the history of the democratic party. I was defending its principles, as well as the interests of the country at large, and when these republicans who assembled in the silver convention at St. Louis refused to worship the gold image which their party had set up they were defending the history of the republican party. The republican platform of 1888 denounces the democratic administration for having attempted to degrade silver. And in 1891, on the 12th day of February, in Memorial hall at Toledo, O., on the Lincoln day banquet the present candidate for president upon the republican ticket used the words which I shall now read to you. I have found these words published in a Toledo paper, and they have been published so long without correction that we may safely assume that he was correctly reported. If he shall deny the correctness of this report I shall hasten to do him justice in retracting these words. These are the words which he is said to have used:

Quotes Mr. McKinley.

"'During all of Grover Cleveland's years at the head of the government he was dishonoring one of our precious metals, one of our own great products, discrediting silver and enhancing the price of gold. He endeavored even before his inauguration to office to stop the coinage of silver dollars, and afterwards and to the end of his administration, persistently used his power to that end. He was determined to contract the circulating medium and demonetize one of the coins of commerce, limit the volume of money among the people, make money scarce and, therefore, dear. He would have increased the value of money and diminished the value of everything else—money, the master; everything else the servant.'

"Following these same lines, the republican convention in 1892 declared at Minneapolis that the American people, from tradition and interest, were in favor of bimetallism.

"That is the language in 1892—that the American people, from tradition and interest, are for bimetallism. Have traditions changed in four years? Have interests changed in four years? No, my friends, and yet, forgetting the platform of 1880, forgetting the denunciation uttered by their distinguished leader in 1891, forgetting the platform of 1892, the republican party, in convention assembled, declared that the American people must forego the advantages of the bimetallic system, which tradition and interest indorsed, until foreign nations should bring these advantages to them.

Reads from Senator Sherman.

"It is not strange that men who had looked for bimetallism in the republican party should have given up hope and turned elsewhere for relief. These republicans cannot be criticised for leaving the republican party. They have done what every American citizen has a right to do. They have done better than our democratic advocates of the gold standard have done, because these republicans when they left the party joined with those who had a chance to succeed, while our democratic advocates of the gold standard sought to secure the election of a republican candidate by nominating a democratic candidate. I intend to show you that the action of the republicans is defended by experience and example. Let me carry you back to the period just preceding the war. If you will turn to a book recently published, entitled "John Sherman's Recollections," you will find on page 112 of the first volume, a portion of a speech which he delivered in congress in 1856. Let me read this extract:

"'I am willing to stand by the compromise of 1820 and 1850; but when our whig brethren of the south allow this administration to lead them off from their principles; when they abandon the position which Henry Clay would have taken, forget his name and achievements and decline any longer to carry his banner, they lose all their claims on me. And I say now, that until this wrong is righted, until Kansas is admitted as a free state, I cannot act in party association with them.'

"There was the distinguished senator from Ohio asserting to the people of this country upon the floor of congress that he was willing to accept compromise after compromise, but that the time had at last come when he could go with them no longer; that until certain things were accomplished he could not act with them. The situation to-day is but a repetition of history. Compromise after compromise has been submitted to by these silver republicans in the hope that the party of their choice and love would at last bring to the people the relief which they desired. But the republican party, like that party in 1856, has been led off by another administration until it has deserted its traditions and its platform, and these republicans have a right to say to their republican associates: 'We will go with you no longer until this nation is redeemed.'

No Pledge Is Asked.

"We do not ask those who present this nomination to pledge their future services to the democratic party. The same intelligence which directs them to-day in the discharge of this duty will be with them four years from now to direct them then in the discharge of the duties that will then arise. The same patriotism that leads them to-day in what they do will be with them four years from now to guide and direct them. We trust them now, we shall trust them then. The democratic party has proven itself worthy of their confidence to-day and it receives their support. If four years from now it proves itself unworthy of their confidence it should not then have their support.

"The chairman of the notification committee has told you that we have to meet to-day a great money trust. He is right. We are confronted to-day by the most gigantic trust that has ever been formed among men. Talk about trusts in various articles which we produce. My friends, all these trusts together fall into insignificance when compared with the money trust, which has its hands upon our country. Place the control of the standard money of the world in the hands of a few great financiers and times will be good for them, no matter what may overtake the rest of mankind. I believe that John G. Carlisle did not exaggerate the truth when he said: 'The consummation of this scheme means more of misery to the human race than all the wars, pestilences and famines that ever occurred in the history of the world.' Who does not stand appalled before misery like that? Among you who is willing to be in a conspiracy that has for its object the consummation of that scheme? It is against the consummation of this scheme so eloquently and forcibly described that the silver republicans have arisen in protest. I respect the convictions which have led them. I thank you for the support which they have tendered, and all that I can promise is that I shall, to the best of my ability, endeavor to prove worthy of their confidence."

Accepts for Mr. Sewall.

After Mr. Bryan concluded, Mr. Harrington, of the notification committee, notified him of Mr. Sewall's nomination and the presidential candidate made a brief response, accepting in behalf of his running mate.

Verona.

After carefully reading with an unprejudiced mind the arguments on both sides of the money question, we have come to the conclusion that free silver is undoubtedly what we need. It is but natural that one should feel a pride in adhering to party, but when such an all-important question as this confronts us, we are in duty bound to cast aside all party affiliation and cling to principle. We know of persons in our precinct who have voted the Republican ticket all their lives, but are candid enough to admit that they are much inclined toward free silver. We also know of stanch Democrats who favor gold, but are willing and are endeavoring to be converted.

Therefore, we believe that, in order to swell our ranks and keep sound in the faith we who are on the side of right, a Free Silver Club should be organized immediately in every town, village and hamlet in Boone county. Good speakers are ready and willing to at a very small expense. A few such clubs have already been organized and are doing much good. Verona intends to fall in line at once. Who will be next?

A Bryan free silver club will be organized here Wednesday, Sept. 16th at 7:30 o'clock p. m. It is hoped that every voter of this town and community will be present.

Big Bone.

Last Saturday was red letter day at Big Bone Springs. The object of the meeting was to hear good money talk and organize a Bryan and Sewall free silver and gold club, and to say it was a success in every particular is putting it mildly. There were present Mark Gray, of Williamstown; Geo. Keeney and Prosecuting atty. Davis, of Rising Sun, Ind, and "the 2 Bobs," Wood and Brown, of Warsaw. They all spoke upon the main issue of the day in a lucid and telling style, which was greatly enjoyed by the large audience present.

After the speaking a paper was circulated and 150 names were signed as members of the Bryan and Sewall free silver and gold club. Many of the Democratic precinct committeemen of the county were present and they all vouched this was the best precinct meeting that would be held in the county, and spoke of our enthusiasm in the cause in terms of flattering appreciation, and hoping the entire county and State may feel and act likewise and insure an overwhelming majority for the people's cause and ticket November the 3rd, 1896. We are striving, and we hope with pardonable pride, to prove to the Boltocrats of the present plutocratic administration that we still live, breathe and hold our citizenship in the banner Democratic county of "old Kentucky."

From Camp Robinson they marched to Crittenden to Williamstown, thence to Falmouth after which they will cross the country to Independence and from there back to Ft. Thomas. They will be out about five days on the march.

Florence

Sunday night our town was visited by a well known reporter who was supposed to have engineered the last hanging affair at Burlington. He was accompanied by a well known saloon keeper of Cincinnati. They made some anxious inquiries as to when the mob was going to start to Burlington to hang the prisoner now in jail for killing his brother-in-law. Nobody here seemed to know anything about a mob and so informed them. The visitors then said they had been informed in the city that there would be a mob out here to do some lynching. Several young men who came in to church, hearing the rumor, were driving around looking for the mob. After waiting until about 12 o'clock, and the mob not materializing, the party broke up, the reporter and his friend wending their way back to the city.

This matter has been carried far enough, and it is to be hoped that when the jailer of this county is next asked to give up his keys by a mob leader he will have grit enough to give them the contents of a double-barrel shot-gun, and thus earn the praise of every lover of law and order in the county.

Boone county is supposed by many persons at a distance to be inhabited by a race of half civilized cannibals, who live on human blood and have no respect for the law; and all because the low hummer element of Cincinnati have been permitted to come here and take prisoners out and string them up without judge or jury. "Forewarned is forearmed," and we hope the county officers located at Burlington will be prepared to give this mob a warm reception.

Several years ago Judge Draine told me that the wealth of Boone county was more evenly distributed; that there was less crime, pauperism and vice, and less litigation for the number of inhabitants and wealth therein than that of any other place of like area, number and wealth on the face of the globe, and consequently there was more general happiness than other places of equal size.

If these statements are true what a shame and disgrace for us to allow a few newspaper reporters who are seeking money and notoriety to lead a mob of low-lived cut-throats to sully the fame of the county. We will receive the applause of the country if we welcome this mob with bloody hands to inhospitable graves.

Aunt Milly Osborn, an aged colored woman, died suddenly Saturday evening. She came down to Mr. Rouse's store about six o'clock and made a small purchase, and started back home. When she arrived at Mrs. Julia Clore's she went into the yard and around to the side porch, where she sat down, and was discovered in a few minutes by Dr. Furnish, who saw at once that she was dying.

Some two weeks ago Martin L. Murphy, a negro school teacher of Franklin county, published a card in a local paper announcing himself for Bryan and free silver, and resigned as Secretary of a McKinley club. Since then he has been quietly at work among the voters of his race for Bryan. Last Saturday night he was taken out in the suburbs of Frankfort, by four other negroes, and severely beaten. He swore out warrants for two negroes, charging them with white-capping. Murphey says he will not be bulldozed, and will continue to make free silver speeches.

About one o'clock last Sunday night Mrs. Ezra Wilhoit, who lives at the D. T. Buffington place on the pike just above Florence, heard a baby crying. She awoke her husband, and told him what she had heard. Mr. Wilhoit then called to Ollie Rouse, who occupies the residenc with him, and they went out into the yard, and listened for some time, but heard nothing. They returned to bed, satisfied that Mrs. Wilhoit had only imagined that she heard the cries of a child. They went to sleep, and it was only a short time until Mrs. Wilhoit heard the crying again, when she again awoke the men, and they went out into the yard a second time, when they heard the child crying near the road. They went to the spot from whence the noise proceeded, and there found a boy baby about one month old, lying in a large willow basket. They took the waif in and found it poorly clad, and placed in the basket in a very uncomfortable position. The party or parties who put the child in the yard came in a buggy, but there is no clue to their identity.

The Chicago platform was endorsed and the following committees appointed: on by laws, G. M. Allen, W. W. Grimsley, M. E. Hance. On sollicitation, R. L. Huey, B. B. Aliphin, M. C. Carroll and James Taylor.

H. W. ADAMS, Secretary.

About dark Monday an aged stranger, carrying a large satchel, arrived in town and stopped at the Boone House. About 6:30 o'clock a crowd was sitting on the corner at Blyth & Clutterbuck's store discussing free silver and base ball, when the aboved mentioned gentleman cast his hat on the ground near them, and taking his position in the street, said, "I am going to preach the gospel here to night." He then went through the recognized opening exercises at church, by which time quite a crowd had collected, after which he preached for about 45 minutes, closing in regular form, when he shook hands with quite a number of the audience, and took up a small collection. He gave his name as James Robinson, and says that he has been called by the Lord to preach the gospel, and is traveling from town to town for that purpose; that when he goes home the Lord afflicts him until he starts out on another preaching tour, when his health is again restored.

Bryan received a tremendous ovation all along the line in Kentucky.

The Republican majority in Main, Monday, will be about 50,000.

Base Ball.

The Burlington ball team visited Aurora, Sunday, where they were defeated by the Auroras 11 to 4. The boys never visited a place where they received nicer treatment. The Auroras are a strong team, and a set of gentlemen on the diamond. Harry Bohn and Harry Smith played an excellent game with the Burlingtons, for which they express their lasting obligations, and will be glad to extend to them a like favor at any time. The feature of the game was Maxwell's work in left field —one fly catch being phenomenal.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Some Pointed Questions for Maj. McKinley to Answer.

The following letter from ex-Congressman H. F. Bartine, of Nevada written under date of September 4, to Maj. McKinley, is just made public. What the nominee for presidential honors on the republican ticket will say to it remains to be seen:

Hon. William McKinley, Canton, O.—Dear Sir: You are the presidential candidate of the republican party upon a platform unequivocally committing you to the policy of maintaining the gold standard in this country until bimetallism can be secured by international agreement.

As neither you nor the party you represent offers a suggestion upon which we can ground a hope of obtaining such an agreement, the financial plank of the platform upon which you stand must be regarded as a declaration in favor of permanently adhering to the present gold system.

In your letter of acceptance you treat the money question as the foremost issue, and discuss it at considerable length, giving to the present monetary policy of the republican party your unqualified indorsement.

It is scarcely necessary for me to remind you that by such course you have assumed a position quite different from the one you occupied but a comparatively short time ago.

That very able men may and do honestly change their opinions upon questions of wisdom and expediency, no fair-minded person will deny. That when they so change their opinions, it is both their privilege and their duty to shape their actions accordingly, is beyond all controversy.

But where the subject involves moral considerations, where it is simply a question of right and wrong, of honesty and dishonesty, the same principle cannot apply and the same latitude of change cannot be allowed.

It is this distinction that has prompted me to address you through the medium of an open letter.

No one can read your published acceptance without being impressed that you regard the maintaining of the gold standard not merely as a wise and judicious policy, but as absolutely essential to the preservation of our "financial honor."

You assert that the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one would at once lead to the debasement of our currency to the level of a "53 cent dollar, impairing the obligation of existing contracts," and bringing a long train of terrible calamities in its wake. Throughout your entire discussion of the question the general idea is that parity with gold is the infallible test of honest money, and that any currency cheaper than gold at its present appreciated value is, of necessity, dishonest.

You are certainly aware that the campaign committee of the republican party is literally flooding the country with books, papers and pamphlets, in which it is broadly declared that the financial issue as now made is simply a question of "honest money" vs. "dishonest money." There is no reason to doubt that you are in perfect and harmonious accord with your committee. Hence the conclusion comes irresistibly that you regard the advocates of unrestricted silver coinage as being deficient in personal integrity, and as seeking to establish a monetary policy that will dishonor the American name.

Being one of those whose personal integrity is thus impugned, I make free to remind you that in the year 1878, as a member of the house of representatives, you voted for the famous "Bland bill," providing for the unrestricted coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one. At that time the commercial value of the bullion which you voted to coin into a dollar was a little more than 90 cents. It had been much lower, but at the time your vote was cast it had risen considerably, as a result of political agitation and prospective free coinage. You will also remember, I am sure, that the Bland bill was at the time denounced as "repudiation" and "rank dishonesty" by many of the prominent financiers who are now giving you their earnest support.

In view of these facts, would you regard it as impertinent for me to request a public statement of your opinion as to whether or not the Bland bill was a "dishonest" measure, calculated to "debase" our currency and "dishonor" the country?

If you answer in the affirmative, in justice to yourself, you should inform the country why you voted for it. If your answer be in the negative, it should be supplemented of an explanation of how an act that was honest in 1878 can be dishonest in 1896.

It is true the vote in question was cast 18 years ago, but even then you were old enough to know the difference between right and wrong. It is also true that silver was not at that time so far below the gold level as it is now, but in this connection you will allow me to suggest that there is no difference whatever in principle, nor even in degree, so far as the question of honesty is concerned. Petty larceny involves the same moral obligation as grand larceny. If it is dishonest to coin 53 cents' worth of silver into a dollar, it is equally dishonest to coin 93 cents' worth into a dollar.

But neither of these explanations are available, because of other highly significant circumstances in your congressional career.

You have probably not forgotten that you were a member of the Fifty-first congress and a candidate for the speakership of the house. I am very certain that the republican members of that body from the far west have not forgotten how anxious you were for their support, and how earnestly you reminded them that you had voted for free silver nearly 12 years before. I was one of those western members.

At that time (1889), when silver bullion had fallen to less than 75 cents on the dollar in gold, you certainly never gave any token that in your opinion a law providing for the free coinage of that metal would involve "financial dishonor."

All through the long session of the Fifty-first congress you distinctly recognized the fact that the demonetization of silver was wrong, that the Bland-Allison law was too narrow in its scope, and that something further must be done toward silver restoration. Your utterances at the time plainly showed that you were prepared to go any length in that direction, if the republicans in congress would only keep you company.

You, of course, remember that there was a very earnest demand throughout the country for silver legislation, and that there was a strong silver sentiment in the house of representatives; that the republican side was itself deeply tinctured with the "free silver" idea, and that nearly every member on that side conceded that some legislation must be had. You will also recall the circumstance that the republicans in caucus appointed a committee of 15, to endeavor to frame a bill upon which republicans could unite.

That committee consisted of the eight republican members of the coinage committee, of whom I was one, and seven leading republicans of the house, not members of the coinage committee, of whom you were one. So that you and I were, for the time being, colleagues in the committee.

You will not hesitate to admit that you were one of the most active members of the committee, and that none were more earnest than you in the effort to formulate a measure which all republicans, including those who were strongly for free silver, might support.

You may not remember all that you said during the debate in that committee, and neither do I. But there is one statement made by you that I have never for a moment forgotten. In emphasizing the necessity of passing a "silver bill," in substance you said: "We must pass a silver bill—the country demands it; but we must pass it as a party measure. I am prepared to support any bill that we can unite upon. I can accept free coinage, or the 'Windom bill,' or anything else upon which we can agree, but it is imperative that we have a silver bill."

I grant that you showed a preference for some measure other than free coinage, and that after some vacillation you threw your vote in favor of what was called the "Windom bill." I grant further that you may have expressed your willingness to vote for free coinage merely for effect, knowing that the condition laid down was an impossible one, and that the republicans would never agree upon such a measure. Still the fact is that you said it, and there was no inconsistency between that language and your previous record. If a majority of the republicans had declared in favor of a free coinage bill, I have no doubt that you would have kept your word and voted for it. Therefore I ask you the further question: Did you in 1890 regard the free coinage of silver as meaning "financial dishonor," and consequently dishonesty in those who advocated that policy? If not, the country will no doubt be greatly interested in reading your elucidation of the ethical difference between free coinage in 1890 and free coinage in 1896.

Finally, I deem it proper to remind you that up to the very day of your nomination you were not the choice of the extreme gold standard men. They looked upon your past financial record with unqualified disfavor, and the somewhat uncertain language of the Ohio platform, which was supposed to reflect your position, filled them with distrust.

In the end, however, you were nominated upon a gold standard platform, and these same men are now your enthusiastic supporters.

You have suddenly become as enthusiastic as they in your devotion to the gold standard, which you never failed to attack in congress when the opportunity presented itself; for even the "Windom bill" and the "Sherman law," both of which received your vote, recognized the fact that the gold standard was wrong.

Not only this, but you seem to have also apparently abandoned the opinions of a lifetime on a question of morals and reached the conclusion that the free coinage of silver would be both unwise and dishonest. This change in your attitude is so extraordinary and so sudden that, feeling as I do the deepest interest in every phase of the silver question, I address you in this public manner, hoping that you may find it not incompatible with the dignity of your present position to furnish in the same public manner an explanation that will be satisfactory to both your friends and your opponents. Very respectfully yours,

H. F. BARTINE.

THE M'KINLEY LETTER.

A Document Composed of Empty Phrases.

"Words, words, words." It is not a letter that McKinley inflicts upon us; it is a volume. And in that volume there is little to interest, less to convince. No one doubts that the major means well. The trouble has been that no one knew what he meant. And now that he attempts to tell us, we are, with one exception, still in the dark. That exception, however, is plain. He is a gold monometallist. But even his declaration for gold lacks the true ring of that noble metal. We fear the major is still in doubt as to what he really means. Perchance the Hanna instructions have not been specific, or there is progressing, somewhere behind the Napoleonic brow, a fearful fight. May be the convictions the major thought he held years ago are struggling with those he is bid to hold to-day. However that may be, he has declared himself for gold. On that basis he must stand or fall.

But for all the rest, the letter may as well have remained unwritten. It is a dreary document, a tedious treatise which might with advantage be cut to half a column. Who can wonder at this? A subject to warrant length in treatment must be of interest. It must have vital meaning to the people, or the people will not read it. And in these plutocratic documents they find only reiteration of high-sounding but meaningless phrases. Sophistry too long strung out is soporific.—Tammany Times.

SCENTING DEFEAT.

McKinley Will Meet the Fate of James G. Blaine.

In presidential politics, as in chess, it is a sign of weakness to move the king. On the chess board the monarch is supposed to be vigilantly guarded by his officers and his soldiers, and when he takes the field in person his cause is desperate.

So it is in politics. The presidential nominee of a great party is presumably so well known, both as to his opinions and his personality, that the voters are able to pass upon his candidacy without hearing him from the platform during the campaign. His position is, or should be, one of dignified retirement, his lieutenants and political sponsors doing the fighting.

He fears that many states in the west and northwest are unfavorably disposed toward him, and, in the hope of stemming the tide of disaffection, he will "swing around the circle," repeating the one dreary speech that has served him for 20 years and dodging the currency question with an agility due to long practice.

Nothing could show more clearly the uneasiness in the protective junta and nothing could more clearly presage defeat for the apostle of that cause. A greater man than Maj. McKinley took the stump to advocate his own candidacy, and not even his magnetism saved him from defeat and disaster.

What befell James G. Blaine will happen to William McKinley. Whatever the outcome of the currency issue, protection's cause is lost.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Was it to be imagined that the eastern manufacturers and the eastern moneyed men should place their barrels at the disposal of Mark Hana for the benefit of Mr. McKinley without expecting anything in return? No reasonable man could believe in such extraordinary generosity in the business world. These men gave of their substance because they believed their giving would be profitable. They looked upon their contribution to the McKinley campaign as an investment which should bring them a good interest. Millions have been spent on the campaign so far. For the return of these millions the people will be taxed, should the republican party be returned to power. McKinley is a mortgaged candidate.—St. Louis Republic.

——It is now apparent that the g. o. p. elephant will be stabled in the white house next year.—Kansas City Times.

PROSPERITY AND USURY.

Ground of the Struggle Between the Two Parties.

The Public Ledger quotes Mr. McKinley as follows: "No matter what kind of money we have, we cannot get it unless we have work. Whether it is poor money or whether it is good money, whether it is gold or whether it is silver, we cannot get one dollar of it unless we have employment for our hands and heads."

How about issuing watered stock by the ton in Wall street?

How about the "unearned increment," as it is called, of the Astor real estate in the city of New York?

How about the railway that takes advantage of its monopoly to gouge the public out of fares ten times as high as other roads charge for the same service?

How about the stock and the produce gamblers who get a corner on wheat or something else, and sweat their victims out of untold millions?

Possibly Mr. McKinley considers all these and a thousand other ways of plundering the public—all of which, by the way, should rightly go to the producers who make such values possible—as a reward for the "employment of their heads."

But aside from Mr. McKinley's loose way of talking, the Ledger printed it to offset Mr. Bryan's attitude, that free silver will help the American workman. The Ledger adds that if Mr. Bryan were correct, there would be no opposition from intelligent people to "substituting the silver standard for the gold standard."

See right here how hard it is for the Public Ledger to confine itself to the truth. Neither the democratic platform nor Mr. Bryan has ever said a word about such a substitution, and the Ledger knows such to be the fact; but it would falsify to seemingly make out a stronger case for itself than it has.

The Ledger then says that neither Mr. Bryan nor his supporters have produced a tittle of evidence to prove the truth of the quoted position, that free silver will help the American workman. That is false. But without going into history, the Item will again explain a fraction of the facts showing Mr. Bryan to be perfectly correct.

Free silver increases employment. It enables the people to get work. It stops this closing down of mills. It stops these failures daily taking place. It causes a rising market, which is the chief stimulus to the extension of new and old enterprises. It tends in the direction of booming business of all kinds, for promoters see in it a chance to get a reward for enterprise. It tends to increase wages. It tends to give much more employment to all classes of hands. It promotes construction of all kinds. It gives the farmer fair returns for his labor. It enables him to live. It increases the value of farm property. It increases the security of the mortgages upon it. It enables the worker to save something from his wages. It increases the earnings of railways. It gives railways far more business. It stops railway failures when failures are the result of insufficient earnings. It increases the sales of manufacturers. It increases the sales of the wholesaler. It increases the sales of the retailers in all lines. Consequently all these must employ more help, can afford to pay higher wages. Even the banks can earn greater dividends, because of the increase of general trade. Thus luxuries can be bought, and the trade dependent upon luxuries be stimulated.

All this and much more in the same direction is the result of an increase of the volume of money now circulating in the channels of trade. Also, in preventing a good many corners in the money market such as the present. Also, in the stoppage of this 100 per cent. bounty business in silver-basis countries, which, if continued, will absolutely close nearly all the manufactories in the United States.

Free silver means protection to American industry. Mr. McKinley and the Public Ledger in opposing it, oppose the republican principle of protection; thus they stultify themselves by pretending to support the very opposite of what they actually do support.

If free silver will not increase the money volume sufficiently, then without doubt Mr. Bryan will advocate a form of money in addition thereto, that will afford this nation a proper increase. The people, under the auspices of usurers which Mr. McKinley and the Ledger are sustaining, have starved long enough.—Philadelphia Item.

FOR M'KINLEY TO STUDY.

An Example of the Workings of the Trusts Tariff.

Mr. McKinley in his letter of acceptance declared the Wilson law to be a failure, among other reasons, because its duties do not cover the difference in the labor cost between this country and Europe. We have already shown that in the great industries of pig iron, steel rails and cotton cloth the existing duties are more than the entire labor cost. Here is another example:

The 58 stockholders of the window glass trust have been protected by a duty on foreign imports:

In 1860, revenue tariff	15 per cent
In 1861, war tariff	80 per cent
In 1884, republican commission tariff	120 per cent
In 1890, McKinley tariff	132 per cent
In 1896, Wilson tariff	101 per cent

The price per half box (18x24) in this country was $3.60 in 1860 and $3.13 in 1890. The trust kept the price steady. The foreign price of our imports was in 1890 per half box $1.80, and we imported 19,097,057 pounds, for which we paid:

The foreign cost	$343,550
The custom house duty	452.605

So that to the original cost of the half box of 1890 there should be added a fine of $2.35, making a cost to land of $4.15, so that the trust could market all it made at $3.13. It would have sold it all at $4.12 but for a trust quarrel.

A duty of ten per cent. more than covers the labor cost on a melting:

United States.		Belgium.
Raw material	$47.53	Raw material	$48 44
Labor cost	19.96	Labor cost	14.53
		Add 10 per cent.	6.29
Total	$67.49	Total	$69.26

The additional $76.82 was the "fat" of the trust under the McKinley bill. This "fat" has been reduced to $60.74 by the Wilson bill. Does Mr. McKinley really think that this bounty should be increased? He had the people's opinion on it in 1890 and again in 1892.—N. Y. World.

A FEW REALLY PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

VICEROY LI HUNG CHANG TO VICEROY HANNA:

How rich are you?

Did you make any of your money reducing workingmen's wages?

If the free coinage of silver would, as you say, tend to reduce the wages of the workingmen, why are you opposed to it?

* * *

Who gives you all the money you are spending now?

What do you promise in return for it?

* * *

How do you make Mr. McKinley do what you tell him?

Will he keep on doing it when he is president?

How did you get hold of him first?

Do you consider that those notes are a good investment?

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

TELLER TALKS.

The Colorado Senator Stands Up for Bimetallism.

Senator Henry M. Teller, of Colorado, spoke at Morrison, Ill., Monday, September 7, the following being a comprehensive summary of his speech:

"I believe the question the American people are called upon now to settle is of more importance to them than any other question that has ever been submitted to Americans for their consideration and determination. I do not forget. I have not overlooked that in this audience there are a great many men who carried a musket and marched under the flag to maintain the integrity of the American republic, and braved everything that our flag might float over a united, and not a disrupted country. But I do not believe, however much there was at stake, I do not believe so much human suffering and so much woe could have come to the American people if we had been divided and there had been two republics established on this continent instead of one, as will come to us if this great question now submitted to you shall be wrongly decided, and we shall enter upon a monetary system that will probably last for all time, or at least there is danger that it may, that is absolutely unjust and threatening, in my judgment, not only the prosperity of the people, but the perpetuity of free government here, and free government in all other countries, because it must be true that if this great republic should fail to discharge the duties incumbent on a republic, and should go down in disaster and distress, there would be no further effort made among men for the uplifting and the sustaining of humanity. There would be, in my judgment, with our destruction, the end of free government throughout the world.

"I believe that this question, then, involves the interest of my American citizenship; that it involves the interest of all American people, and of all the people under the sun. Could there be a greater question submitted to any people than that? And could there be any other people in the world better qualified and better equipped to settle this great question than the American people? I may be mistaken; the question may not be as great as I think it is. I may have overstated it and overestimated it, but all admit that it is a great question

Argument and Reason to Determine.

"Let me say here, before I begin my argument, that it is a question not to be determined by personal attacks upon those who advocate it: not by slurs, not by slander, not by abuse. The American people are too great and too wise and too good to settle an important question like this upon such points as I have named. We must settle down in this campaign to argument and reason.

"Why in the name of heaven should I come here to talk to you unless I have an interest in your welfare and in the welfare of the American people? What interest have I in this country that you have not got? Somebody—some newspaper may tell you that I am an agent of the great silver-producing people of this country; that I am directly and personally interested in the production of silver. Let me say here, that ordinarily I would not say anything of myself, or make any reference to myself, but some of you have been my neighbors; many of you knew me more than a generation ago. You knew me in my youth and in my early professional life. I have seen a number of my old acquaintances here to-day. I believe that in the few years that I have lived in your community I established something of a character for decency and truth. I have endeavored in all my life, public and private, to deserve the commendation of my fellow-citizens, because I am honest and truthful, and outspoken in my opinions concerning public matters, and, let me say, I have no more interest in this question than you have. [Cheers.]

Has Investments in Gold Mines.

"I never mined an ounce of silver in my life; I am not a silver miner; I own no silver property. [Renewed cheering.] Almost all my fortune, be it little or great, is involved and invested in gold mining in my state. [Cheers.] I have been connected with gold mining for nearly 35 years—yes, quite 35 years; and if I had any personal interest it would be in the appreciation of gold. Now, I have said enough on that question, and that is all I want to say personally of myself.

Great Distress in the Country.

"I believe I need spend no time discussing the question that the financial condition of this country is not good. I believe that you take notice of the fact that in every part of this land of ours after 31 years of absolute peace, with no foreign complications, and with no domestic difficulties, we are in greater distress than we have ever been in the history of this land; and there are more idle men, more houseless and homeless men—more men traversing the country and begging for opportunities for labor than at any other time in our history. Is it not a fact? Is it not true that this condition existing here exists in every country under the sun that has attempted to maintain the gold standard? Cheers.]

"I am ging to talk to you later about the remedy, but I want to say before I get to it, that we propose nothing new; we propose no experiment; we propose no untried system. It is our opponents who propose a system of finance that had only the support, up to 1871, of two nations, and only two—one the great creditor nation of the world, Great Britain, and the other the poverty-stricken and despised country, Portugal. Up to 1871 those two countries were the only gold-standard countries under the sun. That Great Britain did not feel the effects of the gold standard on her commerce and trade arose from the fact that all the rest of the world save Portugal was either using the silver standard or the double standard, using both silver and gold.

As to an Honest Dollar.

"Let me say a word about the honest dollar. The friends of silver ask for no dishonest dollar. [Great applause.] We ask for no cheap dollar, in the sense that our detractors, our slanderers, claim. We say the American dollar as now constituted has too high purchasing power and will purchase too much of the productions of man and too much of his labor. The farmer has to sell too much of his products to pay his debts, and we ask for a dollar that shall not be a rising dollar. We do not want a dollar that buys more to-day than it bought last year, but a dollar that shall maintain the equity of contracts between men and shall buy no more to-day than it bought yesterday. [Great applause.]

"Have you a dollar to-day with the same purchasing power that it had 20 years ago? Everywhere in the world gold, in bullion or coin, will buy on an average 100 per cent more than it would then. An ounce of gold will coin into no more money, but that ounce will buy twice as much, because there is a scarcity of gold, and so many people throughout the world are bidding for gold. You who have got wheat and pork to sell are obliged to put up twice as much as you used to put up to get gold. We say that a dollar that keeps growing bigger without putting any more in it is the dishonest dollar. [Great applause.]

"Now, can you change a dollar? Can you make any difference in them? In 1853 we found that we had too much gold in our ten and twenty-dollar gold pieces. What did we do then? We wanted to fix the relation between gold and silver in this country. We had the ratio wrong. We had 371¼ grains of pure silver in a silver dollar; we had 27 grains of pure gold in a gold dollar. Did we put more silver in the silver dollar? That is the modern method. They say 'put more silver in your dollar.' [Laughter.] But we did not do that. On the contrary these fathers of ours who knew as much as their children do [laughter] said there is too much gold in the dollar, and they took 12 grains out of the double eagle and a portion out of the single eagles. They took out of every American dollar practically six cents, and the American dollar went on discharging its functions with nobody complaining and nobody finding fault. [Applause.]

Will Have to Issue Bonds.

"Somebody asked me to say a word about the bonds. You will have the bond issue under the next administration if Mr. McKinley is elected, and I will turn that over to my republican friends. [Laughter and applause.] But I will say that you and I do not approve of the issue of bonds in the time of peace. They say it is necessary to issue bonds to maintain the gold standard. We have a system by which we agree to give to those who hold the paper money of the United States, known as greenbacks, and treasury notes, gold whenever they want it. When they go to the treasury and present them we give them gold. The law says we shall give them coin, and that means gold or silver. [Applause.] But the treasury department says that it will not give them silver. Why? Because if we do we will get on a silver basis. [Laughter.] Who goes to the treasury department for the gold? Has any citizen of this state gone to the treasury and taken gold for his currency? I will venture that there is not one. It is the exporter of gold, the great bankers of New York city, who go there and demand gold. Mr. Manning, the democratic secretary of the treasury under Mr. Cleveland, went to New York city and said: 'Gentlemen, if you are demanding gold for export you will not get it; I will give you silver.' Then they did not demand it. [Laughter and applause.] But Mr. Foster, the republican secretary, said: 'I will give you gold whenever you want it.' And so they gather up the greenbacks and present them and get the gold and box it up ready for export.

"I believe that this is the most important campaign that has ever been made. I believe it will go down to history as the most astonishing to man. When you consider that all the wealth of this country, all the great trusts, all the great corporations [A voice: "And all the newspapers."] are on one side, I believe that the people, whatever may be their politics, will rise up and have the courage to say that their interests do not lie with that crowd. [Applause.] Do you believe that the Whitneys and the Ickelheimers are lying awake nights and looking after your interests? [Laughter.]

"When I see all these agencies arrayed in one way and when I hear these men who have been fighting honest labor everywhere all at once begin to be serious about the American farmer and the American laborer, I feel just as the Irishman did who, when his employer said: 'I'm afraid that your wages will be cut in two if you vote for Bryan,' replied: 'If you thought it would you would vote for Bryan, too.' [Laughter and applause.]

"After an acquaintance of more than seven years with Mr. Bryan, and a pretty close acquaintance with him, too, I believe in the whole ranks of the democracy there was not a man better equipped and more worthy of nomination than he. [Great cheering and applause.] He who calls him an anarchist is a slanderer of the vilest character. There is no man in the state of Illinois who has a better moral character than Mr. Bryan. [Continued applause.] There is no man in the state of Illinois who has got more intellect, has got more moral courage. [Continued applause.] He may not be an Abraham Lincoln, but he has got all the elements that made Abraham Lincoln great. [Great applause and cheering.] If he is elected president he will see to it that there is fair dealing; there will be no bonds sold at a discount to syndicate friends. [Laughter and applause.] I was delighted with his nomination, and I shall be very delighted with his success."

HANNA'S TRUST BACKERS.

Millionaires Who Have Fattened on the American People.

Shortly after the McKinley tariff law went into effect the Philadelphia Times printed a list of trusts and combines the aggregate capital of which reached the enormous total of $1,507,060,000.

In the number were the Standard Oil trust, with John D. Rockefeller as president, Armour's Dressed Beef combine, Pierpont Morgan's Anthracite Coal combine, the sugar trust and a host of others.

Most of those trusts profited by the iniquitous tariff measure that bears McKinley's name. Under the protective tariff which shut off competition from abroad they crushed out competition at home and forced up prices to the plunder point. The American people were compelled to pay the owners of these trusts millions of dollars because of the monopolistic privileges conferred on them by the McKinley law.

The milk in the cocoanut of Mr. Hanna's millionaire finance committee is found in the enormous wealth filched from the people by these combines through the McKinley law. Mr. Hanna's candidate stands for the renewal of all the opportunities of protective tariff loot and for the continued opportunity to plunder the people through stock jobbing and the manipulation of the money market.

The patriotism that these gentlemen represent is of the pocketbook kind—they love their country for the millions they can squeeze out of it by monopoly legislation.—St. Louis Republic.

Republican Hostility.

The party of McKinley and Hobart, tariff robbery and corporate greed, favors the creation of a national board of arbitration to adjust differences between employers and employes engaged in interstate commerce. This is commendable, but one will search the platform in vain to find one word favorable to the settlement of international disputes by any peaceable method. The whole platform breathes a spirit of hostility toward all the world outside of our own boundaries, except the Hawaiian oligarchy, the Armenians, with whom we have next to no dealings, and the Cuban insurgents. It is full of commercial war, battleships, armaments and latent jingoism. It is eminently worthy of a candidate who is merely a tariff bigot, without enough breadth of view to take in even an American unless he comes asking congress to make him rich at the expense of his fellow citizens.—Chicago Chronicle.

——The notorious history of the preparation of the McKinley tariff bill confirms the impression that he is not a man who would put himself to great personal inconvenience to thwart gentlemen who are endeavoring to secure some little benefit for themselves in the course of national legislation.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

——Previous to his nomination a cathode ray could not have discovered McKinley's greatness. Now the republican papers are filled with accounts of how they are finding it.—St. Louis Republic.

TALMAGE'S WARNING.

Danger to the Youth Lurks in the Thronged Streets of the City,

But Thorougfares of the Time to Come Will Be as Safe as Those of the Heralded Paradise—Churches Not So Crowded as Once They Were.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Zachariah viii: 5 "And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof."

Glimpses of our cities redeemed! Now, boys and girls who play in the streets run such risks that multitudes of them end in ruin. But, in the coming time spoken of, our cities will be so moral that lads and lasses shall be as safe in the public thoroughfares as in the nursery.

Pulpit and printing press for the most part in our day are busy in discussing the condition of the cities at this time, but would it not be healthfully encouraging to all Christian workers and to all who are toiling to make the world better, if we should for a little while look forward to the time when our cities shall be revolutionized by the Gospel of the Son of God, and all the darkness of sin and trouble and crime and suffering shall be gone from the world?

Every man has a pride in the city of his nativity or residence, if it be a city distinguished for any dignity or prowess Cæsar boasted of his native Rome, Virgil of Mantau, Lycurgus of Sparta, Demosthenes of Athens, Archimedes of Syracuse, and Paul of Tarsus. I should have suspicion of base-heartedness in a man who had no especial interest in the city of his birth or residence, no exhilaration at the evidence of its prosperity or its artistic embellishments, or its intellectual advancement.

I have noticed that a man never likes a city where he has not behaved well. People who have had a free ride in the prison van never like the city that furnishes the vehicle. When I find Argos, and Rhodes, and Smyrna trying to prove themselves the birthplace of Homer, I conclude at once that Homer behaved well. He liked them and they liked him. We must not war on laudable city pride, or with the idea of pulling ourselves up at any time, try to pull others down. Boston must continue to point to its Faneuil Hall and to its common, and to its superior educational advantages. Philadelphia must continue to point to its Independence hall, and its mint, and its Girard college. Washington must continue to point to its wondrous capitoline buildings. If I should find a man coming down from any city, having no pride in that city, that city having been the place of his nativity, or now being the place of his residence, I would feel like asking: "What mean thing have you done there? What outrageous thing have you been guilty of that you do not like the place?"

I think we ought—and I take it for granted you are interested in this great work of evangelizing the cities and saving the world—we ought to toil with the sunlight in our faces. We are not fighting in a miserable Bull Run of defeat. We are on our way to final victory. We are not following the rider on the black horse, leading us down to death and darkness and doom, but the rider on the white horse, with the moon under his feet and the stars of Heaven for his tiara. Hail, Conqueror, hail!

I know there are sorrows, and there are sins, and there are sufferings all around us, but as in some bitter, cold winter day, when we are threshing our arms to keep our thumbs from freezing, we think of the warm spring day that will after awhile come; or in the dark, winter night we look up and see the northern lights, the windows of Heaven illuminated by some great victory—just so we look up from the night of suffering and sorrow and wretchedness in our cities, and we see a light streaming through from the other side, and we know we are on the way to morning—more than that, on the way "to a morning without clouds."

I want you to understand, all you who are toiling for Christ, that the castles of sin are all going to be captured. The victory for Christ in these great towns is going to be so complete that not a man on earth, or an angel in Heaven, or a devil in Hell will dispute it. How do I know? I know just as certainly as God lives and that this is holy truth. The old Bible is full of it. If the nation is to be saved, of course all the cities are to be saved. It makes a great difference with you and with me whether we are toiling on toward a defeat, or toiling on toward a victory.

Now, in this municipal elevation of which I speak, I have to remark there will be greater financial prosperity than our cities have ever seen. Some people seem to have a morbid idea of the millennium, and they think when the better time comes to our cities and the world people will give their time up to psalm-singing and the relating of their religious experience, and, as all social life will be purified there will be no hilarity, and, as all business will be purified, there will be no enterprise. There is no ground for such an absurd anticipation. In the time of which I speak, where now one fortune is made there will be one hundred made. We all know business prosperity depends upon confidence between man and man. Now when that time comes of which I speak, and when all double dealing, all dishonesty, and all frauds are gone out of commercial circles, thorough confidence will be established and there will be better business done, and larger fortunes gathered, and mightier success achieved.

The great business disasters of this country have come from the work of godless speculators and infamous stock gamblers. The great foe to business is crime. When the right shall have hurled back the wrong, and shall have purified the commercial code, and shall have thundered down fraudulent establishments, and shall have put into the hands of honest men the keys of business, blessed time for the bargain-makers. I am not talking an abstraction, I am not making a guess. I am telling you God's eternal truth.

In that day of which I speak, taxes will be a mere nothing. Now, our business men are taxed for everything. City taxes, county taxes, state taxes, United States taxes, stamp taxes, license taxes, manufacturing taxes—taxes, taxes, taxes! Our business men have to make a small fortune every year to pay their taxes. What fastens on our great industries this awful load? Crime, individual and official. We have to pay the board of the villains who are incarcerated in our prisons. We have to take care of the orphans of those who plunged into their graves through sensual indulgences. We have to support the municipal governments, which are vast and expensive just in proportion as the criminal proclivities are vast and tremendous. Who support the almshouses and police stations, and all the machinery of municipal government? The taxpayers.

But in the glorious time of which I speak, grievous taxation will all have ceased. There will be no need of supporting criminals. There will be no criminals. Virtue will have taken the place of vice. There will be no orphan asylums, for parents will be able to leave a competency to their children. There will be no voting of large sums of money for some municipal improvement, which moneys, before they get to the improvements, drop into the pockets of those who voted them. No oyer and terminer kept up at vast expense to the people. No empaneling of juries to try theft and arson and murder and slander and blackmail. Better factories, grader architecture, finer equipage, larger fortunes, richer opulence, better churches.

In that better time, also, coming to those cities, Christ's churches will be more numerous, and they will be larger, and they will be more devoted to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and they will accomplish greater influences for good. Now, it is often the case that churches are envious of each other, and denominations collide with each other, and even ministers of Christ sometimes forget the bond of brotherhood. But in the time of which I speak, while there will be just as many differences of opinion as there are now, there will be no acerbity, no hypercriticism, no exclusiveness.

In our great cities the churches are not to-day large enough to hold more than a fourth of the population. The churches that are built, comparatively few of them are fully occupied. The average attendance in the churches of the United States to-day is not 400. Now, in the glorious time of which I speak, there are going to be vast churches, and they are going to be all thronged with worshippers. Oh, what rousing songs they will sing! Oh, what earnest sermons they will preach! Oh, what fervent prayers they will offer!

Now, in our time, what is called a fashionable church is a place where a few people, having attended very carefully to their toilet, come and sit down—they do not want to be crowded; they like a whole seat to themselves—and then, if they have any time left from thinking of their store, and from examining the style of the hat in front of them, they sit and listen to a sermon warranted to hit no man's sins, and listen to music which is rendered by a choir warranted to sing tunes that nobody knows! And then, after an hour and a half of indolent yawning, they go home refreshed. Every man feels better after he has had a sleep!

In many of the churches of Christ in our day the music is simply a mockery. I have not a cultivated ear, nor a cultivated voice, yet no man can do my singing for me. I have nothing to say against artistic music. The $2 or $5 I pay to hear any of the great queens of song is a good investment. But when the good people assemble in religious convocation, and the hymn is read, and the angels of God step from their throne to catch the music on their wings, do not let us drive them away by our indifference. I have preached in churches where vast sums of money were employed to keep up the music, and it was as exquisite as any heard on earth, but I thought at the same time for all matters practical I would prefer the hearty, outbreaking song of a backwoods Methodist camp meeting.

Let one of these starveling fancy songs sung in church get up before the throne of God, how would it seem standing amid the great doxologies of the redeemed? Let the finest operatic air that ever went up from the Church of Christ get many hours the start, it will be caught and passed by the hosanna of the Sabbath-school children. I know a church where the choir did all the singing, save one Christian man, who, through "perseverance of the saints," went right on, and afterward a committee was appointed to wait on him and ask him if he would not please stop singing, as he bothered the choir.

"Let those refuse to sing
Who never knew our God:
But children of the Heavenly King
Should speak their joys abroad."

"Praise ye the Lord; let everything with breath praise the Lord." In the glorious time coming in our cities, and in the world, hosanna will meet hosanna, and hallelujah, hallelujah.

In that time also of which I speak, all the haunts of iniquity and crime and squalor will be cleansed and will be illuminated. How is it to be done? You say, perhaps, by one influence. Perhaps I say by another. I will tell you what is my idea, and I know I am right in it: The Gospel of the Son of God is the only agency that will ever accomplish this.

A gentleman in England had a theory that if the natural forces of wind and tide and sunshine and wave were rightly applied and rightly developed it would make this whole earth a paradise. In a book of great genius, and which rushed from edition to edition, he said: "Fellow-men, I promise to show the means of creating a paradise within ten years, where everything desirable for human life may be had by every man in superabundance without labor and without pay—where the whole face of nature shall be changed into the most beautiful farms and man may live in the most magnificent palaces, in all imaginable refinements of luxury, and in the most delightful gardens—where he may accomplish without labor in one year more than hitherto could be done in thousands of years. From the houses to be built will be afforded the most cultured views that can be fancied. From the galleries, from the roof, and from the turrets, may be seen gardens as far as the eye can see, full of fruit and flowers, arranged in the most beautiful order, with walks, colonnades, aqueducts, canals, ponds, plains, amphitheaters, terraces, fountains, sculptured work, pavilions, gondolas, places of popular amusement, to lure the eye and fancy. All this to be done by urging the water, the wind and the sunshine to their full development."

He goes on and gives plates of the machinery by which this work is to be done, and he says he only needs at the start a company in which the shares shall be $20 each, and a hundred or two hundred thousand shall be raised just to make a specimen community, and then, this being formed, the world will see its practicability, and very soon two or three million dollars can be obtained, and in 10 years the whole earth will be emparadised. The plan is not so preposterous as some I have heard of. But I will take no stock in that company! I do not believe that it will ever be done in that way, by any mechanical force, or by any machinery that the human mind can put into play. It is to be done by the Gospel of the Son of God—the omnipotent machinery of love and grace and pardon and salvation. This is to emparadise the nations. Archimedes destroyed a fleet of ships coming in the harbor. You know how he did it? He lifted a great sun glass, history tells us, and when the first fleet of ships came up the harbor of Syracuse he brought to bear this sun glass, and he focused the sun's rays upon those ships. Now the sails are wings of fire, the masts fall, the vessels sink. Oh, my friends, by the sun glass of the Gospel converging the rays of the sun of Righteousness upon the sins, the wickedness of the world, we will make them blaze and expire!

In the day of which I speak, do you believe there will be any midnight carousal? Will there be any kicking off from the marble steps of the shivering mendicants? Will there be any unwashed, unfed, uncombed children? Will there be any blasphemies in the streets? Will there be any inebriates staggering past? No. No wine stores. No lager beer saloons. No distilleries, where they make the three X's. No bloodshot eye. No bloated cheek. No instruments of ruin and destruction. No fist-pounded forehead. The grandchildren of that woman who goes down the street with a curse, stoned by the boys that follow her, will be the reformers and philanthropists and the Christian men and the honest merchants of our cities.

Then, what municipal governments, too, we will have in all the cities. Some cities are worse than others, but in many of our cities you just walk down by the city halls and look in some of the rooms occupied by politicians, and see to what a sensual, loathsome, ignorant, besotted crew city politics is oftened abandoned. Or they stand around the city hall picking their teeth, waiting for some emoluments of crumbs to fall to their feet, waiting all day long, and waiting all night long.

Who are those wretched women taken up for drunkenness, and carried up to the courts and put in prison of course? What will you do with the grog shops that make them drink? Nothing. Who are those prisoners in jail? One of them stole a pair of shoes. That boy stole a dollar. This girl snatched a purse. All of them crimes damaging society less than $20 or $30. But what will you do with the gambler who last night robbed the young man of a thousand dollars? Nothing. What shall be done with that one who breaks through and destroys the purity of a Christian home, and with an adroitness and perfidy that beats the strategy of hell, flings a shrinking, shrieking soul into ruin. Nothing. What will you do with those who fleece the young man, getting him to purloin large sums of money from his employer,—the young man who came to an officer of my church and told the story, and frantically asked what he should do. Nothing.

Ah! we do well to punish small crimes; but I have sometimes thought it would be better in some of our cities if the officials would only turn out from the jails the petty criminals, the little offenders, ten-dollar desperadoes, and put in their places some of the monsters of iniquity who drive swiftly that honest men have to leap to get out of the way of being run over. Oh, the damnable schemes that professed Christian men will sometimes engage in until God puts the finger of His retribution into the collar of their robe of hypocrisy and rips it clear to the bottom! But all these wrongs will be righted. I expect to live to see the day. I think I hear in the distance the rumbling of the King's chariot. Not always in the minority is the Church of God going to be, or are good men going to be. The streets are going to be filled with regenerated populations. Three hundred and sixty bells rang in Moscow when one prince was married; but, when righteousness and peace kiss each other in all the earth, ten thousand times ten thousand bells shall strike the jubilee. Poverty enriched. Ignorance enlightened. All the cities saved. Is not this a cause worth working in?

THE statistics of the Florida bureau of agriculture show that for the years 1889 and 1893, inclusive, the sugar product was 6,948,170 pounds, worth $477,250.42, besides 253,363 barrels of sirup, worth $2,721,652.47, making a total valuation of $3,198,903 89. The destruction of the Cuban crop this year should greatly stimulate the sugar industry in Florida and other states.

SCIENTIFIC FEEDING.

How People Should Regulate Their Diet to Live Rightly.

Eating must no longer be carried on for the mere pleasure of the palate or because one is hungry, say the professors at Berkeley. They are investigating the subject of human food, and will soon promulgate rules for practical feeding by which people must regulate their diet if they intend to live rightly, or, perhaps, at all.

Hereafter costly dinners, embracing all the delicacies of the season, will have to stand the test of the college men's measuring tubes, and if they do not contain the proper proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat, they will be condemned on the same grounds that tuberculous cows are destroyed by the health officer.

According to the professors' tables, a well-balanced diet contains a proportionate amount of these three ingredients, and they are going to find out whether the people of the coast are eating them as they should.

Protein is better known under the general name of meat, milk or eggs. Carbohydrate sounds more seductive when labeled sugar or starch. Fat is just plain fat, and the learned ones explain that its chief use is to make people go. It is the fuel, and the average man needs a third of a pound of it every day, besides a quarter of a pound of the protein or meat, and a full pound of the starchy or sugary material.

Profs. Hilgard and Jaffa have begun an investigation of what people eat on the Pacific coast. Prof Atwater, at Storrs, Conn., is doing the same thing in the east. Prof. Playfair, in England, and Prof. Voit, in Germany, are making investigations along the same lines. They want to find out what is the best scientific menu in the world, and when the work is done poor people will get the full benefit of scientific economy.

By the tables of the professors thus far computed there is about 20 per cent. of material that is wasted in beef, about 18 per cent. in mutton, about 13 per cent. in eggs, and only a little over 11 per cent. in ham. Chicken, on the other hand, wastes 38 per cent. and turkey 52 per cent., while oysters lose as much as 82 per cent. As between the flounder and the halibut, the former loses 66 per cent. and the latter only 17 per cent.

Everything in the list of eatables has its value, from string beans to sweet potatoes. A man who eats in a single day 13 ounces of steak, 3 ounces of butter, 6 ounces of potatoes and 22 ounces of bread is feeding all right. But the man who eats 4 ounces of oatmeal, 8 ounces of sugar, 8 ounces of chicken, and 2 ounces of rice gets very little muscle-forming food, though it is a common diet, and most people who live on such a bill of fare think themselves well fed. —San Francisco Examiner.

Prof. John Wise, the eminent American aeronaut, who lost his life in making a balloon ascension on September 28, 1879, once viewed a storm from a balloon, which is described as follows:

"The view of a storm cloud from above is one of the most interesting sights ever beheld by mortal man. A storm viewed from above the clouds has the appearance of ebullition. The upper surface of the cloud is bulged upward and outward, and has the resemblance of a vast sea of boiling, upheaving snow. Immediately above the storm cloud the air is not so cold as it is in the clearer atmosphere above or in the cloud itself. The falling of the rain can be distinctly heard, making a noise like a waterfall over a precipice. The thunder heard above a storm cloud is not loud and the flashes of lightning appear like streaks of intensely white light on the surface of the gray colored vapor." —Atlanta Constitution.

Celebrate a Lawsuit.

A small town in Bavaria is about to celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of a lawsuit with a list of barons concerning the ownership of a forest of oak and beach trees. The villagers have come into full possession and have managed the property so well that its value has increased to $500,000.

Superstitions of the Siamese.

The Siamese have such a superstitious dislike of odd numbers that they studiously strive to have in their houses an even number of windows, doors, rooms, closets, etc.

A WORK OF ART.

"The Texarkana Gateway to Texas and the Southwest"

Is the name of a handsome publication recently issued by the Iron Mountain Route, consisting of 224 pages of descriptive matter, interspersed with 600 beautiful half tone illustrations. It is the most comprehensive and, typographically, the handsomest work of its kind ever issued on the state of Texas, and is really a commercial and industrial history of the state. Anyone reading this will have an excellent idea of the vast resources of and great possibilities of the Lone Star State. The book was gotten up by the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway and its connections in the State of Texas, for distribution in the North and East, with the view of attracting immigration, investors, tourists and seekers after health. It is in every way a valuable contribution to the current literature of the day, and is calculated to be of great service to the State of Texas. A copy of this publication will be mailed free on application to any passenger representative of the Missouri Pacific Railway, Iron Mountain Route, or may be had by addressing

H. C. TOWNSEND.
General Passenger Agent, St. Louis.

A Singular Form of Monomania.

There is a class of people, rational enough in other respects, who are certainly monomaniacs in dosing themselves. They are constantly trying experiments upon their stomachs, their bowels, their livers and their kidneys with trashy nostrums. When these organs are really out of order, if they would only use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, they would, if not hopelessly insane, perceive its superiority.

Kentucky Crop Report.

THE REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER FIRST CONSISTS OF REPLIES FROM 146 CORRESPONDENTS REPRESENTING 101 COUNTIES.

The corn crop is matured, with late corn materially damaged by late drouth. Late corn will be not only deficient in quantity, but inferior in quality. Much of it is loose on cob, a feature that many attribute to injury from "chinch bug." This insect is reported as still present in great numbers.

Corn cutting is now well under way, and, with the drying conditions now prevailing, will be completed three to five weeks in advance of the usual period. On the whole the crop may be set down as decidedly short of the crop of 1895, this, too, in the face of the fact that a number of counties report the best crop ever raised. Answers to question "Normal yield per acre" give an average of 29 bushels, while the answers to question "Yield per acre now indicated" give an average of 31 bushels per acre.

It is estimated that three-fourths of the tobacco crop was housed prior to Sept. 1st. The remarkable features are the early housing of the crop and the unanimity of reports of damage by worms. The crop is reported fine in the counties between Louisville and Cincinnati, and south of this as far as Fayette, but, with this exception, the damage reported from worms, hot and dry weather is appalling. In only the counties of Grant, Greenup, Madison, Pendleton, Robertson and Carroll is there no mention of damage to crop, while in many of the tobacco growing counties the loss is estimated at two-thirds. Replies to question "Yield per acre now indicated" give an average of 788 lbs. per acre.

The hemp crop was mainly cut prior to Sept. 1st. The fiber is reported of good length, though there is some complaint of it being "flaggy."

Pastures in the western and south central sections show the effect of the hot, dry weather that prevailed during the month. In some counties the change from an unusually exhuberant growth to a dry and parched condition in so short a time is quite phenomenal. However, a good general average condition is shown in the percentage, being 94.

A large majority of correspondents report live stock in excellent condition. There is a notable absence this month of complaints of annoyance from flies. Less than the usual amount of hog cholera is reported. Cattle are scarce, the supply of that class called "feeders" is short of a demand, and as compared with an average year, is 82 per cent. The production of horses and mules has fallen off until the percentage of horse and mule foals this year, as compared with an average year, is but 60 and 55 per cent. respectively.

The season has not been favorable of late to fall plowing. The amount done, as compared with an average year is but 63 per cent. A number of correspondents report a disposition to curtail the acreage of wheat, owing to the presence of the "chinch bug" this season and apprehension of its continuance next year.

LUCAS MOORE,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The prospects of the crop of 1897 will probably be the factor which will decide whether low prices shall continue or whether higher values will prevail. We hear it said that a great many of the large growers of Central Kentucky have declared that they can not and will not continue raising tobacco at present prices, but it remains to be seen how much they are in earnest about it. It is natural however that at 3 and 4 cents per pound the efforts on the part of the growers will not be as strong as when the prospects were to realize 6 to 8 cents.

We can not quote any improvement in the market since our last report. The only noticeable betterment was in Good Tobacco, for which there was a stronger demand and quicker bidding. All other grades seemed easier, if anything. Quite a large proportion of the offerings were funked, or at least not sweet, and this fact makes the buyers hesitate more in purchasing than they otherwise would.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald.]

It seems that the annual dry spell has set in here.

The Sadieville correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer says Scott county is conceded to Mr. Settle.

Sherman Wheeler had his examining trial before Judge Lee, last Thursday, for shooting J. R. Broadus, and was held over in $100 bail.

J. A. Johnson has the finest collection of coins and stamps that we have seen. Both embrace those used by foreign countries, as well as the different series of this Government. Many of them will be of considerable value in a few years.

We think if Bryan is elected this fall there will be more weddings here than ever known in so short a time. For the young widower, the old widowers and the little boys all seem to have the girls and free silver on the brain, if you would only watch them how they pair of from church some night.

Local option is supposed to be in force in Owenton, but in such a lax way that many good temperance people have become disgusted with the whole business and think high license preferable. The writer of this paragraph was in the freight room at Sparta last Friday and saw thirty barrels of bottled beer with the address of an Owenton business house on each barrel.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1896. NO. 48.

EVERY statement Secretary Carlisle gives out, touching the policy of the Treasury, furnishes additional campaign ammunition for the nominees of the Democratic party. Unintentionally he is doing them great service.

THE Republican administration at Frankfort has decided to pay off the State's debts incurred since the first of this year. In other words it intends to repudiate, as long as possible, the debts made by the Democratic administration.

W. J. BRYAN is the only candidate for the presidency who has a consistent record on the money question. He is no late convert to the system he advocates. The records sprung on the other candidates show them to be recent converts to the gold standard.

W. J. BRYAN passed through Frankfort and the editor of the Capital failed to have him hung, although he, in a round-about way, had previously proclaimed that he ought to be hung, and at the same time the aforesaid editor had the temerity to call the supporters of the nominees of the Chicago convention, Anarchists.

THE Democrats should bear in mind that they are called to meet at the voting places in their respective precincts next Saturday, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention to be held in Burlington next Monday to appoint delegates to the Congressional convention in Williamstown on Wednesday the 30th inst. The call under which the meetings are to be held and the number of delegates to which each precinct is entitled will be found on another page.

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

The low prices of tobacco have caused limsted offerings the past week, and while prices have not shown any further decline the manufacturers show no desire to make large purchases of the old crop, and the market is left almost entirely to the manufacturers' agents at this time. The speculators purchased quite freely some time ago, under the impression that the market had reached rock bottom, and with a further decline they are unable to dispose of their holdings, and having their funds invested it has naturally put them out of the market, leaving the breaks to the manufacturers without competion, who are buying as necessity requires, which will probably string the sales of the old crop into the marketing of the New, and all hopes of any material advance on the old crop are gone "where the woodbine twineth."

A large portion of the offerings has been of the Medium grades, very few fancy hogsheads offered, probably from the cause that we do not have them to offer, because the manufacturers bid liberally on the best tobacco, especially where they have good color, and our shippers generally take advantage of the demand when they have the stock on hand.

As the season advances there is no scarcity of low grades, and the prices ot to-day will not more than pay the expense of curing, packing and marketing, without the cost of growing, and we hope to be spared from a similar crop for many years to come.

The reports from the conntry are favorable, the weather is good for curing, and we anticipate a good, serviceable crop, and one that our manufacturers will be willing to place in stock, and we are sure prices will be much more satisfactory to the growers.

We notice that a great deal of tobacco, which was thought to be thoroughly redried, is musty, especially upon the butts, and the manufacturers are watching it very carefully at present.

We had about the usual number buyers the past week, but a good portion of their time is spent in discussing free silver or a gold standard.

POLITICAL.

The leading Kentucky Democrats are claiming that Bryan's majority in this State will not be less than 20,000.

The Populists in the Third District have endorsed John S. Rhea for Congress, which means that Rhea will succeed Dr. Hunter, Republican.

The Kentucky Republican Club is arranging for a big rally and speaking at the Lagoon on Thursday, Sept. 23. Governor William O. Bradley and Hon. Richard P. Ernst will be the speakers.

The Courier-Journal of yesterday explains the editorial of 1886 about which so much has been said, by crediting it to a crazy man, who died soon after he wrote it. This is consistent with that paper's present declarations that the silver men are lunatics.—Daily Commonwealth, 13th inst.

Hon. Mat O'Doherty, of Louisville, the most prominent Republican orator and lawyer in the State has come out strong for Bryan. He introduced Mr. Bryan at one of the speaking stands Monday night in a ratling speech. His turning to Bryan means 1,000 Republican votes in Louisville.

"If there is any dollar more honest than the silver dollar of 371¼ grains (of pure silver) it has not been discovered in the century or more that the nation has existed. If there can be any such thing as a dishonest dollar that miserable sham trick and travesty of a coin, a gold dollar exactly fills that designation."

It is an assured fact that Secretary Carlisle will come to Kentucky and take the stump in behalf of sound money and the National Democracy. The leaders of the Palmer and Buckner campaign here have received advices from Mr. Carlisle, in which he has expressed not only his willingness, but his desire to take part in the campaign in Kentucky.

"It is all very well to abuse the friends of the silver dollar as inflationists, thieves, repudiators and all that sort of thing, but really the friend of the gold dollar ought to pay the same attention to the members of the convention who framed the United States constitution and who made the silver dollar the unity and standard of value in this country."

Gen. Buckner when a candidate for Governor spoke in Lexington, and alluding to the policy of the Republican party said:

"It violated its duty to the people by abrogating the contract of the bondholders to receive their pay in the currency of the country, and gave them gold; and it then demonetized silver in order to make gold more valuable, and further enrich the capitalist at the expense of the people."

An effort is being made to have Hon. Proctor Knott run for Congress in this district. At present there are two Democratic nominees as a result of the Elizabethtown Convention, where 1000 ballots were taken. Murray and Smith both claim the nomination, and if they both run it may result in the election of Lewis, the Republican nominee. Mr. Murray has offered to retire in favor of J. Proctor Knott if Smith would do the same.

While there is no doubt that the Indianapolis ticket will poll a considerable vote in Kentucky, yet we feel certain that it will benefit Bryan and hurt McKinley in the long run. Without the Indianapolis ticket there are many who have heretofore voted with the Democrats, who would otherwise have voted for McKinley. So upon the whole we believe that it will hurt McKinley, especially here in Kentucky, more than it will Bryan.—Madisonville Hustler.

Ex-President Harrison has asked the Republican National Committee to make no appointments for him to speak. A letter was received from the General's private secretary explaining that the ex-President's contracts for literary work and an engagement in a law suit early next month would prevent his accepting invitations. Gen. Harrison stated that he would deliver one speech in Marion County, Ind. That would be the extent of his campaigning in that State.

So Bryan himself is to be brought to Kentucky and turned loose from one end of it to the other. When was it ever before necessary for a "Democratic" presidential candito to tour Kentucky in order to carry the State.—Courier Journal.

Never, until a lot of newspapers with New York and Philadelphia mortgages hanging over them, and corporations whose bonds are owned by European capitalists, set themselves up as patriots. Never, until the Courier-Journal bolted a Democratic platform fairly made and a Democratic ticket fairly nominated.—Georgetown Times.

Palmer was a Republican until he was 55 years old. He then turned Democrat to save the country from Gen. Grant. He owes his present seat in the Senate to the Populist members in the Illinois legislature, to whom he made a solemn pledge that he would vote for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. The nomination of Palmer with this free coinage mortgage on him was necessary to defeat Gen. Bragg, who is reported to have written a letter advocating free coinage at a date too recent to make him available as a gold bug.—Enquirer.

In 1878, when Senator John M. Palmer was editor of the Illinois State Register, he was not as much of a gold man as he is now. Here are a few of the squibs he wrote and published then, but he don't like to have his attention called to them now:

"There is not a man anywhere who opposes the coinage of silver who does not insist that Congress has the right to issue legal tender paper at pleasure, or who does not rest assured that Congress has the right to farm out the privilege of supplying the people with currency through banking corporations. Democrats, the fight for the silver dollar is more than forty years old. We won it once against the national banks under the lead of old Hickory, and by his bones, we'll win it again."

In his speech at Frankfort, Mr. Bryan said: "You ask me what is the policy of the Democratic party? I tell you that the Democratic Convention has declared its policy, and that is the only authority that can speak on the subject. [Applause.] I do not mean to say that a man who was a Democrat and who believes that that policy will ruin this country is bound to support it. but I do say that the man who was a Democrat and who is not willing to support the party's creed ought to quit calling himself a Democrat and vote for the Republican ticket. [Applause.] Remember, my friends, that I do not question the right of each man to make his vote represent what he believes, but I do deny the right of a man to try and wrest the name Democracy away from the Democrats of this country." [Applause.

At a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee held in Lexington, last Wednesday, the following resolution was adopted in regard to the action taken by the Congressional committee in this district on the 13th of August:

"Resolved, That so much of said call as provides the manner of selecting delegates to said convention in Campbell and Kenton Counties to act at the Sixth Congressional District Convention at Williamstown, Ky., September 30, 1896, is hereby declared void and the same set aside and the respective Legislative District Committee of Campbell and Kenton Counties.

Are hereby authorized and directed to provide the manner of selecting delegates to said Williamstown Convention, to be held September 30, 1896, from said counties of Campbell and Kenton, and in the County of Campbell, John T. Hodge and in the county of Kenton, Judge Elliston, are respectively directed to call the several Legislative District Committees together for that purpose at once. Said selections to be made on the 26th day of September 1896."

AND Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge is very solicitous about the honor of this country. Has it ever occurred to the Colonel that charity should begin at home?

MR. BRYAN may make a speech in Covington some time next month.

JUDGE DENNY has decided to enter the race for Congress, which wipes out all the chances of Col. Breckinridge, if he ever had any.

IT has been definitely settled that W. J. Bryan, Democratic nominee for President will speak in Covington early in October.

THE Louisville Republicans are very much disturbed, because of two of their most prominent leaders, Hon. Dave Farleigh and Hon. Mat O'Doherty coming out for Bryan and free silver. Their flop was a bombshell in the Republican camp.

A Democratic club will be organized at Florence next Saturday night, at which time several good speeches will be made by noted political orators. All are invited to attend and join the club.

Miss Frances Clore, daughter of Mrs. Julia Clore, of this place, died last Thursday afternoon, in the 56th year of her age. She had been ill of a lung trouble for several months, and was fully conscious of her condition, and was resigned to death. A short funeral service was conducted by Elder E. Stephens at the Presbyterian church here at 10 o'clock Saturday, after which a large concourse of sympathizing friends accompanied the remains and the grief-stricken family to the burial ground on the old homestead two miles out on the East Bend road, where the interment took place. The aged mother, whose sole companion the daughter was, is almost heart-broken, and all condole with her.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of Miss Eddie May Kendall, who departed this life Aug. 23,'96, at her home in Louisville, Ky. She was just entering into womanhood, being in her 23d year, and was to have been married during the present month. She was stricken with that dreadful disease, typhoid fever, and for several weeks surrounded by her relatives and friends who had procured the very best medical skill possible, she fought that dreaded enemy death, but, alas! God, who gave that soul had spoken for its return, consequently on that fatal day, when the twilight of the evening had cast its shadows over the land, her spirit had taken its heavenly flight, bidding farewell for ever to her dear relatives and friends on this sinful earth. Mrs. Hubert Cropper, who resides in this neighborhood, is a sister of the deceased, who also had many other relatives in this vicinity, consequently she frequently visited this neighborhood. I can truthfully say among the many young ladies who visited here, none were more popular than Eddie May Kendall. She possessed a disposition characteristic of which led her to have a kind word and pleasant smile for all with whom she came in contact. This naturally rendered her very popular. In the death of this young lady there has been cast a halo of sorrow which we shall not attempt to describe. God, in his infinite wisdom, often sees proper to call from earth its brightest jewels, hence it remains for us to humbly submit, knowing that He does all things well. To the family of the deceased we tender our sincere sympathy in this sad hour of affliction. May she rest in peace is my prayer.

A FRIEND.

HIS THIRD.

Mr. Bryan Informed of an Another Presidental Nomination.

Both He and Mr. Watson Receive Official Notification by Letter of the Action of the People's Party Convention.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 15. — Senator William V. Allen, chairman of the populist committee to notify William J. Bryan of his nomination for the presidency, Monday night gave out his letter to the nominee. The full text follows:

"Madison, Neb., Sept. 15—Hon. William J. Bryan, Lincoln, Neb.—Dear Sir: At a convention of the people's party held at St. Louis from July 22 to 25 of the current year you were unanimously nominated for president of the United States, to be voted for at the approaching general election. It was known at the time that you had been nominated by the democratic party at its convention held at Chicago a few days before that time, and that you would in all probability accept the same in a formal manner. Your nomination by the people's party was not, therefore, made with any thought that you were a populist or that you accepted all the doctrines declared by the St. Louis platform. It was due, largely, to the fact that the money question is the overshadowing political issue of the age and because you have at all times been an unswerving, able and fearless advocate of the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold on terms of equality at the mints of the United States at the ratio of sixteen to one. It was thought also that the observance of a patriotic duty required a union of all reform forces, and the convention took the liberty without soliciting or consulting you of placing your name before the people as its standard bearer.

Don't Expect Too Much.

"The convention was in doing so guided by deep solicitude for the common welfare and, acting on its own motion, prompted alone by a desire to bring about the best attainable results. So much has been said respecting the rehabilitation of silver by again placing it in our coinage acts in the position it occupied when stealthily demonetized by the act of 1873 that it would be idle use for us to discuss the question. You will observe by the closing language of the St. Louis platform that the convention recognized the money question as the great issue of the day, and because populists believe that you are in accord with them on this question you will receive their ballots in November. It has at no time been expected or is it now that you will abandon your adhesion to the Chicago platform, nor that you will accept all that is declared by the people's party platform, however gratifying the latter would be to all populists.

Party Loyal to Its Principles.

"It must be understood that the party does not abate one jot or title of loyalty to its principles. We have declared ourselves in favor of many important reforms and go farther than you or your party have gone. These reforms are in our judgment essential to the liberation of the people from the present unjust and iniquitous industrial bondage.

"In accordance with precedent of our party, we take this method of notifying you of your nomination. We shall not send a committee, according to old party custom. In sending this letter of notification of the great honor that has so justly been conferred on you by our party it is needless for us to assure you that you have the confidence and esteeem of all. Your splendid abilities, known integrity, competency and eminent fitness for the position justly entitle you to a high rank among the great statesmen of the nation. We feel that in the event of your election, which now seems certain, that you will carry into execution the principles of monetary reform to the end that the people shall enjoy better industrial coditions. It is not anticipated that this can be done with undue haste or so suddenly as to wrench or disjoint the business interests of the country, but that it will be done gradually and in a way to infuse confidence and hope of better conditions for all.

"The people's party will exact of you no promises farther than those made in your public utterances and exemplified in a life devoted to the welfare of the race, nor will it ask you to abandon the party of which you are an honored member. In your nomination our party has risen above mere partisan surroundings, adopting a high plane of patriotism, believing that a division of forces would result in the election of Mr. McKinley, the foremost advocate of a deeply burdensome and unnatural taxation and the criminal policy of the single gold standard, resulting ultimately, if not in some manner checked, in the complete destruction and disintegration of our form of government.

Division of Forces Dangerous.

"Your elevation to the chief magistracy of the nation would be regarded as a vindication of the right of the people to govern, and we entertain no doubt that you will prove a worthy successor of the immortal Jefferson and Lincoln, and that your public life, like theirs, will illustrate the purity and loftiness of American statesmanship. Your extensive and intimate knowledge of public affairs and the duties the office will impose, gained in a life that has been devoted to upholding the cause of the people, as well as your keen insight into the condition of our country, in our judgment highly qualified you to bring about a change in a way that will work injury to none, justice to all, thus making our government in fact, as it is now in formality, a government 'of, by and for the people.'

"We have the honor to be your most obedient servants.

"WILLIAM VINCENT ALLEN,
"Chairman."

The names of each of the members of the notification committee are signed to the document also.

Letter to Mr. Watson.

Washington, Sept. 15. — Senator Marion C. Butler, chairman of the populist national committee, has mailed a letter of notification to Hon. Thomas E. Watson, the nominee for vice president. The letter is quite lengthy. Its main points are summarized herewith:

The senator states as the reason for the formation of the people's party that there was in existence no political party that represente the principles of good government, no party that stands for right and the interest of the laborer, wealth producer and all who strive to make an honest living by fair and legitimate means. He declares that the republican party, under the leadership of John Sherman, and the democratic party, under the leadership of Grover Cleveland, stand for selfish interest and personal greed of money changere, corporations, trusts and monopolies. The people's party, he says, represents the principles of true republicanism as taught by Abraham Lincoln and of true democracy as taught by Jefferson and Jackson. It was this party, he says, which first brought to the front the overshadowing question of financial reform. It was the real force behind this great political revolution, and it drove the democratic party to make its patriotic declaration at Chicago. Yet, he declares the democratic party—a party beset from without and from within by the gold monopoly democrats who are plotting to again control it—cannot be relied upon to carry out these reforms of the people's party and restore prosperity to the American people.

Therefore, he continues, there was never greater need for the existence and vigorous growth of the people's party than now. The democratic party nominated at Chicago for the presidency William J. Bryan, a man who was ready to renounce the false gods of democracy, and the people's party at St. Louis put country above party, and recognizing in Mr. Bryan a man standing in the broadest and truest sense for American institutions and American principles—a man as worthy and true as anyone within its own ranks, and, besides, one who had already several millions of votes pledged to his support, and who, therefore, the party could be sure of electing in the present contest, named him also as its standard bearer. But, continues Senator Butler, it seems that the democratic party was not able at one effort to purge itself of its modern heresies, cast off its plutocratic leaders and at the same time it nominated Mr. Bryan give him a running mate who had earned in the arena of action, contending against the foes of the republic, the affection, confidence and trust of the masses of our people, as had Mr. Bryan himself. The people's party, true to its principles and true to its teachings, nominated for the high office of vice president a man worthy to have headed the ticket, a man who represents what Mr. Bryan represents, and, therefore, presents to the people to-day in the persons of Bryan and Watson the best silver ticket in the field—a ticket more representative of American interests than any other, a ticket that stands for just the opposite to that for which the republican ticket stands. In conclusion Mr. Watson is asked to accept the nomination for vice president.

BRYAN IN THE SOUTH.

Notable Demonstrations at Louisville, Ky., and Elsewhere.

Mount Vernon, Ill., Sept. 15. — The Bryan party reached this city at 9:20 a. m. Monday. The candidate left the train here and was escorted to a stand erected in front of the state supreme court building. Mr. Bryan was introduced by Appellate Judge Sample and made a short speech. The train left at 9:40 a. m. En route from St. Louis the train made brief stops at Mascoutah, Nashville and Ashley, and Mr. Bryan made a few remarks from the platform of his car at each point.

Henderson, Ky., Sept. 15.—Carmi, Ill., turned out a big crowd to see and hear Mr. Bryan. Escorted to a stand erected for his accommodation, Mr. Bryan rested for a few minutes while a short speech was delivered by John Allen, of Mississippi, who has gained fame as the humorist of the lower branch of congress. Mr. Bryan followed him briefly, and his remarks were loudly cheered. Mr. Bryan crossed the Wabash river shortly after leaving Carmi, and made his first entrance into the state of Indiena. He was welcomed to the state by committees from Mount Vernon and Evansville. Reaching the latter city, Mr. Bryan addressed a crowd of about 8,000 people. He spoke to them briefly, his remarks following practically the same lines as made at other places. He spoke in part as follows:

"As I came down the street here I noticed a picture showing the mines open in one place and the factories in another, and the republican party assures the people it is trying to open the factories, while we're trying to open the mints. Our policy means the opening of both mints and factories. The triumph of the republican party means the closing of both mints and factories. How can the manufacturer sell goods unless the people are able to buy them? As long as you drive down the prices of farm products you make it impossible for the farmer to buy the products of the factories, and until he can buy you cannot open the factories. When they say they want to open the factories first, and then times will be good, it is putting the cart before the horse. It is like saying a man has a good wagon and it runs well if he could only make the horse go."

The train left Evansville at 1:25 and crossed over the Ohio river into Kentucky. This city was reached at two o'clock. An escort composed of the Carlisle rifles, 500 mounted men from Union county and county officials in carriages and others conveyed Mr. Bryan to the courthouse, where he made a speech before a large and enthusiastic audience. Before Mr. Bryan's arrival, Senator Blackburn spoke to the people assembled in Central park awaiting the candidate's arrival. Mr. Bryan spoke for half an hour to the crowd on one side of the park, and then went to another stand on the edge of the park and addressed a second big assemblage for 20 minutes. It is estimated that 10,000 people heard him in this city. At Irvington, 47 miles from Louisville, Mr. Bryan said a few words to several hundred people. He also addressed quite a gathering at West Point, where flaming jets of natural gas formed the principal illumination in his honor.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 15.—Tired almost to the point of prostration after a fatiguing journey of 14 hours from St. Louis, his voice nearly gone from the effort expended in a score of speeches, Hon. W. J. Bryan reached Louisville at 7:50 o'clock Monday night in a special train over the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railroad. An enormous crowd cheered him on his arrival at the Union depot. A salute of 45 guns fired by Battery A, of the Louisville Legion, told the people of Louisville that the young Nebraskan had reached their city. It was with difficulty that the candidate and the members of his party were pushed through the howling enthusiasts at the depot and enabled to enter the carriages in waiting. Chairman John H. Headley and the local reception committee met Mr. Bryan there, and under their escort he was taken through streets crowded with cheering people, to the Willard hotel. Here there was a momentary wait and then the line of the procession, consisting of a score of carriages, was taken to Phoenix Hill park, where the first speech was made.

Mr. Bryan said that the democratic party did not have all the newspapers with it in its fight, but one editor can only vote once, and he had known some editors who had so little influence over their own conduct that they could not even control the one vote that the law gives them. He continued:

"I don't know of any one thing that has caused so many people to forget the resolve they made on the first of the year never to swear as the gold standard editorials which appear from day to day. Our opponents say that we don't think. That is too bad. I am sure, if the Creator had the same opinion of the majority of the people that the average advocate of the gold standard has, He would not have wasted so much time giving brains to all the people. He would simply have given a larger share to those who were predestined to write gold standard editorials and then He would have given to all the rest of the people backs strong enough to bear the increasing load that the gold standard editors would put upon the people. They say we don't think. I affirm the advocates of free coinage are the only people in this campaign who apply natural laws to the money question and carry into the discussion of finance the same intelligence that is used in ordinary business."

BRYAN AT ASHEVILLE.

The Democratic Candidate Makes a Strong Speech.

His Effective Attacks on the Secretary of the Treasury are Keenly Relished by the Assembled Multitude of North Carolina Farmers.

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 17.—A most hearty welcome was given to Mr. Bryan yesterday by the farmers who had gathered here in thousands to listen to an address by the democratic candidate for the presidency.

Mr. Bryan was driven to the Battery Park hotel, where he and members of the democratic organizations were given an elaborate dinner by the manager. The party was then driven to a platform in a valley between the great hills which have helped to make this place so interesting.

The candidate was introduced to the immense audience by Hon. Locke Craig. He said:

I have a reason for coming to North Carolina which is personal aside from my interest in the electoral vote of this state. It was the state of North Carolina which at Chicago before I became a candidate, before my own state had taken any formal part in presenting my name—it was the state of North Carolina which by resolution decided to give me the unanimous vote of their delegation in that national convention. I appreciate the honor which they were willing to do me and therefore it gives me great pleasure to come among these people whom they represented and give what assistance I can, if any assistance be needed, to secure the electoral vote of this state for the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1.

I am glad the canvass of this state opens in this county, which was the home of one of the grandest public men given to this nation, not alone by North Carolina, but the entire country, Senator Vance. He was a man whom I delighted to honor and I am glad I stand among his neighbors and friends advocating the same cause he so eloquently advocated and I cannot more than impress upon your memories the words he so often spoke. Among the last of his public speeches was one upon the money question. Let me read you a few words from it: "The great fight is on. The power of money and its allies throughout the world have entered into this conspiracy to perpetuate the greatest crime of this or any other age, to overthrow one-half of the world's money and thereby double their own wealth by enhancing the value of the other half, which is in their hands. The money changers are polluting the temple of our liberties. To your tents, O Israel." He foresaw the struggle in which we are now engaged. He realized its magnitude when many others did not. Those words came from him as words of command: "To your tents, O Israel." And the command was heeded by the democratic party and they engaged first in a warfare with the party to rescue that party and the party name from the hands of those who were using it to advance the interest, not of democracy, but of plutocracy.

It was a great contest. I venture the assertion that never before in the history of this country did any party have such a contest within its ranks as that which ended at Chicago. The democratic idea has been that the party is but the instrument of those who compose it, and derives its power from the will of the voters who number themselves as members of that party. Yet it is often the case that the party machinery or bosses have more to do with shaping the policy and making the nomination than the voters themselves. I am proud to be the nominee of a convention which represented no machine or bosses, but the unpurchased suffrages of the voters of this country.

A few months ago the most sanguine democrat did not believe that success this fall was more than possible. The most sanguine democrats felt that four years of gold standard administration had destroyed almost the possibility of success. But the voters of the democratic party determined to make one final fight, and determined that if die the party must it should at least maintain the honor of those who believe in the right of the people to govern themselves. The result is just what it always is if people lay aside expediency and seek to do their duty and accept the consequences.

In trying to do right the democratic party won a possibility of success which it never could have hoped for if it had consulted expediency. They told us we must not disturb the harmony of the party. Every time we made speeches in favor of the free coinage of silver we were told that we were disturbing the harmony of the party. And if we spoke emphatically they tried to read us out of the party. They called us everything and tried to make us pledge ourselves to abide the decision at Chicago before we could go into the convention. I, for one, told them whenever they would bring a pledge that the gold standard democrats would take it would be time enough to ask free coinage democrats to make pledges. I stated in answer to an inquiry that I would not support for president a man who would, in the presidential chair, continue the present financial policy and mortgage the United States to English bondholders. I said it because I meant it. I may be wrong in my judgment, because none of us are infallible, but my judgment is the only judgment that controls my conduct.

Now, when the secretary of the treasury denounced me as a populist and said I had said I would not support the nominee, I replied that I did not expect him to support the nominee, if he were a free silver man. The time came when he was put to the test and the only difference between him and me was that I was candid enough to tell the people I would follow my conscience and he tried to control a convention and then bolted when he failed to do it. I have sent him no letter begging his support. The highest compliment he can pay me is to oppose, because then the world will know the secretary of the treasury whom I appoint, if I am elected, will be as different from him as I can find. I do not dispute the right of any democrat to vote against the Chicago ticket, if he thinks its success will imperil the country, but what I ask is that these men who have been pretending to be democrats shall now, when the democratic party has been rescued from the people's despoilers leave the name and not attempt to take that name with them into disgrace. They call themselves democrats. No true democrat ever nominated one ticket for the purpose of voting for another.

We have this contest to meet and we are prepared to meet it. We have a cause that appeals to the intellect of those who think and to the hearts of those who feel, and we are willing to place that cause in opposition to the cause which merely appeals to the pocketbook. One gentleman suggested not long ago that sentiment was on the side of free silver and said a number of poems had been written on our side and pointed to the fact that they don't write poems in favor of the gold standard. I would like to see a poem written in defense of a government of syndicates by syndicates and for syndicates. The only word which will rhyme with syndicate is hate.

The restoration of bimetallism is demanded on behalf of those who are the strength of every nation and the gold standard is desired by those who profit most as business is paralyzed and the masses impoverished. The best evidence that the gold standard is not good is found in the fact that no party has ever indorsed it in the United States. A little group of assistant republicans declared so, but no party ever did so. The republican party did not declare the gold standard was a good thing. There were those in that convention who had been trying for years to fasten the gold standard upon the American people, but the republican platform did not declare the gold standard good, but pledged the party to get rid of it. But instead of trying to get rid of it now the republican party said we are going to get rid of it as soon as foreign nations take more pity on us than the republican party was willing to do. The republican platform declares for the maintenance of the gold standard, until, that is a long word—until the leading commercial nations of Europe join in international bimetallism. How long is that? No man can tell. It is equivalent to saying we must maintain the gold standard permanently, and the reason I believe it is that men who put that in never made an effort to have the gold standard abandoned. Those who framed that platform have been advocating the gold standard as the standard of civilization and telling you that we had outgrown the use of silver. If the gold standard is the standard of civilization, why abandon it? Those who prate most about international bimetallism are the ones who do not want it. They are in the position of a defendant in a lawsuit who is always willing for a continuance or a hung jury.

Mr. Bryan then went over some of the arguments used by him before and continued as follows: I denounce the idea some seem to have that the government has a right to lessen the volume of money, but no right to increase it. I denounce as false and infamous the doctrine that the government has a right to starve the people by taking their money from them, but has no power to feed them by increasing their supplies. When they tell you you ought not to invoke legislation for the purpose of increasing the volume of currency, tell them you are following the example set in 1873, when the money-owning classes invoked the power of legislation to strike down a portion of the nation's money in order to raise the value of the other portion. If they can appeal to the law to take away some of the money you had, why can you not appeal to the law to place you back where you were.

Some are afraid if we pass a free coinage law there will be such an enormous increase in the volume of our currency that we won't know what to do with it. You can't read a speech made by our opponents but you will find contradictions in it and one proposition will answer another. For instance, a man will say if we had free silver it would give the mine owner a profit of 100 per cent. when he took his bullion worth 50 cents to the mint and had it converted into a dollar, and it is a terrible thing to let him make that profit. After he has worried about that he will tell you as matter of fact that the law adds nothing to the value of the metal under the free coinage of silver and 50 cents of bullion will only be a 50-cent dollar. Both the statements cannot be true. If you convert 50 cents' worth of bullion into a 50-cent dollar there is no profit to the mine owner. And if the mine owner makes a profit by converting 50 cents worth of bullion into 100 cents, then there are no 50-cent dollars.

Then you will hear that under free coinage we would be flooded with silver until money would be so cheap we would not have any use for it, and when you have been frightened as badly as you can be that way, they will tell you this cheap money will run the dear money out and it will take fifteen years with our mints running at full capacity to make money enough to take the place of gold, and that will make money so scarce that a silver dollar will be harder to get than a gold dollar. You can't have too little and too much all at once.

An opponent once put that proposition to me in debate. There I was 1,500 miles from home, among strangers. I had to answer on the spur of the moment and I just blurted out I would make more mints. He had not thought of the possibility of making more mints. After making that explanation a lawyer told me he was glad I had called attention to it as he had never thought of the possibility. In order that I may not leave any special cloud on the lawyer I want to say in another state a doctor made the same remark. You can understand how a great man might be unable to think of so small a thing as opening more mints. That is one of the advantages of being a great man; you can't always think of little things.

They say cheap silver dollars will come in and run the gold dollar out and then money will become so scarce the silver dollar will be worth more than the gold dollar. Just think of it. Don't you know if the cheap silver dollars run the dear gold dollars out, the very moment the silver dollars become dearer than the gold, some of the cheap gold dollars will come back and run the dear silver dollars out? They think we are going to repeal the Gresham law. But I must close. It is a great temptation to talk a long while when I find as enthusiastic an audience as this; and that is the reason I have been talking a long while all along the line.

Up-to-Date Japan.

Parties who reside in Japan wishing to obtain sawmill machinery, with all the modern appliances and improvements for skillfully sawing lumber, sent word recently to Menominee, Mich., through the Japanese consul at Tacoma, Wash., asking the works to make bids at their regular rates. The bill calls for a full equipment. The letter laid great stress on the fact that they wanted labor-saving machinery of the very best quality. The natives are the only parties interested, and they are pushing the matter with vigor. They want a big bandmill, with its accompanying machinery.

SPEAKS AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. Bryan Talks at Three Great Mass Meetings.

At three great mass meetings held in St. Louis Saturday night, September 12, W. J. Bryan, the democratic and populistic nominee for president, addressed thousands of people. At each meeting he was greeted with prolonged cheers, and at frequent intervals during his speech he was interrupted by loud applause.

"Our opponents tell us that the money question is a complicated question and that only a few are able to master it. There is no question which can come before the American people that is too deep for the American people themselves. [Applause.] There is no question which must be submitted to a particular class of people. The constitution did not suggest that any class of people was to act for any other class. If the founders of the constitution had ever supposed a question would arise like the money question and had thought it could only be settled by financiers, then our forefathers would have written in the constitution that, while on most subjects all the people might vote, on the money question only the financiers could vote. [Applause and laughter.] When the ballot was given to you it was given upon the assumption that you had the intelligence and patriotism necessary to use it right, and I believe, my friends, that you have.

"If I were to tell you a grown person could wear the clothes of a child you would think me foolish. If I were to tell you that a grown person could live on the food necessary to sustain life in a child you would call me foolish, and yet they call these men financiers who assume that the people growing in population can survive on a money decreasing in its amount. [Applause.]

Decreased Circulation Charged.

"Now, give me your attention, my friends. In this government publication, issued by the treasury department July 1, 1896, I find a statement of the amount of money of all kinds in circulation among the people for the various years. Let me call your attention to the amount given here for the years 1894, 1895 and 1896. In 1894 the amount of money in circulation, according to the report, was $1,660,700,000. In 1895 the amount of money in circulation had fallen to $1,601,000,000, a decrease in one year of $59,000,000. In 1896—and the statements are made on June 30 each year—the amount in circulation had fallen to $1,506,000,000. What does it mean? It means that in two years' time, according to the treasury report, the amount of money in circulation among the people had fallen about $150,000,000 in amount. [Applause.] In other words, in two years' time there has been a decrease of nearly ten per cent. in the amount of money in circulation among the people. This, my friends, is the treasury report, and this report shows that while the per capita circulation in 1894 was $24.28 per capita, in 1896 it had fallen to $21.10, a fall of more than $3 per capita.

"If Mr. Sherman did right in 1890 in saying that the people needed new money every year, then, my friends, I want to ask you why it is that the republican party, in the face of the constant decrease in the circulation of money, has made no provision whatever to satisfy the needs of an increased population. [Applause.] When we talk about these matters our opponents tell us that we do not understand financiering. [Laughter and applause.] My friends, we understand mathematics, and a man does not have to understand much about mathematics to know that a nation that requires an increase in circulation must suffer if instead of an increase in circulation it has a decrease in circulation. [Applause.]

Henry Clay Quoted.

"Now, I want to read you what one of the greatest men in this country said in regard to the effect of the decrease in currency. Henry Clay spoke on this subject away back in '40. Let me quote what he said: 'Of all conditions of society, that is most adverse in which there is a constant and rapid diminution of amount of circulating medium. Debtors become unable to pay their debts, property falls, the market is glutted, business declines and labor is thrown out of employment. With such a state of things the imagination goes ahead of the reality. Sellers become numerous from the apprehension that their property, now falling, will fall still lower, and purchasers scarce from an unwillingness to make investments with the hazards of almost certain loss.

"'I have already stated that the country is borne down by a weight of debt. If the currency be greatly diminished, as beyond all example it has been, how is this debt to be extinguished? Property, the resources the debtor relied upon for its payment, will decline in value, and it may happen that a man who honestly contracted debts on the face of property which had a value at the time fully adequate to warrant the debt will find himself stripped of all his property, and his debt remains unextinguished.'

"These words state the great principle, that is as true to-day as when he uttered the words. If we decrease the amount of money we make dollars dearer and property cheaper, and if we make property cheap, without reducing the debt that hangs over the property, we extinguish the equity of redemption and summon the sheriff to take charge of the property in the interest of the creditor. [Great applause.]

"I want you to remember that this money question reaches every man, woman and child in this broad land. I want you to remember that the humblest individual in St. Louis has as much right to a voice in its settlement as the largest financial magnate living in any other state. His vote was given to him to protect his interest. Your votes are given to you to protect your interest. [Applause.] If you do not use your votes to protect your interests, as you understand them, you must not delude yourself with the idea that somebody else is going to look after you. If you don't feel interested enough to look after your own family, do not try to cast the burden of their care upon somebody else who may have a family of his own to look after. I beg you to take this money question and study it until you find out what is best for the people in your condition. [Applause and a voice: 'Sixteen to one.'] I want you to study it and find out what is best for your country as you understand it—[applause]—and then make your vote represent exactly what you want."

Speech in the Auditorium.

In the great Auditorium, where the republican national convention was held, Mr. Bryan said in part:

"Politics, my friends, is at times serious business, and politics this year is a more serious business than in any year through which we assembled here have ever passed. Whenever a great party solemnly declares that the control of our financial policy shall be transferred from the American people over into the hands of foreign nations, it raises a serious issue, which must be settled by the American people. [Applause.] If the republican party has declared in favor of a gold standard its orators might have gone before the people and advocated the gold standard as a good thing, but they did not do it, because those who favor a gold standard never fought an open fight in their lives. Gold is a coward.

"They tell you that gold is the only good money, and yet they tell you that they cannot furnish the gold even if you ask for it. And what excuse do they give? Do they tell you it is because the nations of the earth are scrambling for this gold, until it becomes too scarce? No; they blame it to agitation. Gold is not scarce because of agitation, but agitation exists because gold was scarce before agitation began. These people condemn agitation. They do not understand the genius of the institutions under which they live. In a country like ours agitation is the only means by which people can secure relief."

Coercion Again Charged.

Continuing, he spoke of the alleged practice of some banks which refused to extend notes unless the man who wanted the time extended would promise to vote for the gold standard, and of corporations that, he charged, coerced their employers to vote that way. He added:

"They say that we out here do not know much about finance. But, my friends, we are pretty good judges of common honesty and public decency. The Wall street millionaires had called the secretary of the treasury before them and told him what he must do. I think the time has come for reversing matters and calling the financiers before the secretary of the treasury. We are not willing to abide by the decision rendered by Wall street; we are not willing to abide by a financial policy dictated by foreign nations, but we are willing to submit every question to the decision of the American people."

VIRTUE OF EARLY RISING.

Old-Fashioned Habit About to Be Revived the World Over.

An old-fashioned habit, which has fallen of late into disuse, is about to be revived. It is neither more nor less than that cruel outrage to laziness, getting out of bed betimes and beginning the day where a large portion of the world now ends it. Some doctors have been recently advocating late rising, and to the satisfaction of their clients decried that effort to break away from one's downy pillow, but others, made of sterner material, now preach the contrary, and order the weaklings, as well as the worldlings, to partake of "the mild freshness of morning" at any cost to their inclinations. While men and women are using up their vitality with bells, dinners and other social functions of the winter season, and then passing their day in exciting business transactions, needful hours of sleep are necessarily curtailed, or they are taken whenever they can be found. Such irregularity is detrimental to the physical condition, and as will be readily admitted, also interferes with the routine of established rules of living. So late have London hours become within the past decade some reaction in public opinion was to have been expected. The great metropolis' custom of going to bed anywhere before five o'clock in the morning falls on New York and Boston imitators with peculiar heaviness. Americans are expected to begin their money-making labors by eight or nine, and there are few business men, however wealthy, who are not out and doing business by that time of day. Three or four hours' sleep for brains exhausted by the stress and storm of speculation, for instance, is totally inadequate. The leisure class, which is exceedingly small, can take all its beauty sleep it wants on both ears, and not wake till noonday, but the average citizen and prospective capitalist has to burn the candle at both ends if he wishes to be "gay" and on the right side of the market at the same time. But the new view of rising early promises to change the fashionable perspective the world over. The young man able to own a horse now plunges out of bed into the saddle with the dawn, and rides a dozen miles before breakfast, or he takes a spin on his bicycle, when the weather permits, and returns to his studies or his office duties, the blood leaping through his body and his lungs filled with enough oxygen to keep him in trim for the remainder of the day. He is truly in tune with life. The 24 hours' march before him instead of in the rear, and not a moment is lost in the perpetual struggle with futurity. Insomniacs will not appreciate the common-sense mandate to get up with that orb if they do not go to bed with him, but there would be less of their mental malady had better hours been kept in the first instance, and sleep had not been repulsed by overwork or dissipation.—Boston Herald.

HALF PRICE.

A Tailor Who Was Taught a Lesson in Regard to Truthfulness.

It is very difficult even for a dealer in cheap clothing to get the better of Pat, as the following story, told by a London journal, well illustrates.

Pat was a witty Irishman, who had just arrived in London from the Emerald Isle. He was aimlessly wandering about the town, when he perceived a suit of clothes at a shop door inscribed: "This superior suit for half-price." So Pat walked in and inquired the price.

"Just 16 shillings, sir," replied the shopman.

"Begorra, that's chape enough," said Pat. "I'll take it."

When the parcel was tied up he put it under his arm, and laying down eight shillings on the counter was going out at the door, when the shopkeeper intercepted him and demanded another eight shillings.

"Didn't you say, you spalpeen, that the price of the suit was 16 shillings, and sure haven't I given you the half of it? And by this and by that, I won't give up my bargain!"

A scuffle then ensued, and Pat was taken to the police court, where he pleaded his cause so ably that the magistrate dismissed the complaint and advised the tailor never again to ticket his goods with "half-price!"—Harper's Round Table.

Learning Through Living.

A man's ability to comprehend truth is often affected by his conduct, and ways of thinking and acting. One who should go into a company of bandits and enlarge on the nobleness of loving one's neighbors, or of being just and honest, ought not to look for a speedy acceptance by his hearers of the truths he presents. The words "Our Father," in the Lord's Prayer, appeal very differently to the man who is learning to look on God as his own loving Father and Protector, as compared with one who speaks the same words carelessly, with no thought as to their real significance. It is this truth that Christ emphasized when He said: "If any man will do His (God's) will, he shall know of the doctrine." If we would know the truth, we must live the truth.—S. S. Times.

WHERE BRYAN STANDS.

The Democratic Candidate Boldly Defines His Views.

Although the formal letter of acceptance made public by Candidate William J. Bryan, occupied but one-third of the space of that of his republican competitor, it managed to say ten times as much.

Mr. Bryan at the commencement of his letter takes his stand squarely upon the Chicago platform, and gives his assent to every plank. There is no doubt about his position; no hesitancy in defining his views.

In demanding that the expenditures of public money shall be conducted with economy, and in the interest of those who pay the taxes, the democratic standard-bearer is voicing the demands of the people, irrespective of party.

In his denunciation of the recent bond issues, Mr. Bryan likewise appeals to the good sense of the American people. And when it is remembered that less than six months ago an issue of these bonds was marked by a gross favoritism which amounted really to a national scandal, Mr. Bryan's plain illustration of the pernicious system can be thoroughly appreciated.

In his reference to the national banking system, Mr. Bryan forcibly illustrates a bad feature of the American system of financiering, which but few persons understand. This portion of Mr. Bryan's letter should be carefully studied by everyone who desires to vote intelligently. It will in a measure largely explain why the banking interests are solid for McKinley.

The hearty support of the Monroe doctrine is another feature of the letter, which will thoroughly please every true American. It is the doctrine of this country, and Candidate Bryan's reference to it shows that he is a keen observer of the hold it has upon public opinion.

By declaring his hearty support of liberal pensions for those who have suffered injury in the military and naval services of the country, Mr. Bryan reveals that the interests of the veterans can be safely confided to his care. It will nullify the effort of some to array the soldier against him.

It has long been the complaint of the masses that all legislation is in the interest of the wealthy classes. Mr. Bryan seems to have recognized this concession to money by the law-making bodies, and he points out the necessity of protecting the masses in the free exercise of their political rights, and in the enjoyment of their just share of the rewards of their labor.

During recent years the hosts of labor have heard much about arbitration to settle disputes between employe and employer. In nearly every instance these propositions have been snares and delusions intended to deceive the working man. Mr. Bryan's correct explanation of arbitration points out to the workingman how his interest can best be served.

The firm stand against trusts, the demand that the government cease trifling with the Pacific railroads, and prosecute the claims of the people against them, together with the hearty support of struggling Cuba are other features which will add to Mr. Bryan's popularity, and draw to his standard thousands of hesitating voters.

Mr. Bryan wisely refuses to discuss the tariff issue, because all reference to that question at this time is insincere. Mr. McKinley knows, while talking tariff, and promising high protection, that even if elected there can be no change for at least three years. As the democratic candidate tersely reviews the situation:

"Whatever may be the individual views of citizens as to the relative merits of protection and tariff reform, all must recognize that until the money question is fully and finally settled, the American people will not consent to the consideration of any other important question. Taxation presents a problem which in some form is continually present, and a postponement of definite action upon it involves no sacrifice of personal opinion or political principles; but the crisis presented to financial conditions cannot be postponed."—Philadelphia Item.

BLUSTER OF ORGANS.

Mountebank Methods of the McKinley Mouthers.

The McKinleyite money power combination admits that it is greatly encouraged by the returns from Vermont, and by the Indianapolis convention, and the organs are sounding glad notes and declaring that their party has the "dead wood" on the people. The sanguine temperament of some of the delegates at Indianapolis led to estimates of the possibilities in several states that have given heart of hope to the g. o. p., and we are now assured by some of the more enthusiastic organs that it is extremely probable that Mr. Bryan will not carry a single state.

In the meantime, the cause of the people is moving. Mr. Bryan has left "the enemy's country," and the excitement attending his visit having subsided, the organs of the trusts and plutocrats are fain to see in the subsidence of the excitement a falling off in bimetallic sentiment. But the good seed that the democratic candidate sowed in New York has taken hold of the soil, and it will grow and frutify to the amazement of the money power by the time election day arrives. If the organs could keep up their burst of assumed confidence for two months, they might succeed in making people believe that their cause was in a fair way to triumph, but they must expect to spend no little of that time in answering the people's arguments, which have as yet been met with little else than sneers for the arguments and abuse for those who advance them. The cry of anarchy and repudiation is still heard in the land, but it will require something more impressive to convince the masses of the people that the time for self-assertion and effort toward their deliverance from the bondage imposed on them by concentrated wealth has not arrived. The situation is such as to afford every encouragement to democrats to keep pegging away. What the organs of the money power pretend to regard as a favorable wind is only their own bluster.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

Palmer's Poor Memory.

Gen. Palmer's memory seems to be failing, which is hardly surprising, considering his years and other circumstances. In attempting to explain the free silver editorials that appeared in his paper, the State Register, in 1878, he remarks: "Our editorials were not for free silver; we had no silver question; it was coin, both gold and silver. We were not advocating free silver, simply fighting greenbacks." If Senator Palmer can find nothing more plausible to say than that there was no silver question in 1878, he will do well to follow Mr. McKinley's example and let Mr. Hanna do his talking. It was in 1878 that the Bland-Allison silver bill became a law. Mr. Bland's bill for the free coinage of silver passed the house in 1877, the whole country echoed with the din of debate, and in 1878 the compromise measure for the coinage of 2,000,000 silver dollars a month passed both houses over the veto of President Hayes. Senator Palmer may not remember now what his opinions were in 1878, but it is certain that if he talked silver then, he did not do it under the impression that silver meant gold.—N. Y. Journal.

Organs at Outs.

In their efforts to explain away defeat in Arkansas, the McKinley organs are getting very badly mixed. The Inquirer says the election was a farce, and that the republican vote was not counted. The Record, which could apparently twist a disastrous cyclone in the west into evidence that the country was for McKinley, finds that in many of the counties the republican vote was largely increased, and pretends to see some hope for the single gold standard in November. As these two statements cannot, even by the wildest partisan, be made to agree, it shows that much of the campaign material in the McKinley organs is of office manufacture and thoroughly unreliable.—Philadelphia Item.

—For 30 years the condition of the workingmen of England has been held up as a frightful example by the republican party. Now we are asked to adopt the same money standard that England has so we can enjoy the same magnificent prosperity that exists in that gold-standard country.—Illinois State Register.

LIVES OF SELF-DENIAL.

Early Monks Had Some Queer Ways of Showing Their Devotion.

St. Jerome gives several instances of the severities of life to which monks submitted of their own free choice. For 30 years one lived exclusively on a small daily portion of barley bread and muddy water. Another lived in a hole in the ground, and never ate more than five figs for his daily repast. A third never washed his clothes, never changed his tunic, until it fell into pieces, cut his hair only on Easter Sunday, and starved himself until his eyes grew dim, and his skin became like a pumice stone.

St. Marcarius of Alexandria slept for six months in a marsh with his naked body exposed to the stings of venomous flies. He always carried 60 pounds of iron around him, but in this penance was far surpassed by his disciple, St. Eusebius, who habitually wore 150 pounds of iron and lived for three years in the bottom of a dry well. St. Sabinus refused all other nutriment than corn which had been rendered rotten by steeping for a month in water. St. Bessarian chose a thorn bush for a temporary residence, and remained there for 40 days and nights, and for 40 years he never lay down when he slept, but, when overcome by fatigue, merely rested against a wall.

Another holy hermit, known as John, stood for three whole years in prayer, leaning upon a rock, and his only nourishment during that period was the sacrament, which was brought to him on Sundays. Many of these early saints lived among the tombs, or in the dens of wild beasts in the desert. Some scorned all clothes, and crawled about, covered only by their long matted hair. A sect in Mesopotamia and Syria never lived under a roof, but spent their whole time on the mountain side, wearing no clothes, and eating nothing but grass and leaves.

The saint who surpassed all others in the extravagancies of his penances was Simeon Stylites. He bound a rope around him until it became imbedded in the flesh, and sometimes slept in a dry well said to be inhabited by demons. He built three pillars, the last being 60 feet high and less than two cubits in circumference, and on them he remained for 30 years in all weathers and through every change of climate, incessantly and rapidly bending his body in prayer almost to the level of his feet. A spectator attempted to count his movements, but gave up the task in despair when the number amounted to 1,244. His reputation spread far and wide and pilgrims flocked from every quarter, until, by the general voice of mankind, he was declared the highest model of all Christian and saintly virtues, and very many emulated his example. When at last he died a crowd of prelates followed his body, and a brilliant star shone miraculously over his grave.

One natural but most repulsive consequence of these religious austerities is frequently ignored by the sentimentalists who find much to admire in the self-discipline of the early saints. Every discredit was thrown on the domestic virtues, and the basest ingratitude and most intense hardness of heart were displayed toward those who were bound to the ascetics by the closest of earthly ties. To break the heart of a loving mother, to persuade a fond wife that it was her highest duty to separate from him forever, to abandon his children as beggars to the mercy of the world, was regarded by the true hermit as the most sacred of all religious offerings.

His only business was to work out his own salvation, and to this prime end every other consideration must be sacrificed. In total disregard of all natural affection, St. Simeon Stylites again stands in the front rank. He began his holy but useless career by running away from home, and thus breaking the heart of his father, who died of grief at his flight. His mother lived on, but heard nothing of her son until 27 years had elapsed, and his austerities had made him famous. She hastened to visit him, but no woman was admitted to the monastery where he then resided, and he refused to allow her to see his face.—London Standard

Beneath His Dignity.

"Yes," said Longbow, looking around impressively, "it was the tightest squeeze I was ever in. I never want to go through the same thing again."

"Well, tell us more about it," said Whoppers, half interestedly, half jealously.

"There I was," continued Longbow, "in an open boat, ten miles out to sea, with the water pouring through a big hole in the bottom!"

"Didn't you have a pump?" asked Whoppers.

"Nary pump, nary nothing," was the reply. "Didn't even have so much as a tomato can, or an egg cup, or a salt spoon."

"But you must have had a hat," suggested Whoppers, trying all he could to weaken the story.

"Yes," admitted Longbow, "I had a hat."

"Then," said Whoppers, in close pursuit, "why didn't you use that to scoop the water out?"

"Why?" echoed Longbow. "I'll tell you why. The hat was a mackinaw."

"What difference did that make?"

"All the difference in the world," returned Longbow, in triumph. "I'm not the sort of man to try and get out of a scrape with straw hat."—N. Y. Journal.

POLITICO-HISTORICAL.

A Curious Incident in German Interstate Relations.

A "Kleinstaaterei" has been abolished in Germany, says the Westminster Gazette. The little village of Kurnbach, which has hitherto belonged partly to the grand duchy of Hesse and partly to the grand duchy of Baden, was recently by treaty between the two powers, solemnly and forever incorporated into the grand ducal state of Baden. The oddest thing about the joint jurisdiction under which the Kurnbachers have hitherto lived was that the houses were not allotted to Hesse or to Baden by their position inside or outside any frontier line betwixt the two states, but by the date of their erection. Houses built at one period belonged to one "nationality," houses built at another period belonged to the other. One policeman was found sufficient to keep order for both states, and his uniform was, consequently, particolored, his green coat showing that he was the officer of Baden, and its blue facings and trimmings bearing witness that he officially represented the majesty of Hesse. Now that the blue has been stripped off, and nothing but the Baden green remains, a Hessian newspaper suggests that his old coat should be presented to the German museum.

True Statements From Licking Co.

They Are from Your Neighbors and Friends and Not from Unknown People of a Distant State.

From the American, Newark, Ohio.

Mrs. Mary Andrews was visited at her pleasant and beautiful little cottage home on North Street, one of the prettiest residence streets in the city of Newark, Ohio, where she was found busily employed in her domestic duties.

Mrs. Andrews came here from England some thirty-five years ago and since her arrival has been a resident of Licking county, and for thirteen years has resided in Newark. She has many friends throughout the western part of the county as well as in the city, whose confidence in her is strong and who realize that she will praise nothing unless it is worthy of it. She said to the reporter:

"For many years I had been a sufferer from indigestion and the accompanying ills that dyspepsia and constipation bring in their train, and was so miserable that at times I did not care whether I lived or died. I was troubled with bloating and never free from pain. I noticed in the daily Newark American an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in which the same symptoms were given that I was suffering from. I had tried one medicine after another without receiving any special benefit nor had the local physicians given me the relief that I should have had, and I began to feel very much discouraged. Thus it was that I procured from the druggist a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People without much hope of their doing me any good, and was agreeably disappointed to find that the first box was doing me a great deal of good. My health was better, I could eat heartier and enjoy what I ate as I had not for years. It was with renewed hope that I purchased a second box of the pills and I soon was restored to a much better state of health than for many years back.

"Of course I felt rejoiced over the change in my physical condition and my family were equally happy. I do not like to take medicine, but the form in which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are put up makes them so easy to take that it was really a pleasure to use them and follow the directions closely. The pills took the bloat from me almost immediately. That has been two years ago, and since then I have enjoyed splendid health. Of course winter is harder on me than summer as I do not go out much during the cold weather, but the past two winters I have been in good health. I firmly believe that there is no medicine which will render the same aid to womankind that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People does. While I had them in the house every member of my family used them and were all benefited by them. I cannot praise them too much for the good they did me, and I believe they assisted very materially in prolonging my life. I recommend them to my neighbors for their use."

Miss Alice Andrews, the daughter of the lady giving her testimony to the worth of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People was sitting by during the conversation, and she gave her views of the value of the pills by stating the good it had done her mother, in bringing back to her cheeks the ruddy hue of health and in restoring her appetite and strength.

The entire family believe in the efficacy of the pills, and that they are all that is claimed for them.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

The Ins and Outs of It.

If you get best wear out of a coat, best work must have gone into it. You can't get good bread out of poor flour.

Moral: You can't get the best out of anything, unless the best is in it; and the best has to be put in before it can be taken out. Now, we have a rule to test those sarsaparillas with a big "best" on the bottle. "Tell us what's put in you and we'll decide for ourselves about the best." That's fair. But these modest sarsaparillas say: "Oh! we can't tell. It's a secret. Have faith in the label." . . . Stop! There's one exception; one sarsaparilla that has no secret to hide. It's Ayer's. If you want to know what goes into Ayer's Sarsaparilla, ask your doctor to write for the formula. Then you can satisfy yourself that you get the best of the sarsaparilla argument when you get Ayer's.

It kills doubts but cures doubters.

Petersburg.

Died—At his home in Cincinnati, on the morning of Sept. 15, of liver disease, Mr. Jacob Workum, of the firm of Frieberg & Workum. He had succeeded his brother, Ezekiel, as a member of the firm and would no doubt, have proved a worthy successor to that prince among business men. Ben Jarrell and John Geiszler attended the funeral last Friday, and report it the largest funeral they ever saw. It took three carriages to carry the flowers and there were thought to be a hundred buggies or more in the procession.

Dr. Jonas Terrill, of Covington, was called here to see Mrs. Eliza Wingate, last Tuesday. Her case was a very critical one, but she is now in a fair way to recover. M. F. Wingate, husband of the above mentioned lady, has had a back set, but is better again. Their son, Gaines, has had a severe attack of the same disease, but is doing very well at this writing.

Mr. George Berkshire attended the Bryan meeting at Louisville last week. He was highly pleased with what he saw and heard.

Mary Trester, of Aurora, visited her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Sebree, who has been quite sick, last week.

At a corn cutting frolic, a few days ago, Jim Nixon and his brother, Robert, got to wrestling and finally got in earnest. When it became necessary for them to be parted their father hit Jim with a bucket and his condition is at present thought to be hopeless. It was all brought about by too much beer.

Florence

The Republicans of this precinct, aided by some Kenton county Republicans, are making strong efforts to capture this precinct for Ernst at the coming election. Last Monday night they held a meeting at the colored Baptist church, which was attended by a small crowd of colored men and women. The speakers were a Mr. Rice, of Covington, and a colored man named Gaines, who was a gauger under John W. Finnell. Everything passed off quietly which was in strong contrast with one announced for last Saturday night at Kroger's saloon, where the attractions advertized were Dick Ernst and a fish-fry. Mr. Ernst did not put in an appearance, but in his place came Col. Striger, of Covington. His speech was mainly a defense of the tariff and the McKinley bill. He touched the money question lightly, and had good reasons for it, as his remarks showed he knows but little about it. During the course of his remarks there was confusion, caused by some of the boys who had more beer than fish. Col. Striger stated, several times in his speech, that he would answer any question propounded to him, and, at the close of his remarks, some of the silver men, who have been studying Coin Harvey's catechism, asked him some questions that caused him to make admissions that were in direct conflict with statements made in his speech. His evident discomfeiture caused the crowd to give him the laugh, and Tom Flunell, the boss Republican of Erlanger, seeing the drift of affairs, called to chairman Riggs to take him down, or Maine would go Democratic at the next election. Fearing the result in Maine, Riggs pulled him down, and announced the meeting adjourned.

There is a petition in circulation here for the formation of a Bryan club, and next Saturday night there will be a public meeting to finally organize it. Severel prominent speakers have been invited, and are expected to be present and deliver speeches. We hope every Democrat, and all those who believe with us on the silver question, will be present and join the club.

The demand for hair dye has increased wonderfully since it was ascertained that the baby found at Wilhoit's had a red head. The boys with auburn mustaches are blacking up so as to be above suspicion.

Next Sunday the sacred service of Forty Hours Devotion will begin at the Catholic church, and will last several days. Rev. Father Kolbe has selected new music appropriate to the occasion.

Sam Johnson was in town last Saturday. He said he intended to challenge Dick Ernst to debate the silver question, but hearing that Ernst would not be here left for home before the meeting opened.

Erlanger.

Dr. Scott has returned from a pleasant visit to friends in Williamstown.

The Elsmeres defeated the Erlangers 26 to 22.

At the singing school last Saturday evening Mr. E. H. Snyder's mule got tired of standing on the same side of the fence that the buggy was on and concluded to go over on the other side. Luckily nothing was broken except the fence.

Quite a number of our young folks enjoyed a very pleasant time at the residence of Chas. Clarkson a few nights ago.

Rev. H. Max Lentz is holding a very interesting meeting at Ebenezer Lutheran church.

Big Bone.

Last Tuesday, Sept. 15th, Big Bone delegated J. D. Moore, M. C. Carroll and J. Harmon Polly to attend the Bryan ovation at Maysville, Ky., in a body and report at the Springs the general political outlook as indicated by the Maysville meeting. They visited Maysville, saw and heard Bryan, "The greatest man on God's green earth—the Moses of the common people" also; they saw the greatest assemblage of people that ever congregated on the streets of Maysville, and they report if what they saw and heard be a just criterion, Bryan and free-silver will be elected Nov. 3rd by the largest majority ever known in the United States. They assert that they never witnessed such enthusiasm as is being manifested generally in this the most important presidential campaign ever engaged in by the American freeman.

The Big Bone Springs Bryan and Sewall free coinage of silver and gold club had their initial meeting last Saturday with president John F. Green in the chair, Harry Adams Secretary, and J. D. Moore assistant Secretary. There were a goodly number present and much enthusiasm was shown during the meeting. The soliciting committee have made arrangements to have good speakers present at each meeting of the club, especially Saturday next afternoon at 2 o'clock. All members should be present and all others who desire to hear a good talk unite with our club.

Walton.

The Walton Canning Co., has suspended operation and the tomatoes delivered under contract will be shipped to Snider & Co., Cincinnati.

The pickle business has been suspended for more than two weeks, and the extent and variety of profanity bestowed on Weller & Co., would have made a Sunday School teacher stumble and fall over his his own shadow if he should have heard it. There is no doubt but that he has treated the growers outrageously if not infamously. Had he been here on the occasion when he violated his contract with them, any one could have seen that the Walton people would have witnessed an old time neck-tie matinee,

The gold standard Democratic adjunct committee had a meeting here last week and ifany business was transacted only the four members present knew what it was. They or rather one of them gave out a good one on Col. Berry. In all his races for Congress he has had the sympathy and active exertion of a Republican friend, Mr. David Locke. The Colonel called at Mr. Locke's office the other day and said, "Well Dave, you are going to do what you can for me this time, aint you?" "No," said Lock, "When I was for you before you were a sound money man, but now you have turned over and are for the free coinage of silver." "Trust me Dave, trust me," said the Colonel impressively.

[And the above is told by a sound money man, who wants to see Mr. Ernst elected to Congress, which destroys the effect it is desired it should have.—ED.]

The Ladies Aid Society gave a birthday social last Saturday night for the benefit of the Christian Church. It was a very interesting and amusing entertainment and was very satisfactory to all—large and small. Tickets were sent out enclosing a tiny purse in which the ticket holders were to deposit a cent for each year of their age, and the door-keeper gave a refreshment check for everyone presenting a ticket. Bro. J. M. White officiating as Master of ceremonies, announced a glee.

"Away at Break of Day', by Miss Allie Piatt, Messrs. Bagby, Grubbs and Dr. Gaines, which was rendered in delightful style.

Recitation—"The Heart's Charity." by the inimitable Prof. Reed.

Recitation—"A Literary Nightmare" presented in a capital manner by Prof. Pryor, elocutionist at Walton Academy.

Song—"The Old Canoe," most exquisitely sung by Miss Piatt and produced quite a sensation.

"Good Bye John," by Prof. Reed, who was now warmed up and in fine fettle, bringing down the house at every pause.

"The Chariot Race," in Ben Hur by Prof. Pryor, was as scientific and exciting an elocutionary display, as the most ardent race goer could desire and the performer was cheered as heartily as though every one in the audience witnessed the actual race. The Professor is certainly entitled to the degree of Past Master in the elocutionary art. The realism of the description was as near perfection as it possibly could have been.

The comic song of "Shabby Genteel," entitled Prof. Reed not only to the cake but also to the entire bake-shop, horse, wagon, etc. Joe has a peculiar way and it took the audience by storm.

Altogether the audience was more than pleased, and the performers were warmly congratulated. The children were satisfied with the ice-cream and whatever else there may have been on the refreshment table. The writer gave his check to Gladys Wilson who invited the junior Judge Botts to share the cream with her, which she soon left him to finish. At one time it looked as if he was about to give it up, but bracing himself with heoric energy he finished the dish, determined that such a good lay out should not be wasted.

Hebron.

Jack Frost visited us Saturday night.

The ball game between Hebron and Burlington, at Burlington, was postponed until next Saturday on account of the weather.

Quite a number of the young people of this place were most charmingly entertained Saturday night by Miss Jo. Grubbs, of Taylorsport.

The choir, under the leadership of Walter Crigler, rendered some very fine music Sunday.

There will be a game of ball here next Saturday morning. Hebron second nine vs. Francisville.

The public school is progressing nicely under Prof. Harm.

The Democratic club was reorganized here last Saturday night and the following officers elected: John Stephens, President; Dr. W. B. Grubbs, J. H. Walton and J. B Crigler, Vice-President; ;Owen Watts, corresponding Secretary; Walter Gordon, Recoding Secretary; J. T. Conner, Treasurer. After the election of efficers J. H. Walton made the club a speech on the silver question.

Constance.

Rev. Hood and Peno have closed a very successful protracted meeting here.

Eugene Clark, of Covington, spoke on the money question here Saturday.

Just see how people differ in their likes and dislikes. In some parts of the State the Hiles compulsory school law is very unpopular, and in others it is the most popular law enacted. Here in the mountains we have never heard aught against it. On the contrary, school trustees, school superintendents and the people generally like the law, and are loud in their praise of it. It has increased the schools at least 25 per cent. We have never heard a sensible argument urged against it. The cranks don't like it, but that is one of the evidences of its merit and real value. Some people who don't like any law at all don't like it, and that is additional proof that it is good. We dislike to see fault found with a good thing without reason. It shows prejudice and dense ignorance.—Jackson Hustler.

Campaign Song.

[BY T. L. S.]

O say, can you see, in this financial gloom,
Any hope for the poor man in this land of the free?
Say, is there no hope for him, this side of the tomb;
No, not if the gold-bug is his master to be:
For the star-spangled banner now trailled in the dust
By the rich man, the gold-bug, the millionaire trust,
And the poor man—even now—they regard as their slave,
In this land of the free, and home of the brave.

O say, can't you see, through the hypocrits' talk,
Now sung in the land for McK and his alma,
By the gold-bug aristocrats of Wall St., New York,
Who are leading the clans of McKinley and Palmer.
They talk "Sound Money" but don't say what it is,
Tell the poor man, gold only, can cure all his ills,
While they're already forging the fetters to bind
And make him their slave in both body and mind.

And say, don't you know that a gold-bug's a snob,
Their corporate bosses have informed their employes,
They must vote for McKinley—or all lose their job;
Is not this then, making the poor man their toys?
McK. by your lief I'll explain to my brothers,
The gold-bugs are not what they seem to some others;
For when we comment on a judge's decission,
They rise up and cry—sedition! sedition!

In the year '91, McKinley did say
In a speech at Toledo against his friend (?) Grover,
That silver was good, if it was in that day,
Then is it not now—in this country all over?
O, McKinley, (although he's by no means a fool
Has suffered the gold-bugs to make him their tool;
They made him a platform, and told him he must Stand solidly on it, or the country would "bust."

Although at long distance he viewed the White House,
The attraction was potent, he could not resist,
The question "shall I be a man or a mouse?"
He decided—and then the gold-bug-rod kissed.
Should he be elected, this country is gone,
The gold-bugs will own it, "as sure as you're born."
Then the star-spangled banner no longer will wave
O'er a land of the free, and a home for the brave.

The gold-bugs just worship "the almighty dollar,"
On this and the other side of the great waters;
For the titles of England, they'll get down and wallow,
And swap off their gold, and their sons and their daughters.
If this traffic continues, can't you now see the trend?
Is a titled nobility—won't that be the end—
To rule this land of the free, and the home of the brave?
With our liberties all covered up in their grave.

Can free-men submit to this gold-bug dictation;
With their prospective nobles to rule o'er the land?
No! with William J. Bryan to rule o'er the nation,
We'll still have a country free, noble and grand.
Then rally the voters, get all of them out;
For our leader is true, and our friend without doubt;
He is qualified too, and his fame bright and fair—
A good man; and worthy the President's chair.

"They say" that free silver will ruin the land,
We know it will take the wind out of their sails;
For the laborer is not a mouse—but a man;
And in true patriotism the poor man never fails.
For his country's best interests he never will cease,
To defend her in war and rejoice in peace.
Then the star-spangled banner forever shall wave,
O'er the land of the free, and this home of the brave.

Then rally around the star-spangled banner,
That represents freedom and happiness too,
We'll elect our man! go tell that to Hanna—
"Just tell him you saw me," I think that will do.
Yes, rally around with the star-spangled banner,
And you'll ascertain "What's the matter with Hanna."
Yes, we'll shake the old emblem of the home of the brave,
Over William McKinley's political grave.

OSCAR GAINES, Secretary.

As Tony Bentler was coming from the Ludlow Lagoon, one night last week, about midnight, an attempt was made to hold him up just before he reached the bridge across Dry creek, near Constance. He was driving at a good rate of speed when he discovered he was approaching two men, one standing on either side of the road. They ordered Mr. Bentler to halt as soon as he was close enough, but instead of obeying the command, he gave his horse a cut with the whip and sped by the would-be highwaymen like a meteor. A buggy followed Mr. Bentler on to Constance, where it took the Mineola pike, on which William Tanner was met. An attempt was made to rob him, but he resisted the attack bravely, and he succeeded in getting away from the robbers but not until they had torn his shirt off. Mr. Bentler is satisfied the plans to rob him were arranged in Bromley by four strangers, two of whom left the town just ahead of him in a buggy, while the other two followed him in another buggy. Their suspicious actions had put him on his guard.

POSTAL CLERKS

Adopt Resolutions in Regard to the Regulation of Salaries.

Denver, Col., Sept. 17.—The National Association of Post Office Clerks have adopted after debate an amended classification bill which makes a material increase in all salaries. In first-class offices the minimum is $600, increasing $100 each year until a maximum of $1,200 is reached.

Promotion to a salary of $1,400 can be effected with the recommendation of the postmaster general. The assistant postmaster, superintendent of mails, superintendent of city delivery, cashier, superintendents of money order and register departments receive a salary based on a percentage of the postmaster's salary.

In second class post offices the minimum is increased from $300 to $500 with an annual increase of $100 annually until a maximum of $1,000 is reached. This is an increase of $200 in the maximum salary.

The delegates express their entire satisfaction with the bill as amended. It will be submitted to the department and every effort will be made to secure its passage in the next congress.

After a long and exciting contest the post office clerks complete the election of officers of the national association as follows: President, Benj. Parkhurst, Washington; first vice president, J. F. Coughlin, Boston; second vice president, J. F. Dane, Denver; secretary, Wm. Agnew, Cleveland, treasurer, E. P. Lincoln, Boston; executive committee, J. A. Thrasher, of Baltimore; Harry Barber, Gloversville, N. Y.; J. A. Donahue, Chicago; finance committee, C. Delancy, D. F. Supple, San Francisco; W. S. Campbell, Cincinnati, O.

THE FRENCH PRESS

Ridicules the Story of the Existence of a Dynamite Conspiracy in Europe.

Paris, Sept. 17.—In response to inquiries made at the prefecture of police in regard to the rumor that Alex. Sullivan, of Chicago, the Irish leader, had been arrested here, a representative of the United Associated Presses was informed that not only was there no truth in the report that Mr. Sullivan had been taken into custody, but that his arrest had not even been meditated by the French authorities.

The French public press ridicule the whole story of the existence of a dynamite conspiracy, which they declare is an English political trick intended to interfere with the proposed visit to France of the czar.

It is learned upon creditable authority that the French cabinet gives so little credence to the English police officials story of a dynamite conspiracy that it will probably refuse to grant the request for Tynan's extradition.

Glasgow, Sept. 17.—Edward Bell, the alleged dynamiter, who was arrested here on Saturday, was again arraigned in court Wednesday morning and remitted to London, for which place he will start Wednesday evening, in charge of officers from Scotland Yards. After he was returned to his cell he continued his cool demeanor and maintained his absolute reticence.

TWO HUNDRED

Of the Sultan's Body Guard Cut Down While Fighting With Their Deputed Successors.

Berlin, Sept. 17.—A dispatch to the Frankfort Zeitung from Constantinople published Wednesday says that the guard of Turkish troops on duty at the Yildiz palace, composed of four companies of Albanians, was forcibly disarmed Tuesday evening in the presence of a large body of troops and was replaced by five Seraskier battalions, and that 200 persons were killed during the attack on the palace, and continues:

"Redran Pasha, governor of Constantinople, has been dismissed. and the Sultan's brothers have been arrested.

"Although the Sultan still refuses the permission in response to the demand of the powers that six iron clads should have free passage of the Dardanelles, a proclamation has been read in the Mosque, which is evidently calculated to prepare the population for this event."

A Lynching Probable.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 17.—A special to the Constitution from Cuthbert, Ga., says:

Authentic reports indicate the capture of the Negro, Lum Warren, who made the desperate assault upon Mrs. John Bass, in Terrell county, near the Dougherty county line, and that the capturing party are on their way with the prisoner to the scene of the crime. The prospects are that Warren will be lynched. A previous report that he had been captured and burned was incorrect.

Officers of the Laurada Arrested.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 17.—United States Marshal Tannan Wednesday afternoon arrested James J. Rand, first mate, Hans Johansen, second mate, and Chas. Camp, quartermaster of the steamer Laurada, and took them before United States Commissioner Smith. They were held in $200 bail each for their appearance at the hearing of Capt. Murray on Saturday as witnesses. The crew have been paid off and discharged. The vessel is still lying in the Delaware off this city.

Impaled on a Pitchfork.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Sept. 17.—Emory Jacobs was thrashing wheat on J. M. Lyon's farm near here. He slid from a straw stack and struck on a pitchfork leaning against the stack. One of the prongs entered his body, making a frightful wound. He can not recover.

Two Killed in an Explosion.

Denison, Tex., Sept. 17.—Nobles' cotton gin, 14 miles west of here, blew up. Dan McSwain, the proprietor, and a boy named Peter Juggett, were instantly killed. About 12 people were more or less hurt.

THREE FRIENDS.

She Is Held at Fernandina, Fla., Pending Instructions From Washington.

The Vessel Had Taken on Plenty of Coal and About Three Weeks' Stores—It Is the Impression That She Was Again Bound for Cuba.

Fernandina, Fla., Sept. 18.—The Three Friends was taken in charge Thursday evening by Special Agent of the Treasury Department John Anderson and held pending instructions from Washington. The Three Friends moved up to the coal docks in charge of quarantine officers Thursday evening and took on about 25 tons of coal and also about three weeks stores. It all looked very suspicious, especially as Mr. Barr who is one of the owners said the boat would leave at 6 o'clock Thursday evening. While loading coal a deputy collector boarded the Three Friends and demanded the vessel's papers, but the captain refused to give them up.

After finishing taking on coal and stores she went back to the quarantine station and was seen to leave, but Anderson stopped her. The impression is that she was again bound for Cuba.

INHUMAN TREATMENT

Of Negro Convicts in the Arkansas Penitentiary—Iron Rings Welded About Their Necks and Forced to Work.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 18.—The state penitentiary board has ordered the following discharges: J. W. Phillips, warden at Gray's Camp; R. R. McIntosh, warden at West's Camp; J. P. Bartlett, warden at Gallaway Camp; W. B. McCarthy, warden at Wrightsville Camp, and Vincent Potts, riding boss at Wrightsville. The general charge preferred was addiction to strong drink and cruel treatment of convicts.

The most flagrant act happened at West's Camp last Friday.

Two colored convicts had escaped, and when captured they were severely whipped. Iron rings were welded about their necks and one end of a chain fastened to the rings and the other to their waists. They were unable to straighten up when Mr. Mills saw them, and the chains were drawn so tight the men were unable to lift up their heads, being compelled to work in that condition. Subsequently the wardens and several of the guards became drunk and held a kangaroo court and sentenced the same Negroes to be whipped again, the sentence being carried out with cruel severity.

THE PHYSICIANS.

Mississippi Valley Medical Association Select Officers.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 18.—At Thursday morning's session of the Mississippi Valley Medical association the nominating committee reported the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Dr. Thos. Hunt Stuckey, Louisville; first vice president, Dr. Charles A. Wheaton, St. Paul; second vice president, Dr. Paul Paquin, St. Louis; secretary, Dr. Henry E. Truley, Louisville.

The next convention will be held in Lexington, Ky., beginning the last Tuesday in October. Dr. J. B. Murphy, of Chicago, Thursday gave a demonstration upon the removal of the gasserian gaugalin. Dr. Hugh T. Patrick, of Chicago, read an interesting paper on "Electro-diagnosis and Electro-therapeuties Simplified." Dr. A. J. Ochsner, of Chicago, read a very interesting paper on nerve zutures and other operations for injuries to the nerves of the under extremities.

OF SALISBURY'S PLANS

The United States Government Is Fully Informed—British Vessels to Force the Straits of Dardanelles.

London, Sept. 18.—(U. A. P.)—St. James' Gazette publishes a special dispatch from Washington in which it is asserted that President Cleveland is determined that the United States cruiser Bancroft now on her way to Turkish waters, shall enter the Bosporus. The government at Washington, the dispatch says, is fully informed of the plans of Lord Salisbury, and if the ships of the British fleet force the Straits of Dardanelles the American ships will follow and preserve order, without engaging the Turkish forts.

Several of the leading provincial papers, including the Leeds Mercury (liberal) and the Yorkshire Post (conservative), concur in the view that the joint action of the British and American warships at Constantinople would be a magnificent and effective co-operation.

EDWARD BELL,

The Alleged Irish Dynamiter, Remanded for a Week.

London, Sept. 18.—Edward Bell, the alleged Irish dynamiter recently arrested at Glasgow, was arraigned at Bow street police court here Thursday. He is described as Edward Bell, alias Edward J. Ivory, an American, and a hotelkeeper of 211 Lexington avenue, New York. Bell is accused of conspiring with others to cause an explosion in the United Kingdom. After formal evidence of his arrest had been given by the police he was remanded for a week and will be removed to Holloway jail Thursday afternoon.

Unique Exhibit at Greencastle, Ind.

Greencastle, Ind., Sept. 18.—The leading merchants of this city recently offered a series of prizes to fruit growers and gardeners of this county for the finest exhibits of fruits and vegetables. The responses were liberal, and the promoters of the enterprise took an original method of displaying the fruits. Each business house devoted one large show window to its special group of exhibits, and the result was that the stores were besieged with sightseers all day. The county is one of the leaders of the state in fine fruits, and many rare collections were shown. Liberal prizes will be awarded by judges.

DUN'S REVIEW.

There Is No Distinct Improvement in Business—Speculative Buying of Materials for Future Use Continues.

New York, Sept. 19.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade Saturday says:

There is still no distict improvement in business, although conditions favor it. Confidence slowly rises, speculative buying of materials for future use continues, imports of gold do not cease and the Bank of England has not tried to check them by further advance in rates, as the weight of the demand now falls upon France. But an enormous business is held back until the future is more clear.

Outside of speculative markets the impression grows that certain and safe revival may not be expected until November.

In cotton, hides, wool and pig iron buying openly speculative in character marks the current business.

Resumption of work by a good part of the Fall River cotton mills and advances in some kinds of cotton goods helped to raise the price of middling uplands to 8⅞c again, though realizing sent it down to 8¼c.

Weakness in stocks was partly due to small earnings, St. Paul especially reporting decrease and all reports for September thus far decrease 10-6 per cent. from last year and 13.1 from 1892, returns being less favorable for the second than for the first week. The westbound movement is light, especially in dry goods and shoe, but eastbound tonnage from Chicago has been as large as last year, and four per cent. larger than in 1892.

The one industry showing increase of working force is the cotton manufacture, restriction of output having secured more healthy demand for some goods. Most of the mills have started or are about to start, though the uncertainty of the cotton market embarrasses prices. Prices of staple goods have advanced so generally that the average of representative quotations are 6.7 per cent. higher than in the first week of August. No such improvement is seen in woolens, but the speculative buying of wool, nearly all at Boston, has raised sales to 17,775,300 pounds for the past three weeks against 17,133,470 last year and 24,572,400 in 1892.

The iron and steel manufacture is still waiting for business with nearly half its producing capacity idle, but hopefulness and the speculative buying of pig iron sustain prices. Sales said to amount to 25,000 tons have been made of Alabama iron for shipment to England, but the home demand does not enlarge at all.

Gold imports continue, over $5,000,000 having been ordered, making $30,385,000 in all, of which about $24,890,000 has arrived. The interior movement draws off the money about as fast as it comes, $4,650,000 having gone westward this week. The New Orleans difficulties have passed, but the northwest is making large drafts.

Failures for the past week have been 317 in the United States against 213 last year, and 32 in Canada against 32 last year.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

In Mexico Attacked by a Mob—The Windows Broken—Minister Ransom Appealed To

Mexico City, Sept. 19.—In the night of the 15th inst. a mob attacked the Presbyterian Church at Aguas Calientes, the pastor of which is Rev. D. H. Sharp. The mob broke the windows and doors with stones. Mr. Sharp's house was also attacked. On the 16th inst. a crowd attacked the Morelos Protestant college in the same city, breaking every window in it. Several arrests have been made, and the authorities are anxious to identify the leaders. United States Minister Ransom has also been appealed to to use his best offices with the government to secure the punishment of the offenders.

BORDER BANDITS.

Troops Will Assist the Marshals in an Attempt to Capture Them.

Silver City, N. M., Sept. 19.—Capt. Pitcher, with 50 men, composing one troop of the First United States cavalry, left here at one o'clock Friday morning for Deming to assist the marshals' posse in another attempt to capture the gang of border bandits which recently made the attack on the Mexican custom house at Las Potomas. The gang numbers 24 men and are reported encamped in the Floridas mountains south of Deming in New Mexico, having crossed the line after the attack. The Mexican troops are also in pursuit, Exodus From Chicago for Canton.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—The biggest exodus of the campaign for Canton took place Friday night, when over 4,000 members of railroad "sound-money" clubs, McKinley and Tanner clubs, the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company's Sound Money club, the Railway Commercial Men's and Western Union Telegraphers' Sound Money clubs went on ten special trains to pay their respects to Maj. McKinley. There was an abundance of enthusiasm and noise.

Bryan in North Carolina.

Goldsboro, N. C., Sept. 19.—Wm. Jennings Bryan arrived here at 11:30 Thursday night, where the private car he is traveling in was side-tracked until 9 o'clock Friday morning, at which hour he delivered an address from a platform to a large crowd which had been waiting since early morning. Bryan was escorted by the Goldsboro rifles, and at the conclusion of the speaking left for Rocky Mount.

Can't Be Used for Political Purposes.

Washington, Sept. 19.—A dispatch from Petersburg, Va., says: Gov. O'Ferrall has declined to allow the use of the field pieces of the old R. E. Lee battery for firing a salute in honor of Mr. Bryan's visit here Friday. His excellency says he does not intend state property to be used for political purposes.

Death Sentence Commuted.

Conway, Ark., Sept. 19.—The sentence of John Carter, who was to have been executed here Friday for criminal assault, has been commuted to life imprisonment.

ABDUL-HAMID,

The Sultan of Turkey, in Danger of Assassination.

The British Are Aroused and Meetings Are Held in Several Cities—Lord Salisbury Called Upon to End the Reign of Terror and Massacre.

London, Sept. 21.—The Daily Mail publishes a dispatch from Vienna saying that several men have been killed during the last few days while attempting to reach the sultan's apartments with the object of assassinating him.

Mass meetings to express the indignation felt against the sultan were held in Birmingham and other cities in England. Resolutions were adopted which in general terms called upon the government to take immediate and active steps to end the reign of terror in Turkey.

LORD SALISBURY.

In Bristol and elsewhere amendments to the resolutions were offered urging Great Britain to act forcibly alone, if necessary, but these amendments were defeated.

A dispatch in the New Frie Presse of Vienna says that the sultan has commissioned a Russian general to inspect the forts of the Dardanelles. This, the Presse adds, is the sultan's reply to England's request that he abdicate.

The Globe and other English papers which at first threw doubt upon the statement that Lord Salisbury had determined to take independent action against the sultan in the event of further massacres, now admit that there are signs of "a stronger British policy," which will venture far in direct coercion of the porte.

It must be confessed, however, that this policy seems slow of application. Newspaper articles such as those which have appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette and the St. James' Gazette, pointing out the benefits that would accrue to the Christian subjects of the porte through an alliance between Great Britain, the United States and Italy, also tend to show that England is not over-anxious to undertake by herself the settlement of the Turkish difficulties. Cynical observers of events say that Great Britain will never be able to use the United States as a cat's-paw for drawing the eastern chestnut out of the fire.

ABDUL HAMID, SULTAN OF TURKEY.

A few days ago Mr. Gladstone wrote a letter to the organizers of the Liverpool anti-sultan demonstration declaring that he would not attend if the resolution to be submitted should include a summons to the government to declare war against Turkey. In reply the organizers said they would be satisfied if Mr. Gladstone would attend the meeting.

MISSISSIPPI LYNCHING.

Walter Brown, Who Clubbed Mrs. Slayden, Shot and Cremated.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 21.—At Slayden's Crossing, Miss., between Lamar, Miss., and Grand Junction, Tenn., Walter Brown, a young Negro, was shot to death and then burned. He made a murderous assault upon Mrs. Slayden, postmistress, aged 73, late Saturday evening. Brown dunned Mrs. Slayden for a small sum of money which she is supposed to have owed him.

She told him to look in a bureau drawer and get it. Finding $10 in the drawer, the Negro struck the woman on the head with a bludgeon, fracturing her scull.

He at once fled, taking the money with him. His victim was discovered shortly after, almost unconscious. She managed to relate the story of the assault.

Three different parties were at once organized, some of the members being colored men, and the pursuit began. At an early hour Sunday morning Brown was captured near Grand Junction and taken back to the scene of the crime, where he was promptly identified. His captors riddled him with lead, and afterward piled wood about the body and burned it.

Stanford, Ky., Sept. 21.—Suit was filed here against the Louisville and Nashville railroad for $20,000 damages by Hill & McRoberts, attorneys for W. B. Adams, for killing his son, Charles Adams, who was a brakeman, two months ago at Parksville.

Three of a Kind.

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 21.—A colored woman named Burris, living in the suburbs, gave birth a few days ago to three vigorous pickaninies. The proud father has named them William McKinley, Garrett Hobart and Mark Hanna Burriss.

LOVE LIGHTENS LABOR.

Advantages Country People Have Over Their City Brothers.

The countryman has, if he be wise enough to perceive it, good reason to count himself a luckier person altogether than he whose work is done in town. For the latter, says Black and White, unless he be exceeding well off, there are few pleasures easily obtainable in the intervals of toil. Food and sleep are excellent in their way, but they are necessities, and they are usually taken under such circumstances as to have nothing of the character of luxuries. The countryman is luckier than this. It may be that his toil is tiring and that his wage is a small one, but he labors in such a way that he always gets the fullest enjoyment out of his rest, and when he pauses to take his midday meal it is under conditions that would make a perfect holiday for the city, and to whose charm even the man accustomed to them cannot grow callous. He lies at ease among the sheaves that he has cut, and the sun, whose ardent rays made his toil the heavier, now adds to his delight. Moreover, he eats with the pleasantest of waiters to see to his comfort; it may be his wife who brings his dinner, or perhaps it is some buxom girl from the farm who is not yet his, though she will some day be, as she knows within herself, and he is not afraid to believe. Verily, his toil is hard in itself, but he must be a singularly discontented person if he do not find it light amid these surroundings and under these pleasant conditions.

ASHAMED OF HIS BLUNDER.

Zeal of a Hound Led Him Into a Mortifying Mistake.

Up among the green hills of Vermont two country ball nines were contending for supremacy one hot afternoon in an old pasture. Among the assembled spectators was a sad-faced, lop-eared "houn' dog" which had previously been investigating the contents of a woodchuck hole. He had worked his passage in, says Forest and Stream, until no dog was visible, but a steady stream of dirt shooting out like the blast from the blowpipe of a sawmill proclaimed that the investigation was still on. Becoming tired of this, the hound was sitting down watching the home team getting "done up," when suddenly, without warning, he shot across the field with a trajectory as flat as a 32:40 and with nearly the same velocity. The cause was soon apparent. Several little girls were coming up through a hollow and one was just tall enough for her brown hat to show through the fringe of grass on the rising ground in front. When the hound came near enough for the supposed woodchuck to merge into a hat with a girl under it he stopped an instant with a look of horrified surprise. A yell arose from the assembled farmers who had seen the incident, and this so mortified the hound that he made straight for home and was invisible for several days.

THE DAY IS AT HAND.

The Almighty's Finger Guides the Chariot of Our Destiny

That Rolls so Close to Ruin, But Never Strikes—Wise Heads Ward Off a Conflict and Deft Hands Prevent Some Dire Disaster—Talmage's Sermon.

Dr. Talmage's text was Romans xiii, 12: "The day is at hand."

Back from the mountains and the seaside, and the springs, and farmhouse, your cheeks bronzed and your spirits lighted, I hail you home again with the words of Gehazi to the Shunamite: "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?" On some faces I see the mark of recent grief, but all along the track of tears I see the story of resurrection and reunion when all tears are done; the deep plowing of the keel, followed by the flash of phosphorescence. Now that I have asked you in regard to your welfare, you naturally ask how I am. Very well, thank you. Whether it was the bracing air of the mountains, or a bath in the surf of Long Island Beach, or whether it is the joy of standing in this great group of warm-hearted friends, or whether it is a new appreciation of the goodness of God, I can not tell. I simply know I am happy. It was said that John Moffatt, the great Methodist preacher, occasionally got fast in his sermon, and to extricate himself would cry "Hallelujah!" I am in no such predicament to-day, but I am full of the same raphsodic ejaculation. Starting out this morning on a new ecclesiastical year, I want to give you the keynote of my next 12 months' ministry. I want to set it to the tunes of "Antioch," "Ariel" and Coronation." I want to put a new trumpet stop into my sermons. We do wrong if we allow our personal sorrows to interfere with the glorious fact that the kingdom is coming. We are wicked if we allow apprehension of national disaster to put down our faith in God and in the mission of our American people. The God who hath been on the side of this nation since the 4th of July, 1776, will see to it that this nation shall not commit suicide on November 3, 1896. By the time the unparalleled harvests of this summer get down to the seaboard we shall be standing in a sunburst of national prosperity that will paralyze the pessimists who by their evil prophecies are blaspheming the God who hath blest this nation as he hath blest no other.

In all our Christian work you and I want more of the element of gladness. No man had a right to say that Christ never laughed. Do you suppose that he was glum at the wedding in Cana of Galilee? Do you suppose that Christ was unresponsive when the children clambered over His knee and shoulder at His own invitation? Do you suppose that the Evangelist meant nothing when he said of Christ: "He rejoiced in spirit." Do you believe that the Divine Christ who pours all the waters over the rocks at Vernal Falls, Yosemite, does not believe in the sparkle and gallop and tumultuous joy and rushing raptures of human life? I believe not only that the morning laughs, and that the mountains laugh, and that the seas laugh, and that the cascades laugh, but that Christ laughed. Moreover, take a laugh and a tear into an alembic, and assay them, and test them, and analyze them, and you will often find as much of the pure gold of religion in a laugh as in a tear. Deep spiritul joy always shows itself in facial illumination. John Wesley said he was sure of a good religious impression being produced because of what he calls the great gladness he saw among the people. Godless merriment is blasphemy anywhere, but expression of Christian joy is appropriate everywhere.

Moreover, the outlook of the world ought to stir us to gladness. Astronomers disturbed many people by telling them that there was danger of stellar collision. We were told by these astronomers that there are worlds coming very near together, and that we shall have plagues and wars and tumults and perhaps the world's destruction. Do not be scared. If you have ever stood at a railroad center, where 10 or 20 or 30 rail tracks cross each other, and seen that by the movement of the switch one or two inches the train shoots this way and that without colliding, then you may understand how 50 worlds may come within an inch of disaster and that inch be as good as a million miles. If a human switch tender can shoot the trains this way and that without harm, can not the hand that for thousands of years has upheld the universe keep our little world out of harm's way? Christian geologists tell us that this world was millions of years in building. Well, now, I do not think God would take millions of years to build a house which was to last only 6,000 years.

The first ray of the dawn I see in the gradual substitution of diplomatic skill for human butchery. Within the last 25 years there have been international differences which would have brought a shock of arms in any other day, but which were peacefully adjusted, the pen taking the place of the sword. The Venezuelan controversy in any other age of the world would have brought shock of arms, but now is being so quietly adjusted that no one knows just how it is being settled.

So, the quarrel about the Canadian fisheries in any other age would have caused war between the United States and England. England said: "Pay me for the invasion of my Canadian fisheries." The United States said: "I will not pay anything." Well, the two nations say: "I guess we had better leave the whole matter to a commission." The commission is appointed and the commission examines the affair and the commission reports, and pay we ought, pay we must, pay we do. Not a pound of powder was burned, no one hurt so much as by the scratch of a pin. Arbitration instead of battle.

So the Samoan controversy in any other age would have brought Germany and the United States into bloody collision. But all is settled. Arbitration instead of battle.

France will never again, I think, through the peccadillo of an embassador, bring on a battle with other nations. She sees that God, in punishment at Sedan, blotted out the French empire, and the only aspirant for that throne who had any right of expectation dies in a war that has not even the dignity of being respectable. What is the leaf that England would like to tear out of her history? The Zulu war. Down with the sword and up with the treaty.

We in this country might better have settled our sectional difficulties by arbitration than by the trial of the sword. Philanthropy said to the North: "Pay down a certain amount of money for the purchase of the slaves and let all those born after a certain time be free." Philanthrophy at the same time said to the south: "You sell the slaves and get rid of this great national contest and trouble." The north replied: "I won't pay a cent." The south replied: "I won't sell." War! war! A million dead men and a national debt which might have ground this nation to powder. Why did we not let William H. Seward, of New York, and Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, go out and spend a few days under the trees on the banks of the Potomac and talk the matter over and settle it, as settle it they could, rather than the north pay in cost of war $4,750,000,000 and the south pay $4,750,000,000, the destroying angel leaving the first born dead in so many houses all the way from the Penobscot to the Alabama. Ye aged men whose sons fell in the strife, do you not think that would have been better? Oh, yes, we have come to believe, I think, in this country that arbitration is better than battle.

I may be mistaken, but I hope that the last war between Christian nations is ended. Barbarians may mix their war paint, and Chinese and Japanese go into wholesale massacres, and Afghan and Zulu hurl poisoned arrows, but I think Christian nations have gradually learned that war is disaster to victor as well as vanquished, and that almost anything bought by blood is bought at too dear a price. I wish to God this nation might be a model of willingness for arbitration. No need of killing another Indian. No need of sacrificing any more brave Gen. Custers. Stop exasperating the red man, and there will be no more arrows shot out from the ambushments. A general of the United States army, in high repute throughout this land, and who, perhaps, had been in more Indian wars than any other officer, and who had been wounded again and again in behalf of our government in battle against the Indians, told me that all the wars that had ever occurred between Indians and white men had been provoked by white men, and that there was no exception to the rule. While we are arbitrating with Christian nations, let us toward barbarians carry ourselves in a manner unprovocative of contest.

Let me put myself in their place. I inherit a large estate, and the waters are rich with fish, and the woods are songful with birds, and my cornfields are silken and golden. Here is my sister's grave. Out yonder, under the large tree, my father died. An invader comes, and proposes to drive me off and take possession of my property. He crowds me back, he crowds me on, and crowds me into a closer corner, until, after a while, I say: "Stand back, don't crowd me any more, or I'll strike. What right have you to come here and drive me off my premises? I got this farm from my father and he got it from his father. What right have you to come here and molest me?" You blandly say: "Oh, I know more than you do. I belong to a higher civilization. I cut my hair shorter than you do. I could put this ground to a great deal better use than you do." And you keep crowding me back and crowding me on into a closer corner and closer corner, until one day I look around upon my suffering family, and fired by their hardships I hew you in twain. Forthwith all the world comes to your funeral to pronounce eulogium, comes to my execution to anathematize me. You are the hero, I am the culprit. Behold the United States government and the North American Indian. The red man has stood more wrongs than I would, or you. We would have struck sooner, deeper. That which is right in defense of a Washington home is right in defense of a home on top of the Sierra Nevada. Before this dwindling red race dies completely out. I wish that this generation might by common justice atone for the inhumanity of its predecessors. In the day of God's judgment, I would rather be a blood-smeared Modoc than a swindling United States officer on an Indian reservation! One was a barbarian and a savage, and never pretended to be anything but a barbarian and a savage. The other pretended to be a representative of a Christian nation Notwithstanding all this, the general disgust with war and the substitution of diplomatic skill for the glittering edge of keen steel is a sign unmistakable that "the day is at hand."

I find another ray of dawn in the compression of the world's distances. What a slow, snail-like, almost impossible thing would have been the world's rectification with 1,400,000,000 of population and no facile means of communication; but now, through telegraphy for the eye and telephonic intimacy for the ear, and through steamboating and railroading, the 25,000 miles of the world's circumference are shriveling into insignificant brevity! Hong Kong is nearer to New York than a few years ago New Haven was; Bombay, Moscow, Madras, Melbourne within speaking distance. Purchase a telegraphic chart, and by the blue lines see the telegraphs of the land, and by the red lines the cables under the ocean. You see what opportunity this is going to give for the final movements of Christianity. A fortress may be months or years in building. but after it is constructed it may do all its work in 20 minutes. Christianity has been planting its batteries for 19 centuries, and may go on in the work through other centuries; but when those batteries are thoroughly planted those fortresses are fully built; they may all do their work in 24 hours. The world sometimes derides the church for slowness of movement. Is science any quicker? Did it not take science 5,652 years to find out so simple a thing as the circulation of the human blood? With the earth and the sky full of electricity, science took 5,800 years before it even guessed that there was any practical use that might be made of this subtle and mighty element. When good men take possession of all these scientific forces, and all these agencies of invention, I do not know that the redemption of the world will be more than the work of half a day. Do we not read the queen's speech at the proroguing of parliament the day before in London? If that be so, is it anything marvelous to believe that in 24 hours a Divine communication can reach the whole earth? Suppose Christ should descend on the nations—many expect that Christ will come among the nations personally—suppose that to-morrow morning the Son of God from a hovering cloud should descend upon these cities? Would not that fact be known all over the world in 24 hours? Suppose He should present His Gospel in a few words, saying: "I am the Son of God; I came to pardon all your sins and to heal all your sorrow; to prove that I am a supernatural being, I have just descended from the clouds. Do you believe Me, and do you believe Me now?" Why, all the telegraph stations of the earth would be crowded as none of them were ever crowded just after a ship wreck. I tell all these things to show you it is not among the impossibilties or even the improbablities that Christ will conquer the whole earth, and do it instanter, when the time comes. There are foretokenings in the air. Something great is going to happen. I do not think that Jupiter is going to run us down, or that the axle of the world is going to break; but I mean something great for the world's blessing, and not for the world's damage, is going to happen. I think the world has had it hard enough. Enough, the famines and plagues. Enough, the Asiatic cholera. Enough, the wars. Enough, the shipwrecks. Enough, the conflagrations. I think our world could stand right well a procession of prosperities and triumphs. Better be on the lookout. Better have your observatories open toward the heavens, and the lenses of your most powerful telescopes well polished. Better have all your Leyden jars ready for some new pulsation of mighty influence. Better have new fonts of type in your printing offices to set up some astounding good news. Better have some banner that has never been carried, ready for sudden processions. Better have the bells in your church towers well hung, and rope within reach, that you may ring out the marriage of the King's Son. Cleanse all your courthouses, for the Judge of all the earth may appear. Let all your legislative halls be gilded for the Great Lawgiver may be about to come. Drive off the thrones of despotism all the occupants, for the King of Heaven and earth may be about to reign. The darkness of the night is blooming and whitening into the lilies of morning cloud, and the lilies reddening into the roses of stronger day—fit garlands, whether white or red, for Him on whose head are many crowns. "The day is at hand."

One more ray of the dawn I see in facts chronoglogical and mathematical. Come now, do not let us do another stroke of work until we have settled one matter. What is going to be the final issue of this great contest between sin and righteousness? Which is going to prove himself the stronger, God or Diabolus? Is this world going to be all garden or all desert? Now, let us have that matter settled. If we believe Isaiah, Ezekiel, and Hosea and Micah, and Malachi, and John, and Peter, and Paul, and the Lord himself, we believe that it is going to be all garden. But let us have it settled. Let us known whether we are working on toward a success or toward a dead failure. If there is a child in your house sick and you are sure he is going to get well you sympathize with present pains, but all the forboding is gone. If you are in a cyclone off the Florida coast and the captain assures you the vessel is stanch and the winds are changing for a better quarter, and he is sure he will bring you safe into the harbor, you patiently submit to present distress with the thought of safe arrival. Now, I want to know whether we are coming on toward dismay, darkness and defeat, or on toward light and blessedness. You and I believe the latter. If so, every year we spend is one year subtracted from the world's woe, and every event that passses, whether bright or dark, brings us one event nearer a happy consummation, and by all that is inexorable in chronology and mathematics I commend you to good cheer and courage. If there is anything in arithmetic, if you subtract two from five and leave three, then by every rolling sun we are coming on toward a magnificent terminus. Then every winter passed is one severity less for our poor world. Then every summer gone by brings us nearer unfading arborescence. Put your algebra down on the top of your Bible and rejoice.

If it is nearer morning at 3 o'clock than it is at 2, if it is nearer morning at 4 o'clock than it is at 3, then we are nearer the dawn of the world's deliverance. God's clock seems to go very slowly, but the pendulum swings, and the hands move, and it will yet strike noon. The sun and the moon stood still once; they will never stand still again until they stop forever. If you believe arithmetic as well as your Bible, you must believe we are nearer the dawn. "The day is at hand."

A STATISTICIAN advocates the use of aluminum coins in place of the copper coins now in use. "It wears well," he says, "is noncorrosive, and is wonderfuly light."

NO FUSION.

After a Session of Two Hours the Sub-Committees of the Two Organizations Failed to Agree—The Populists Demanded Seven of the Fifteen Electors and the Withdrawal of Sewall—Populists Will Nominate.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 18.—The scheme of fusion between the democrats and populists failed to materialize Thursday. The sub-committee of the two organizations failed to agree after a session of two hours in the afternoon. The populists demanded seven of the fifteen electors and the withdrawal of Sewall, while the democrats were willing to concede but four of the electors and demanded the withdrawal of the populist state ticket. As soon as this was reported back to the committee of 13 to which the populist convention had delegated full power in the matter of electors, this committee decided that it was not worth while to negotiate longer and adopted a resolution that a full ticket of electors be put in the field. This was adopted by a vote of 12 to 1. A provisional list of electors was selected and the chairman of the committee directed to communicate with them and certify to their nomination as soon as it is learned that they will serve.

GEN. WEYLER

Will Assume Personal Command of the Spanish Forces at Pinar del Rio, Ahumida and Palmerola.

HAVANA, Sept. 18.—Capt. Gen. Weyley will assume personal command at Pinar del Rio, Ahumida and Palmerola, taking charge respectively of military and political affairs at Havana.

Among other measures Gen. Weyler thinks of adopting as a prelude to the campaign is a revocation of the edict of pardon, obliging families having connections in the ranks of the patriots to move into other provinces, and making concentration in villages obligatory, considering that all persons found in the country are enemies or supporters of the enemy.

According to the latest information Maceo has moved south of his former position. No steps will be taken to follow him until the commencement of the concerted operations referred to above.

Military operations are principally at a standstill. It is reported that the patriots are making a strong demonstration of forces all around the country, presumably obeying Gomez's orders for the coming campaign, which, it is said, will be tremendous. All sorts of wild rumors are afloat as to his future intentions. Some believe he will come with fire and sword, leaving everything waste in his track, destroying all the sugar estates, farms, villages and towns he meets on his way; others, that he will simply come and make a big fight in this province. The real truth can not be ascertained, for Gomez will not divulge his plans.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 18.—Several members of the Kentucky democratic state central committee oppose National Chairman Jones' plan to put two populist electors on the Bryan ticket. Chairman Johnstone, of the state central committee, leads the opposition. The plan is to let the populists believe that they will get recognition, it is said, until the last minute, then the committee will decline to put populist electors on the ticket.

Narrowly Escaped Lynching.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18.—John Burt, a Negro, attempted to assault a two-year-old girl in a vacant house on South Third street Thursday morning. He was 55 years old and unmarried.

STORM AT OGDEN.

Kiesel & Co.'s Warehouse Blown Down and, Together With Several Small Buildings, Consumed by Fire.

OGDEN, Utah, Sept. 19.—Ogden and vicinity have Friday been visited by a terrific windstorm which began at about noon and is still raging. There is no accompaniment of rain or hail, but the gales is blowing at about sixty miles an hour. Trees have been blown down and plate glass fronts blown in, but no serious damage occurred until 8:30 Friday evening, when a large three story warehouse, fifty by one hundred feet, brick, belonging to Kiesel & Co., wholesale groceries, was blown down and the contents fired by electric wires. A few minutes after the crash the whole outfit was a mass of flames, and many smaller buildings were completely destroyed with it. The damage and loss will exceed $100,000.

There were several smaller fires but no damage to exceed $1,000.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Sept. 19.—This city and vicinity caught a part of the storm which wrought havoc in Ogden, but little damage was done here beyond the blowing down of some electric wires and the uprooting of a few trees. In the south the storm was more severe and telegraph and telephone wires are nearly all down so that little news can be obtained.

Altgeld for Senator.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Chairman Hinrichsen, of the democratic state committee and one of Gov. Altgeld's closest political friends, said Friday: "If the democrats carry the legislature Gov. Altgeld will no doubt be the choice of the party for United States senator. The only obstacle is that he may not care to resign the office of governor. If the republicans win, John R. Tanner, who will then be governor, will be the choice for senator, because Alderman Madden and Wm. E. Mason will kill each other in the fight.

Vice President Stevenson Accepts.

Philadelphia Times Sued for $100,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—James L. Miles, who was on Monday nominated for sheriff by the republican convention, has warrants issued for the arrest of Col. A. K. McClure, editor, and Frank McLaughlin, publisher, of the Times on the charge of criminal libel. A civil suit was also instituted by Mr. Miles against Col. McClure. Mr. McLaughlin and the Times Publishing Co. for damages in the sum of $100,000. The actions began by Mr. Miles are based upon an editorial article in Thursday's issue of the Times under the caption of a public affront. The case will come up Tuesday next.

MONASTERY CAPTURED.

The Monks Massacred, Being Put to Death With Knives.

One Hundred Rebels Flung Into a Small Dungeon by Spaniards—Next Morning 54 of the Prisoners Found Dead, Having Been Suffocated.

MADRID, Sept. 21.—A dispatch to the Imparcial, from Hong Kong, says that the rebels at Cavite, Philippine islands, captured the monastery there and massacred the monks, putting them to death with knives. Spanish warships afterwards started a bombardment of the rebel position, but the shots fell short and no harm was done to the insurgents.

The dispatch adds that over a hundred rebels who had been captured by Spaniards were flung into a small dungeon at Manila. The next morning 54 of the prisoners were found dead, they having been suffocated during the night. The Spaniards, with the object of striking terror among the sympathizers of the rebels, make it a practice to execute prisoners publicly. The men are taken out in batches and shot before the eyes of any one who desires to witness their death.

The dispatch further says that the rebels are making headway in the interior.

HAVANA, Sept. 20.—Capt. Gen. Weyler has ordered the release of Alfred O. Hernandez Hugett, an American citizen who was arrested two weeks ago. His release is conditional upon his leaving Cuba. Benvido Sanchez, a rebel leader has been captured in Mantanzas. He is wounded.

AN OUTBREAK

At the Coronado Mine, Leadville, Col.—Dynamite and Rifles Used by Strikers—Militia Called Out.

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 21.—At 1 o'clock Monday morning three heavy explosions aroused sleepers in the eastern part of the city for blocks around the Coronado mine, which is the one which first resumed operations since the strike, and which was heavily barricaded and well stocked with provisions and arms.

The explosions were followed by a fusilade of rifle shots, apparently from within the barricade, and rapid but irregular shots from outside, apparently from a widely scattered attacking force, who were on hand to protect the retreat of the dynamiters. The shooting lasted for ten minutes, and all was silent for five minutes, when desultory firing was renewed, and has been kept up ever since.

At this writing, 1:50 a. m., another explosion was heard, sounding like dynamite. Ten minutes after the first explosion a telephone message from the Coronado stated that nobody inside the barricade had been hurt. Since then it has been impossible to reach the Coronado by telephone.

The Herald-Democrat is now being watched by several bands of men grouped in dark corners and alleys, and this may mean that they propose to prevent communication with telegraph offices, the watchers not knowing that the paper has a leased wire and a long distance telephone.

The city is in a panic of fear. County and city officials are out looking after the work of the police and sheriff.

Bullets frequently whiz over the Herald-Democrat office, and altogether the situation is warlike.

1:55 a. m.—A bright blaze has just broken out at the Coronado mine, in the immediate vicinity, and shots are still being exchanged.

The local militia companies have been called out, and are now at their armories getting ready for instant action.

All the whistles in town are blowing.

The fire is believed to be the oil tanks inside the barricade at the Coronado shaft house. A telephone message just received from the mine says that none of the defenders has been hurt as yet.

2:15 a. m.—Citizens have gone to the scene with whatever arms they can gather, and a militia company has just marched toward the Coronado under arms. The whistle which calls out all citizens in a case of emergency has just sounded, and the streets are full of frantic men and crying women and children.

2:18 a. m.—Another heavy explosion occurred. Five minutes before the Coronado telephone bore the message that the defenders were too busy to answer questions.

As soon as the fire broke out the fire department went to the scene, and the flames are now dying down, indicating the effective work by the firemen.

The shots are growing less fierce and it seems probable that something definite from the battlefield may be soon obtained.

AFTER CONVICT LABOR.

New York Contractors, Driven From That State, Come to Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 21.—By an act of the New York legislature the manufacture and sale of prison-made goods are prohibited in that state after October 1. There is, therefore, just now a scramble among contractors in New York penitentiaries to get contracts in penal institutions in other states. Several New York prison contractors want to get contracts in the Ohio penitentiary, and have written Warden Coffin offering to employ 150 or more men each.

Germany Tired of the Sugar Bounty.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The News Friday morning publishes a dispatch from Berlin saying that the recent law increasing the bounties on sugar for export has led to a compulsory overproduction and a lowering of prices in Germany.

For instance, 100 kilograms of sugar sold in March at 24½ marks. The same quantity now brings only 17 3-5 marks. A meeting of manufacturers has been held in Berlin, at which it was decided to ask the government to effect an international agreement for the universal abrogation of sugar bounties.

Hon. Fountain Fox Bobbitt, a prominent lawyer of Stanford, who represented Lincoln county in the Legislature several years ago, announces himself a candidate for the Legislature, for County Auditor of Lincoln, for Commonwealth's Attorney of the Thirteenth Judicial District this year, candidate for Congress in 1898, and probable candidate for President in 1900.

The morning after the Bryan rally at Lexington scores of pocketbooks were found around every depot in the city, where pickpockets had secured them from their owners, rifled them of their contents and thrown them away. Many pocketbooks contained return railroad tickets. One pocketbook contained receipts, unpaid notes and many other papers belonging to John Barton, the famous Bourbon County distiller.

Near Kinkead Station, on the Q. & C. a drunken man by the name of James Sallee shot into a car and attempted to kill Hon. C. J. Bronston, who had prosecuted him while Commonwealth Attorney and gave him a penitentiary sentence. At Sadieville that evening Bronston and others spoke, and when they boarded the train Sallee, who was drunk, followed them. When Kinkead was reached the man shot into the car which he supposed Bronston occupied, but was mistaken. No one was hurt.

During this Mr. Smith was preparing to get in his deadly work. His wife, on seeing that Smith intended to kill them both, sprang to her feet and made for the door. At this moment Smith began firing and his wife fell mortally wounded. In some mysterious way Luttle had succeeded in opening the door and made his escape.

George Romans, the young tough who shot Sheriff Bare last week, is still at large, although there is a reward of $150 offered for his arrest and lodgement in the jail at Bedford. While there are many who would like to have the liberal reward offered yet they do not feel like going up against a man with the reputation Romans enjoys. He is said to have two splendid pistols, one a Colt's Navy and the other a Smith & Wesson, and he can use them with the alacrity of a Jesse James. There have been several talking of taking a hunt for the young desperado, but when the time arrives for them to start their 'grit" somehow or other seems to sift out, and they conclude to try to earn the amount of the reward in some other way. It is claimed by some that Romans has crossed the river and is with relatives at China, Ind. There are not many about Milton very anxious to investigate the matter, as well as they would like to see him captured.—Milton News.

Owing to the continued presence in great numbers of the "Chinch bug," and the apprehension of damage by them to growing wheat in the fall and the probability of their appearance again next year, the Bureau of Agriculture desires to submit the following information as to the nature and habits of this pest:

Prof. Garman, Entomologist of the Kentucky Agricultural Experimental Station, says, of the "chinch bug:" From its history it seems improbable that any very serious injury will be done to fall wheat, but the presence of the bugs in the fields this fall makes probable injury for the next season. So much depends on the weather between now and then, however, that it is unsafe to predict anything. If we have a damp fall and winter many of the bugs will succumb to disease; if it is dry during the fall and winter the probability is that the bugs will be destructive next year The adult chinch bugs hibernate under rubbish at the edge of the fields, and farmers should see to it that no such lurking places are left for them. An unsparing employment of fire over waste places will do much to destroy them."

This information is furnished with the hope that it will receive the attention its importance demands. It may be well to remember that this State only escaped serious injury from this source this year by reason of the abundant rain fall at critical periods.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1896. NO. 49.

THE louisville commercial calls Bryan a rabbel-rouser.

MR. CARLISLE will make several speeches in this State next month.

IT is amusing, the spectacle of the Republicans of the seventh district falling down and worshiping W. C. P. Breckinridge

So long as some men are kept in office they are faithful to their party; but give them a back seat and they soon become lukewarm.

HILL, of New York, has flunked completely again. His action is very satisfactory to the Republicans, who now claim that they will carry that State by from 300,000 to 500,000.

THE Republicans claim they will capture all but 70 of the electoral votes, while the Democrats say McKinley will lose all but 71. Somebody is making wild guesses.

THE Republicans in the Ashland district are very much in love with Col. Breckinridge now, and want to vote for him for Congress. He was cast off by the Democrats in 1894, and they are welcome to him.

DAVID B. HILL is a rule-or-ruin politician. He has been a disadvantage to the Democratic party in New York ever since he enteredp olitics. His methods have caused the party's overthrow in that State at several elections.

A MAN who can read up on the record of any of the leading politicians of to-day and fail to discover that he has been guilty of denouncing the demonetization of silver at some time not in the distant past, does not read very closely.

PEOPLE who do not want to hear a political speech that is not in accord with their views, should not attend the speaking. Every man in the land has a right to his opinion, and has a right to express it in a gentlemanly manner, and none but the ruffian element will attempt to howl down a speaker of the opposite party.

THE ex-confederates of Bath county have addressed an open letter to Gen. Buckner that will open his eyes as to his political downtall among a class of men of whom it has been his pride to boast that he is one. They refer him to the military orders of Gen. Palmer, and say, "when you were lead up into the mountain at Indianpolis, and tempted of the devil, you should have said: 'Get the hence, Satan."'

IN his last race for the Democratic Congressional nomination, Col. Breckinridge wanted the judges of the primary election to swear every Democrat to support the nominee. He had no love for bolters then, but he is now a bolter, and begging the Republicans to support him for Congress, and they propose to kick Judge Denny off of the track in the interest of Breckinridge. It seems that Breckinridge,s moral and political break-down was simultaneous.

IT turns out that the attempt of ruffians to break up the Buckner meeting at Richmond, Va., was the result of a deliberate plot set on foot by the silver managers. It has reacted against the silver cause, and numbers of prominent Richmond Democrats have declared that they can not train with such a lawless crowd.—Courier-Journal.

It turns out that the attempt of ruffians to break up the Bryan meeting at New Haven, Connecticut, was the result of a deliberate plot set on foot by gold managers. It has reacted against the gold cause, and numbers of prominent New Haven Democrats have declared that they can not train with such a lawless crowd.

THE following from a leading Republican paper in this State shows that the Republicans are not pleased with the outlook in Louisville, and are accusing the Boltocrats of injuring the Republican cause in the Falls City, and may they not do the same elsewhere:

The political situation in Louisville is not satisfactory. The campaign that is being conducted by the sound money Democrats is not the kind that will help the Republicans. It is being conducted by men wholly out of touch with the masses, the working men, who will control the election. Such men as Baskin, Davie, Duke, Atherton, Bullitt, Bruce and the like have no acquaintance with the working men, while the free silverites are enlisting in their service hundreds of men who know the working men and know how to influence them."

POLITICAL.

Gov. Bradley addressed 5,000 people at the Lagoon, last Wednesday.

John R. McLean will have charge of the Democratic campaign in Ohio from now on.

A movement is on foot at Lexington to organize a "Breckinridge Republican Club."

The Ashland Republicans will try to get Hon. Thos. B. Reed to deliver a speech for them.

Judge Denny is obdurate. He says the opposition to his running comes from his enemies and Col. Breckinridge's friends.

During the parade in Lexington last Tuesday Hon. W. C. Owens was mistaken by a number of people for Mr. Bryan, who shook his hand warmly, and went home as happy as if they had really met "the boy orator of the Platte."—Georgetown Times.

Gen. Buckner in a speech at Licking, Ky., in 1887, made use of this language: "It violated its duty to the people by abrogating the contract of the bondholders to receive their pay in the currency of the country, and gave them gold; and it then demonetized silver in order to make gold more valuable, and further enrich the capitalists at the expense of the people."

The following is what Henry Clay once said:

The free coinage of silver and a large volume of money will revive farming, manufactures and business by increasing the purchasing demand for goods and products of labor in the following ways:

"1. An increase in the volume of money will cause a rise in the price of goods and products of labor.

"2. A rise in the price of goods, products of the farm, and all products of labor will increase the purchasing power of the millions of farmers, business men and laborers, also their debt paying power, and of the value of their homes, stock in trade, etc.

"3. This increase in the purchasing power of these millions will increase the total purchasing demand for goods, products and labor. Thus, with greater demand at higher prices, debts can be paid, more goods consumed. and thus more labor employed and business done.

"I believe that the American people must learn the lesson of money or they are lost."

A Kentucky Post correspondent writing from Frankfort, has this to say in regard to the extra session of the legislature:

"At the extra session of the Kentucky legislature in November or December, the State deficit of $1,428,000, and the election of a United States Senator, will be the chief questions. Eight vacancies must be filled, three in the Senate and five in the House. There are at present 130 members in the House and Senate; of these 65 are Democrats and 63 Republicans, and 2 are Populists. The Populists would vote for Blackburn. Five of the eight districts in which vacancies are to be filled were Republican, and three were Democratic. The Republicans hope to gain seven of these vacancies which would give them 70 votes and a majority of the legislature. If they succeed in capturing six, there will be 69 Democrats and 69 Republicans. If they capture less, they will depend for success on some of the gold Democrats refusing to vote for Blackburn. If the silver movement sweeps the State, the Republicans threaten to combine with any gold Democrats in the legislature to elect John G. Carlisle, thus defeating their great enemy, Blackburn. As there are only four gold Democrats in the legislature, this may be impossible. The situation is as confused now as it was last winter."

Henry Watterson is having a hard time trying to live down his free coinage record. Looking over the files of the Louisville Courier-Journal a few days ago the Kansas City World discovered a number of editorials on the money question written by the dashing and impulsive Henry. In one of these editorials Mr. Watterson uses the following language:

"Since the unspeakable felony of the single gold standard was instituted in 1871-75 in all the Western Hemisphere, it has brought all agriculture producers about half-way to the plain of absolute solvency, as they are selling nearly as much more of their produce for a given sum of gold money to-day as in 1873. It will not be necessary for their gold masters to take all the other half to reduce producers to the basis of slavery, as the other half includes the cost of the keep of the slave and the draught-horse which the master always has to find."

Then Mr. Watterson issues this challenge:

"There is not to day in all the world a writer on the side of the single gold standarn felony who would hazard his reputation as an honest man by asserting that the universal price contraction of this era is not the work of the gold standard. That admission, therefore, means exactly this—the gold standard is a universal and all powerful instrument for the enslavement of production to capital."

"Speaking directly of the results to follow the complete remonetization of silver, he says:

"As far as they have gone in degsading it, its peremptory cancellation would, undoubtedly, produce universal collapse and panic. The restoration of its ancient rights conversely, would cause universal expansion and buoyancy."

Nothing is so uncertain as politics. Many times in the history of the Republic the votes of the people have upset the calculations of the most astute politicians. As strange things have happened in the past, it is not unreasonable to suppose that there is a possibility of still stranger things happening in the future.

In 1824 it was thought that Andrew Jackson would sweep the field and yet John Quincy Adams beat him by 50,000 while the popular Henry Clay, then just beginning his famous career only received 40,000 votes all told.

In 1828, on account of Adams' former vote, the presumption was he would again be triumphant, but Jackson beat him by 138,000.

In 1832 when Clay was the center of popular affection, Jackson beat him by 138,000.

In 1836, the candidates were Van Buren, Harrison, Webster, White and Maguin—the giants of those days—and yet little Van Buren received 25,000 more than all the others put together.

In 1840, however, Van Buren was snowed under by Harrison by a majority of 140,000

In 1844, nobody had the slightest ideaanywhere that the unknown Jas. K. Polk could possibly be a match for the peerless orator and great statesman, Henry Clay. Yet out of 2,600,000 votes Polk exceeded Clay by 38,000.

In 1848, with General Taylor, Lewis Cass and Martin Van Buren in the field, Taylor defeated Cass by 140,000.

In 1852, who would have supposed that Franklin Pearce could beat the distinguished soldier, General Winfield Scott? But Pierce was elected by a great majority of 200,000.

In 1856, the candidates were Buchanan, Fremont and Fillmore. The result of that election was almost foreordained, and Buchanan had 45 per cent. of the total vote.

In 1860 there was a stupendous contest. Nobody could guess how it would end. The nominees were the unknown Lincoln, the splendid Douglas, the magnificent Breckinridge and the Brilliant Bell. Lincoln beat Breckinridge by nearly half a million and had 39 per cent of the total vote; Douglas 29 per cent; Breckinridge 28 and Bell 13.

In 1894 there was scarcely any doubt about, the result, although the the great soldier, McClelland, was a candidate against Lincoln. Eleven States of the South were not allowed to vote, and Lincoln was elected by nearly half a million majority.

In 1868 the situation was much the same. The war spirit was on, and nobody was surprised when Grant defeated Seymour by 205,000, three States not voting.

1872, however, when Grant Greeley, O'Connor and Black were in the field, there was much astonishment to find Grant elected—even against such a man as the Abolitionist Editor Greeley—by a majority of 730,000.

In 1876 Tilden had a majority of 251.000 over Hayes, but Hayes carried the electoral college.

In 1880 the peerless Hancock was beaten by General Garfield by a majority of 7,000.

In 1884, when Cleveland, Blain, St John and Butler were the nominees, Cleveland, to the astonishment of the average man, was elected.—Cincinnati Post.

THE Atlanta Constitution republishes this letter of David B. Hill, of New York, which it originally published July 13, 1893:

"I am in favor of bimetallism as the issue of the future. We should seek to keep that issue to the front—we should not strive for temporary success or compromise. We should be for free coinage under an international agreement if it is possible to procure one—and for which every exertion should be made—and, if not possible, then for independent bimetallism. This is the one great goal for which we should strive. It cannot be done at once. Our friends must not be impatient. The people must be educated. The unexpected action of India and the general sentiment of the moneyed classes conspire against us at this time.

"I do not believe in the Bland bill or any other measure which guarantees anything less than an unrestricted coinage for gold or silver alike, as pledged in the Democratic national platform. Let us prepare, not for present victory, but for victory upon that issue in 1896. The repeal of the Sherman law will not give the relief which is anticipated. It will aid buisness temporarily, but in a year times will be hard, and the demand for permanent financial relief will be irresistible. We should continue to hold out for free coinage as the goal which the country must ultimately reach. The triumph of the monometallists will be but temporary."

THOSE who oppose the free and unlimited coinage of silver say it will be of especial benefit to the mine owners in as much as the bullion that is now worth only 50 cents will advance to 100 cents. This increase in the value of silver bullion would be the result of legislation favorable to a particular class—mine owners. Having created, if possible a prejudice against the free coinage of silver by the above argument, they turn to the laboring man and tell him that under free coinage of silver he will receive his wages in 50 cent dollars, but they do not attempt to explain to him how, if the bullion now in a silver dollar is worth 50 cents, and that bullion will double in value under free coinage as they claim when working up a prejudice against the mine owner, how is it possible to have a 50 cent dollar when, according to their own argument, 100 cents worth of bullion has been put in it. If the bullion that goes into a silver dollar is worth 100 cents at the mines it will still be worth 100 cents when, in the shape of a dollar, it drops into a laboring man's pocket.

THE Frankfort Capital, which is good Republican authority, says: "The Seventh district Republicans seems to be almost a unit in the belief that Col. Breckinridge should have no Republican opposition in his present race for Congress. From the Western to the Eastern limits of the district the same opinion prevails."

Breckinridge is the ablest man by odds that the Republicans have any possible show to elect to Congress, and many a gold Democrat will desert him whem he sees that by the aid of Republicans he expects to be returned to Congress.

The following is a resolution which passed the Hart county convention in the presence of General Simon Bolivar Buckner, Vice-Presidential nominee of the Boltocratic ticket, the passage of which was due to his most intimate friends:

"Resolved, by the Democrats of Hart county, in convention assembled, that all persons who take part in the proceedings of this convention are pledged by said action to support the nominees of the Chicago convention and the platform of principles adopted by said convention."

AT New Haven, Connecticut, a supposed source of culture and refinement, a band of ruffians, said to be Yale students behaved so outrageously as to prevent Mr. Bryan from speaking there last Thursday. If the New Haven band of "Yahoos" was composed of students as it is claimed, Yale, the famous institution of learning, has lost its prestige, and her students, in the matter of courtesy, are behind those of a backwoods school.

The Pullman Palace Car Co. reduced the wages of its employes 33⅓ per cent. A few days afterwards it declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. The Pullman Palace Car Co. is in favor of the "existing gold standard" and wants its employes to favor it too. Will they do it?

THE funeral of a workingman in Japan costs 83 cents unless the family wishes to have it especially fine, when it will cost as much as $1.25. The price of a coffin is 20 cents, and the rate for cremation is from 40 to 75 cents. Refreshments figure up from 11 to 25 cents.

AT the seaside or in the country, where the air is clear, 1,500 microbes must be inhaled into the nose every hour, while in the cities the number often reaches 14,000. The organisms are caught by the nose and passed to the digestive organs, which, when in health, destroy them.

SINCE the death of his mother, Lady Wilde, the health of Convict Oscar Wilde has broken down. There appears to have been deep affection between them. The home secretary recently decided that there should be no remission of the sentence. That decision is now under revision, and Wilde's release is probable about October.

EVIDENCE

Of a Growing Spirit for Closer Union in South America.

Brazil Making an Effort to Bring About a Combination Between Itself, Chili and Argentina—Chili Is No Longer Cold Towards the United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The state department continues to record evidence of the growing spirit in South and Central American republics favoring a policy of "American commerce for Americans only," as the result of the forcible reiteration of the Monroe doctrine, the latest conspicuous cases being the movement in Brazil for a closer union with its neighbors and the cordial attitude toward the United States in Chili, that country having for the last six or eight years manifested a rather cool disposition to us.

Mr. Thompson, in a dispatch to this government regarding the annual report of the Brazilian minister of foreign affairs for this year, writes:

"The minister appears to be thoroughly imbued with the purpose of bringing the South American republies into a closer union, but at the same time keeping Brazil aloof from all complications with European nations."

In regard to the United States, the minister says:

"Without claiming a share in the responsibilities of the international situations, which the vigorous policy of the United States of America creates and defends, Brazil can not ignore or withdraw from the influence which it exercises on the destinies of South America."

A commercial union between Chile, Argentina and Brazil is advocated. The report observes that it is impossible for the South American republics to preserve an indifference to each other.

The economic conditions of Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Ayres and Valpariso are so identical that sooner or later they must combine.

Minister Thompson says it is evident that Brazil is making great efforts to bring about a combination between itself, Chile and Argentina. He is not informed how far these efforts have succeeded.

QUIET AT LEADVILLE.

No Evidence of the Miners' Strike Outside of the Presence of the Troops.

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 25.—Another quiet day passed Thursday and the only evidence of the miners' strike was the presence of the state militia. The court of inquiry called by Gen. Brooks convened Thursday afternoon in secret session. By this means some of the acts are hoped for that will give some light on the Coronado mine attack of Monday morning.

The men now under arrest for the murder of Fireman O'Keefe are Peter Turnbull, vice president of the Miners' union; E. J. Dewar, secretary; George Handin, Wm. O'Brien, Pat Kennedy, J. V. Doyle, Richard Otis, John Ahern, Gomer Richards, Ernest Nicholas, Eugene Cannon, Cornelius Shea, Michael Weibley, Gus Johnson and Nelse Clauson.

ARMENIAN SOCIETIES,

Five in Number, Bind Themselves Together to Ruin the Ottoman Empire.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that Armenian revolutionary societies now existing there are five in number. The members of these societies, the dispatch asserts, are bound by solemn oaths to bring about the ruin of the Ottoman empire and to force the European powers to intervene in Turkey.

The organizations receive their orders from a secret central committee. The demonstration against the porte in 1895 and the recent attack upon the Ottoman bank by Armenians devolved upon the Hintchat and Frochak societies, respectively, and three other revolutionary organizations will act successively to accomplish the results at which they aim.

Death of Gen. Mexia.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 25.—A private telegram received Thursday evening announces the death Thursday of Gen. Mexia, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house of representatives of the Mexican congress. Gen. Mexia was regarded as the leading statesman and financier of the Mexican republic. The town of Mexia, Tex., was named for him. He owned 70,000 acres of land in this state. He was 71 years of age.

The Carpenters and Joiners.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 25.—The question of making the office of the chief executive a salaried position occupied nearly all of Thursday's session of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, which was finally agreed to. An amendment to the constitution was adopted, making the amount of dues and initiation fees uniform all over the country.

The Powers Negotiating With the Porte.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—A Constantinople dispatch to the Lokalanzeiger says that diplomats in the Turkish capitol have been instructed to suspend their conferences on the Armenian question, as direct negotiations are pending between the porte and the powers.

Indianapolis Club an Easy Winner.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 25.—Indianapolis was an easy winner of the first game in the Free Press cup series. Both pitchers proved easy and the only hard rivalry noted was in the piling up of errors. The score was, Indianapolis 9, Minneapolis 7.

SITUATION CRITICAL.

An Outbreak at Leadville, Col., May Occur at Any Time—The Strikers, in Desperation, Flee to the Hills and Organize.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—A special from Leadville, Col., says: Maj. W. A. Smith was appointed provost marshal here Thursday and followed up his appointment by making a number of arrests, which threaten to bring on a clash between the military and the civil authorities.

One of the provost marshal's first acts was to cause the arrest of J. W. Mitchell, a reporter for the Denver Times, thereby establishing a press censorship.

It seems that he instructed Mitchell not to send out certain pieces of news. It was sent as a private note to the paper, and for this Mitchell was arrested and the military authorities refuse to release him. There is already a clash, as it is asserted martial law has not been formally declared, and the right of the provost marshal to arrest and hold people without warrant of law will be tested.

One of the men arrested will be released on bonds by Judge Owers.

The military officials declare that if he is released he will be immediately rearrested. If this is done a warrant will be issued out of Judge Ower's court for the provost marshal, who will be arrested and brought before the judge, and the prisoner will be produced by a writ of habeas corpus if necessary. The civil authorities maintain that their rights are inviolate so long as the courts remain open, and if men are to be arrested without warrant of law a declaration of martial law must be declared. The courts refuse to countenance the present proceedings.

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 26.—There is danger ahead in the situation unless cool counsel prevails. Mine managers and citizens in general are determined to wipe out the tough element. The strikers realize now that they are outlaws and have retreated from the city and banded together to fight to the bitter end. Innocent sufferers from the strike are likely to become desperate also, since they realize their jobs are likely to go to outside men.

Nearly every business man in the city has joined one of three militia companies organized Thursday night. Guns and arms for 300 men arrived Friday. The governor has so arranged things after the militia leave that in event of a riot recurring, martial law can immediately be declared and home troops will take care of the situation. The city and county jail is full of strikers and late arrests have been turned over to the militia and sent to the guard house. There were 15 in the last named place at 11 o'clock Friday morning. All are likely to be released after examination. The marshals are searching for arms and ammunition, so far without success. No miners are to be seen, having retreated to the hills.

The mines will open immediately with imported labor. Three hundred are expected to arrive Friday night. So far the strikers have no thought to surrender.

The 150 miners from Joplin, Mo., arrived here safely Friday afternoon and were escorted by squads of militia to quarters prepared for them at the Emmitt, Marion and other mines adjoining in the downtown district. Though there was some jeering by men and women in the great crowd assembled at the depot to witness the arrival of this first installment of non-union miners, no acts of violence were committed.

PERMISSION GRANTED

To the Japanese-American Line of Steamers to Dock Vessels at the Puget Sound Dock Yard.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The navy department has granted permission to the new Japanese-American line to dock the steamer Yamaguchi Maru at the Puget Sound dock yard at Port Orchard, Wash., on October 3. This is one of the fast ships of the Nippon Yusen Kaishi I, the great Japanese maratime corporation which recently established a trans-Pacific line conecting at Seattle with the Great Northern railway to compete with the Canadian Pacific railway and steamship. Hitherto all vessels of the size of this Japanese ship have been docked on the American coast only at Esquimault, B. C., which is the British naval station, and the only yard having sufficient docking capacity. The Puget sound dock, which was not finally accepted by the government until this week, was intended wholly for naval purposes, but the navy department has ruled on the application of the Japanese company that the use of the dock in emergencies will be permitted, provided there is no expense to the United States.

CUBAN INSURGENTS

The patriots destroyed the following sugar estates: Olano, near Bolondron; Ozado, near Lagunillas; Santo Domingo, near Guanmacaro, San Antonio, near Corral Falso, and buildings on other estates of more or less importance.

All of these estates are in the province of Matanzas.

The queen regent has commuted the death sentence placed on Octavo Zubizarretas to life imprisonment.

TURKISH CRISIS.

The European Ambassadors Believes it is Past.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 26.—In diplomatic circles it is considered that the acute crisis is over.

I am sure that the ambassadors will accept the status quo.

The porte intends publishing immediately a report of reforms already carried out.

It now appears that 1,000 Armenians were killed during the recent massacre at Egin, in the Kharput district. It is reported that 100 Armenians have been killed at Divrig, in the same vilayet.

STRIKE ENDED.

The Men Decide to Return to Work at the Old Schedule Prices.

Provided Mine Owners Would Agree to Give Them Their Old Places—Outside of One or Two Mines the Old Men Will Be Taken Back.

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 28.—The great miners' strike which has kept Leadville in a turmoil for nearly two months and which resulted in the killing of five men last Monday morning and the subsequent placing of the city under martial law, is ended. A meeting of the strikers was held Saturday night under the supervision of the militia, and after a stormy session it was finally decided that the men return to work at the old schedule prices, providing the mine owners would agree to give them their old places. A committee of five was appointed to confer with the mine owners, and as it is generally believed that outside of the one or two mines that have started up with non union men, the old men will be taken back, no further trouble is expected.

The strike was the outcome of the organization of the miners by the Western Federation of Miners, and almost every mine worker was in the union when their demands were made and refused.

The miners asked $3 a day for all classes of workmen, including surface and underground men. This the owners declared they would not pay, and nearly all of them closed down, several even allowing the pumps to stop. The employers remained willing to continue paying the wages which had prevailed up to that time. Under that scale surface workers were paid only $2.50. Practically the only change the union demanded was the advance of the wages of this class of men to $3.

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 28.—Lieut. Verdeckberg telephones from the Bonn Air mine at 9:40 that four shots were fired at a picket, who returned the fire and called for the corporal of the guard. When the corporal ran out two shots were fired at him, and they were returned, after which a squad started in pursuit of the assailants.

TWO LEADERS

Of the Gang of Highwaymen Who Have Been Terrorizing Cleveland in the Hands of the Authorities.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 28.—Sunday night the police revealed the identity of the two mysterious prisoners they have held at the Central station for the last 24 hours. They are Bert Kaiser, alias George Stanley, and James Bowen, alias Curtis, alias Watson, and are the leaders of the gang of highwaymen who have terrorized Cleveland during the last month. Both are well known crooks and have served time. They were caught red-handed in the act, but the police kept the matter quiet in order to secure other members of the gang. Saturday night about 8 o'clock the two prisoners entered the saloon of William Irfert on Sheriff street, covered the proprietor with revolvers, looted the cash drawer and then made the frightened man set up the drinks. A few minutes later they held up the saloon of James Keating and after confiscating the cash sat down at a table to drink. A porter slipped out and called the police. Patrolmen Anderson and Watt responded to the call and arrested the men after a sharp fight, during which several shots were exchanged.

The police claim to have a line on the gang's headquarters, and promise to round them all up before 24 hours. Sunday night at 9:30 the police discovered two men attempting to force an entrance to Landis' cigar store, corner of Seneca and Frankfort streets. This store was successfully burglarized but a week ago.

A CLEW

To the Mysterious Murder Near Elizabeth, Pa.—The Head and Bloody Clothing Found.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 28.—On September 19, the vicinity of Wylie station, near Elizabeth, Pa., was thrown into great excitement by the finding in the Monongahela river of the headless body of a man who had evidently been murdered. A reward offered by the county commissioners stimulated research and many parties have been scouring the country to find the dead man's head or clothing. Sunday afternoon the bloody garments were found among some weeds and bushes near the river and a small mound nearby when opened, proved to be the burial place of the head, which is well preserved and is that of a man 45 or 50 years old, well formed, with gray eyes, dark hair and sandy chin whiskers, slightly mixed with gray. No one has been able to identify the victim of the crime, but it is thought a Pittsburgh tailor's label on his coat will lead to a clew.

Palmer and Buckner.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Senator Palmer and ex-Gov. Buckner came down from Philadelphia Sunday in their special car, reaching Washington at half-past three o'clock. Gen. Buckner stayed only a few minutes, continuing on the same train to Louisville, but Gen. Palmer, who was accompanied by his wife, son and daughter-in-law, went to the home of his son-in-law, Edwin G. Crabbe, a chief of division in the pension office, where he will stay until Monday.

No Attempt to Assassinate the Sultan.

TRADE REVIEW.

A Distinct Improvement in the Buying of Material—The Price of Wheat Closed 5 1-8 Cents Higher for the Week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—R. G. Dun & Co. says Saturday:

A very moderate and yet distinct improvement is seen in the buying of materials, which stiffens prices also in orders for products of some industries in money markets and in exports of staples. It has started some improvement works and prompted a few considerable contracts. While the gain in working force is not great it seems clear that for the first time in many months there is some net gain.

An important change is the general advance in produce markets, especially in wheat, which rose sharply on Thursday and Friday, closing 5⅛c higher for the week. Reports of crops abroad were supposed to be the chief cause, as visible supplies in this country increased largely, but for the first time since July 1 western receipts fell below those of the same week last year. Atlantic exports, flour included, were for the week a little more than a year ago, for September 2,000,000 more and 21,807,553 bushels since July 1, against 14,128,308 last year. If there should come an unusual foreign demand it would make a great difference with future business.

Cotton advanced an eighth a week ago, but lost three-sixteenths and with full receipts might have gone farther but for resumption of work by several important mills. Much less than the full capacity of mills is working and the demand for goods has been quite slack, with a decline of a sixteenth in print cloths, but in other goods recently advances are maintained. Speculative buying of wool does not abate, sales for four weeks having been 24,844,400 pounds against 23,758,970 last year, but no gain in prices resulted. A few of the woolen mills are resuming the belated demand for heavy goods constituting most of the gain visible, but manufacturers show confidence that more goods will be wanted when the future is more clear.

Finished products of iron meet more inquiry and the placing of contracts for 15,000 tons of steel for three new battleships, for one large building here and for several bridges, explain the starting of two or three works, but after such months as have passed a little business is a gain. A sharp fall of $2 per ton in low phosphorus pig and slight rise in grey forge at Pittsburgh and in steel plates are the only changes noted in prices.

Tin plates are slightly lowered by home consumption to $3.55 against $3.90 for foreign and tin is a shade weaker at 13 cents, copper at 10.75 and lead at 2.80 cents. There is no change in the boot and shoe manufacture.

Failures for the week have been 315 in the United States, against 216 last year and 39 in Canada against 50 last year.

PRINCE BISMARCK.

The Translation of His Letter to Gov. Culberson on the Money Question.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 26.—Judge Julius Schultze, editor of the Texas Vorwaert, furnishes the following translation of Bismarck's letter to Gov. Culberson, made from the original on file in the executive office:

> FRIEDRICHSRUHE, Aug 21, 1896.
>
> Honored Sir—Your esteemed favor of July 1 has been received. I have always had a predilection for bimetallism, but while I was in office would not consider myself infallible in opposition to experts. I believe to this day that it would be commendable to obtain by endeavors of these nations, chiefly partaking in the world's commerce an agreement in the direction of bimetallism. The United States are in political economy less hampered by their government than any one of the European states and if North America should find it compatible with its interests to take a substantial step in the direction of bimetallism I believe that such would exert a beneficial influence upon the establishment of an international agreement and the union of the European states. Assuring you of my highest respect, I remain, Your most obedient servant.
>
> BISMARCK.

In the reports of Mr. Bryan's speech the following sentence contained in Gov. Culberson's translation was omitted: "I have always had a predilection for bimetalism and would not while in office claim my views of the matter to be infallibly true when advanced against the views of experts."

Miners' Strike Declared Off.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—The strike of the 250 miners employed at the mines of the Missouri and Illinois Coal Co. at Rentchler, Wilderman and Freeburg, Ill., was declared off Friday. The men struck Monday and went back Friday on the concession of the company raising the wages from 38 cents to 39 cents per ton, which is equal to the January price.

Vandals Ruin a Church Interior.

BOURBON, Ind., Sept. 26.—Vandals entered the Presbyterian church at Packerton, after a political speech delivered by Dr. Howett, and completely ruined the interior. The schoolhouse where the speech was to have been made was found inadequate to seat the large crowd, and the church was used. Citizens are trying to track down the guilty parties.

Bismarck's Letter Published in Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—The letter of Prince Bismarck to Gov. All doubt as to the authorship of the letter is now regarded here as having been set at rest.

A POPULAR FALLACY.

Fall in Temperature of Ocean Does Not Indicate Presence of Ice.

For many years an opinion existed among seamen and others that a fall in the sea-surface temperature implied nearness of ice. Nothing, says the Nautical Magazine, can be more remote from the truth, though shore folk still perpetuate this fiction in books and newspapers. A sudden fall in sea-surface temperature is likely near the Agulhas, the Japanese current, the gulf stream, while running the Easting down in the South Indian ocean, in the South Atlantic about 40 degrees south, 40 degrees west, and elsewhere; and this, whether icebergs be near or hundreds of miles away. Capt. S. T. S. Lecky, R. N. R., to whom the nautical profession is indebted for his "Wrinkles in Practical Navigation," was probably the first to draw the attention of his brethren to this fact. In the ninth edition of his book he points out that "allied to fog is the question of danger from ice. It is a popular delusion among passengers on board ship that, by taking the temperature of the water at short intervals, the approach to ice is unfailingly indicated. Unfortunately such is by no means the fact, and it is time the idea was exploded. More than ordinarily cold water merely shows that the ship is in a part of the ocean where ice may possibly be encountered, and not that it is actualy present." Shipmasters of repute freely confess, with Capt. Evans, of the Tainui, that they have "never found sea temperature fall lower when near ice than when several miles away" from the danger.

Death-Dealing Guns.

Quick-firing guns are more depended upon at the present day than extreme length of range, and in this respect what is considered the most wonderful of guns, perhaps, is one of the Maxims, which can fire as many as 600 shots a minute, and yet is so light that a soldier can carry it strapped to his back.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Edward Wald While Drunk Fatally Hurts His Wife and Son.

A Mob Collects to Lynch Him but He is Rescued by the Police—Later the Prisoner Breaks Loose and Jumps Into the River and is Drowned.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 28.—Just before dark Sunday night Edward Wald, a ship carpenter residing at 53 Mulberry street, narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of an infuriated mob of west side citizens. Wald came home under the influence of liquor, quarreled with his wife and finally struck her. The 14-year-old son, Edward, seized his father's arm and entreated him to quiet down, whereupon the brute became enraged and threw the boy down the stairway leading to the street, a distance of 20 feet. The little fellow screamed for help and rolled out of the open doorway into the street, writhing in convulsions. Dr. C. A. Turner was summoned to attend the boy, and a crowd quickly collected to revenge the brutal outrage.

Father McHale was hastened to the scene and administered the last rites of his church to the dying boy. Meanwhile the crowd increased to a mob, which was goaded into fury by the sight of the helpless child struggling on the pavement until the clamor for revenge swelled to an ominous roar. An impromptu delegation of 40 forced their way into the house to drag out the inhuman father, and others were dispatched for a rope. Wald had locked himself in a bedroom. The door was broken open and the brute dragged into the street, fighting desperately. The police arrived before the rope appeared and thus intercepted a lynching. The mob gave battle to the police, determined not to allow Wald to escape them. During the scrimmage the prisoner broke loose from those who were holding him and ran down an alley toward the river.

The mob was close at his heels and when the fugitive reached the river, knowing that his chance for life was far less than even if captured, plunged into the cold, muddy waters of the Cuyahoga and was drowned. His body has not been recovered. The boy will die and the wife's injuries may also prove fatal.

AN INFANT

Attacked and Killed by Three Big Rats at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28.—Three big rats attacked the two-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Asher, of 1150 Low street, and gnawed its face, head and neck to such an extent that the infant died in a short time.

Mr. Asher lives over his store. He was looking after his business and Mrs. Asher had gone to market when the rats started to make a meal of the helpless infant which was snugly tucked in its crib in the second story. Hearing the baby crying, the father hurried upstairs and, as he entered the room in which the infant was lying three large vicious-looking rats jumped out of the crib and scampered off. The horrified father found that the flesh had been torn from the babe's tender face, head and neck. Before a physician could be summoned the baby died.

SEVEN HIGHWAYMEN

Rob a Surveying Party of Fifteen Men in the Indian Territory.

PARIS, Tex., Sept. 28.—A. T. Walker, who is in charge of a government surveying corps of 15 men, engaged in sectionizing the Indian territory, arrived here and reports that on last Tuesday night seven highwaymen came to their camp, six miles northwest of Grant, I. T., and robbed them at the muzzle of Winchesters.

The robbers obtained $150 in cash and $850 in checks.

The men were white and unmasked. They did their work like experts. Since the courts of the territory have been empowered with full jurisdiction, crime in that country has become more infrequent than in years.

JOHN BOYD THACHER

Declines the Democratic Nomination for Governor of New York.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 28.—John Boyd Thacher has declined to accept the democratic nomination for governor. Mr. Thacher was nominated at Buffalo by the democratic convention on September 17. The platform adopted by that convention, in so far as it unequivocally indorsed the Chicago platform, can not be subscribed to by Mr. Thacher any more than he could have given his approval to the Chicago platform itself in many of its essential features. The result of this is his declination to stand as a candidate.

Kansas Banks Fail.

TOPEKA, Kas., Sept. 28.—Two bank failures were reported to the state bank commissioner Saturday, one at Argonia and the other at Tribune, Greeley county. The latter reported liabilities amounting to $6,000. Its capital stock is $5,000. No cause is assigned for the failures other than a gradual shrinkage of business in the western part of the state.

More Work in Prospect.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Sept. 28.—Agent J. L. Milliken, of the Everett mills, Friday afternoon posted a notice on the mill gates stating that the mill will resume operations on October 5, on 40 hours per week basis. The mill has been closed since July 10, and employed 1,200 hands.

Vessel Foundered—Seven Lives Lost.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Seven lives were lost Sunday at Shields by the foundering of a boat that was overloaded. The party that entered the boat sank it it almost to her gunwales, but as they were in perfectly smooth water there was no great danger. When, however, they got some distance out in the harbor, they encountered a small sea, which broke over the boat and despite the efforts made to bail her, soon filled her and caused her to sink. Other boats went to the rescue, but before they could reach the people struggling in the water, seven of the party had been drowned.

HARVEY'S HARD HITS.

Telling Blows Given the Gold Standard at Chicago.

W. H. Harvey, the author of "Coin," talked to a large audience at the Auditorium, Chicago, on Saturday night, September 19, on the subject of free silver. In the course of his remarks he made some telling hits in support of his arguments for the free coinage of silver. Mr. Harvey said:

"Man promotes his own interest by promoting the common good. Individual selfishness, crystallized into law, is the mother of anarchy and the death of republics. Therefore the present is the crucial test of American institutions. Money is the blood of commerce. You can do without wheat, corn, beef, or any of what are called the necessaries of life, but if you are a part of civilization you cannot do without money. Without money society would go back to barbarism.

"There is in society a need for a certain amount of money, just as there is a need for a certain quantity of bread, and laws interfering with them are oppressive. If there were laws encouraging the hoarding of wheat they would be repealed. If there are laws encouraging the hoarding of money, we should demand that they be repealed also. There is not enough money to meet the normal requirements. We should see that more is made. A cattle man in Texas knows that if one-half the cattle in the country were destroyed, his herd would be worth twice as much as it is now; the money dealers know the same concerning their money. The difference is that everyone can raise as many cattle as he pleases, but everyone cannot coin all the money he wants. [Applause.]

"Bimetallism is the right to use either gold or silver for money, so that these metals will be in competition with each other. The idea of relying on two metals rather than one is taught by nature. We have two eyes, two ears, two lungs, and two legs. Monometallism is like a man with one lung or one leg. We are not monometallists, but bimetallists. We are called silver men, but if gold had been demonetized, we would be called gold men. We believe in both metals, so that if one grows scarce, we may use the other. [Applause.]

Sizes Up Gold and Silver.

"All the gold in the world available for use in money is $4,000,000,000. If cast into one block it would only make a cube of 22 feet. All the silver in the world available for money is $4,000,000,000 likewise. If cast into one block it would only make a cube of 36 feet. Under the law of bimetallism the two metals have never varied in commercial parity more than three per cent., and this slight fluctuation was the elasticity that the bimetallic system gave to our currency. From 1792 to 1850 the world's supply was two dollars of silver and one dollar of gold, or thirty-two ounces of silver to one of gold. From 1850 to 1873 this condition was more than reversed, and yet these violent fluctuations did not seem to have any perceptible effect on the commercial value of the two metals. The option of the debtor acted like the regulator on a steam engine.

"In 1873 coinage was left free to gold, but denied to silver. One of the main arteries of civilization was cut off. The debtor was limited to gold payments Form that time until now the world's production has been sixteen ounces of silver to one ounce of gold, which could not be said of any 23 years previous to 1873. But, in spite of that fact, the metals have departed from commercial parity 50 per cent., while previous to 1873, with violent fluctuations in production, the variation was only three per cent. [Applause.]

People Have a Delusion.

"People have a delusion that a dollar is a fixity. They think wheat may fail, but not dollars. In like manner, it was thought the earth stood still and the sun moved. But if the law had made a bushel of wheat the unit of currency then the delusion would be that the value of wheat was stationary, and the value of dollars fluctuating. With paper or silver redeemable in gold, an exchange of dollars for a horse means the relative exchangeable value of gold for the horse. A rise in gold will cause it to buy more property and property to buy less gold.

"Suppose all the gold in the world were destroyed, except 1,000 gold dollars, and the demand for gold should remain what it is now, with all the nations scrambling for it. Then a single gold dollar would buy the state of Illinois. If all the gold in the world were destroyed except one gold dollar, and the law recognized no other primary money, this dollar would buy the hemisphere. So the dollars rise in value as expressed in relation to other property.

"With the strain that had been shared by both metals before 1873 shifted to gold alone, and with silver made mere token money, there came a rise in the value of gold. The debtor could no longer regulate the demand. Thereafter when value was expressed in terms of money it was to mean gold. The government, which had walked on two legs, had now to walk on one. Then came the decline in prices, for prices is the value of property expressed in money. The value of property as compared with money has declined and gold has gone up. The equivalent has followed the gold, as the tail follows the kite. [Applause.]

Falling Prices and Debts.

"Falling prices require more and more property to pay debts. A debt contracted in 1884 for $1,000 could have been paid, had not wheat declined, with 1,000 bushels of wheat. But with wheat declined it now requires 2,000 bushels of it to pay the same debt. The effect of demonetization, therefore, is the confiscation of the property of debtors. With falling prices the merchant's goods are worth less than he paid for them, and the manufacturer cannot afford to work up his material. But for falling prices more taxes would have been collected, and the debts of the nation, and of the states, counties and cities would not have reached their present frightful proportions of $30,000,000,000, when the total assessed value of all the real and personal property in the United States is only $24,000,000,000.

"When one is stripped of his possessions and cannot find the wherewithal to comfort his family and to provide for his natural wants he becomes a desperate man. To say that he is a poor citizen but feebly expresses it. Such a condition creates a loss of pride. When the information comes to one, accustomed to the ownership of a home, that he is to lose that home after years of toil, and that information is conveyed to such a person's wife and family, who have worked hard and shared the toils and troubles of the husband and father—and all this coming upon them in some manner inexplainable—there come with it sadness, sorrow and distress. When tens of thousands in distress are multiplied into hundreds of thousands then there is that general feeling that comes as if some great chloroforming process had settled down upon the nation. In the midst of it all we hear the cry of the creditor: 'Pay in honest dollars, maintain your credit as a people.' The people redouble their energies. They are all honest. They want to do what is right, whether real or seeming, but the task of producing enough property to purchase the enhanced dollar is too great, and they finally surrender their possessions into the hands of their creditors. [Applause.]

Result Is Terrible.

"The result is terrible to the republic. Tenantry is rapidly increasing, so that in New York 94 per cent. of the population rent their homes, and this condition is sweeping westward. With foreign creditors owning our lands, with increasing demand for penitentiaries and lunatic asylums, and with constantly multiplying suicides, everything portends the breaking down of our civilization.

"The gold men say the Bland law of 1878 restored the legal tender quality to the silver dollar, but that act did not open the mints or restore the debtor's option. It nominally rostored the legal tender character of the silver dollar, but in fact did not do so. It provided for its legal tender 'except where otherwise provided in the contract.' Such a provision delegated to the individual to say what was legal tender money, whereas, before the government had dictated what was legal tender, and provided for it from both metals. The act of 1878 was taken advantage of by the money lender to flood the country with notes, bonds and mortgages, payable in gold, and since then billions of dollars of our debts have become payable in gold money by written contracts. The act of 1878 carried the act of 1873 from statutory law into the written contracts of the country. They were afraid the act of 1873 might be repealed, and they wished to cloak themselves under the constitutional provision against the impairment of the obligation of contracts. The act of 1878 is worse than the act of 1873.

Silver Coinage Since 1873.

"We often hear the gold men boasting that there has been a larger coinage of silver since 1873 than before it. But under a redemption of the monetary system, the quantity of representative money issued should not exceed in volume the quantity of redemption money in the country. So that, when silver was reduced to the position of representative money, the issue of any quantity of it in the form of representative money had no effect in building up our stock of primary money. Since 1873 the government has purchased silver and coined it into a representative money. There is no judgment displayed in buying a costly metal to coin it into token or representative money. It should answer the same purpose to coin our token money from lead, tin, nickel or other substance. So long as it is redeemable in gold, or made subsidiary to gold, the issuance of any quantity of it will not restore the foundation of our financial system. [Applause.]

"We are often told that the silver dollar is a good dollar on its face, but a 50-cent dollar in reality. We say a gold dollar is only a dollar on its face, but in reality a 200-cent dollar. The silver in a silver dollar will buy as much wheat and cotton as ever, but not as much gold. Gold has risen in value, until, instead of buying one bushel of wheat as it used to, it will buy two.

"It is constantly claimed that under free coinage silver would run gold out of the country. Gold is not now in circulation to be run out. There is no gold in circulation among the people. It is in the bank vaults of the large cities. It is cornered. And the government is now at the mercy of those who own it. Silver was the money of the people, and circulated to the very pores of civilization, and it does now as token money, and no money is appropriate to a republican people that does not thus circulate. [Applause.]

Effect on the Farmer.

"Now, in regard to the effect of free coinage on the farmer, it is true, as claimed, that a farmer can now buy as much calico and cotton cloth with 50 cents as he could before when wheat was $1 a bushel. But he cannot pay his taxes that way. It now takes two bushels and nearly three bushels of wheat to pay as much taxes as one bushel of wheat would have paid in 1873. Whereas 17,000 bushels of wheat would have paid the president's salary of $25,000 in 1873, it now requires 100,000 bushels of wheat to pay his salary of $50,000. And it was the same congress that increased the president's salary from $25,000 to $50,000 a year that demonetized silver. Official favoritism and neglect of the rights of the producers have already come with despotism. It now requires two and three times as much of your wheat to ride on a Pullman car or a street car as it did in 1873. Those things under the control of trusts will be held up in price and producers will suffer in the exchange of their property for them. [Applause.]

Selfishness Is a Serpent.

"Selfishness is a consuming fire that burns and destroys. It will destroy individual character and it will destroy national character. Call it what you will, a dragon, an evil spirit, or a devil; it can be aptly termed a serpent, with its tail in India, and its body in Europe, and its head raised in once proud America. [Applause.] Will you fight it, citizens of Illinois? [Cries of yes, yes.'] Then throw aside politicians. Throw aside those who have self interest in asking you for your votes. Study this question for yourselves, and when you have studied civilization and the effects of the law on the prosperity of mankind we will then rear here an enduring republic.

"It will no longer be a question of experiment. We will erect one that will be permanent and enduring, and when we cease to scramble over the things of this earth and pile up around us, as these millionaires are doing, who now would dictate to you and I how to vote—when we cease that, then we will come to a newer and a brighter civilization, in which we will study the principles of humanity, and not the principles of selfish interests. [Applause.] And with such a people, we will go forward, step by step, testing questions by the principle of humanity, and we will make a race of great men and great women, and it will lead to a brighter and a better day." [Great applause.]

WAGES UNDER M'KINLEYISM.

Evils Engendered by the Rule of Monopolists.

Every workingman will appreciate the force of what was said by Mr. Bryan before the Building Trades council at Chicago.

Mr. Bryan told the workers that the menace to labor to-day is to be found in the increasing army of the unemployed. The force of the remark will go home to every man who depends upon his earning capacity for his means of livelihood. Increase the number of unemployed belonging to any calling and the standing of the employed is thereby threatened. The employer is never slow to note the condition of the labor market and to regulate his wages accordingly.

Through the aid of their organizations workingmen in this country have maintained a wage which has enabled them to enjoy a reasonable degree of comfort. But with a constant addition to the ranks of the unemployed, labor unions become ineffective.

In the interest of themselves and their class, therefore, it is the duty of workingmen who are employed to prevent those conditions which result in forced idleness. Idleness, as Mr. Bryan said, is not inflicted on the human race by natural laws or by the act of the Creator. It is the result of evil legislation

What has produced such a vast amount of idleness within the last four years? McKinleyism, which has built up monopoly, destroyed industrial competition, and, by such destruction, has controlled not only the wages but the cost of the necessaries of life.

With the election of Bryan there will be no class legislation, no favored industries. There will be no corporations receiving large bounties from the government to make their business profitable, so that they may be able to contribute to the campaign funds of the republican party four years later. All industries will receive equal encouragement, and, with the repeal of laws which have contracted the currency of the country, there will be a period of prosperity in which every workingman will have his legitimate share.—St. Louis Republic.

BRYAN AT BROOKLYN.

He Defends Various Planks of the Democratic Platform.

New York, Sept. 24.—The journey of Mr. Bryan from Philadelphia to Hoboken was marked by gatherings at nearly every station along the railroad lines over which he traveled. Mr. Bryan made a number of speeches, one of 45 minutes at Washington, N. J., and others of brief duration. Most of his addresses were cut short by the train moving out. The stops were frequent, but very brief. Mr. Bryan's appearance was almost invariably cheered. He was fortunate on such a busy day in having cool weather, and on his arrival at Hoboken showed none of the fatigue that has followed his campaigning during the hot season.

At Washington, N. J., Mr. Bryan spoke for three-quarters of an hour to an audience of between 2,500 and 3,000 persons. In that city Garret A. Hobart has an organ factory, and as the train drew into the station Mr. Bryan saw a big McKinley and Hobart flag floating from one of its windows. In his speech he referred to the organ industry of the town, but did not mention Mr. Hobart. His audience was very attentive and showed much enthusiasm. Among other things he said:

"Go out among the masses of the people and ask them what they understand this campaign to mean and they will tell you that they understand this to be a campaign in which the people are defending their homes and their firesides and fighting for posterity. If you would ask me what this campaign song ought to be this year, I would tell you that there is no better song to illustrate this campaign than that beautiful song "Home, Sweet Home." I have been struck with the intensity of feeling that is manifesed in this campaign. Some times we have people who are indifferent about the result of the campaign. It is not so this year. We find no lukewarm people anywhere. We find those who are against us and who will contribute liberally to the corruption fund, and we find those with us who have no money to corrupt the voters with. But they are out voting themselves this fall.

Mr. Bryan left Washington at 1:38 p. m. He was accorded warm greetings at Hackettstown, Waterloo, Port Morris, Dover, Morristown, Madison and Orange. While the reception given Mr. Bryan at Newark was not so wildly demonstrative as that he received there on his trip to the ratification meeting in New York, it was sufficiently enthusiastic to be flattering. Between 2,500 and 3,000 people were in the throng. Mr. Bryan spoke very briefly and said nothing new.

A mob of cheering, howling men surrounded Mr. Bryan at Hoboken when the train reached the Barclay street ferry there at 5:15 p. m., nearly an hour late. They pushed him along with wild vehemence and forced him to take a dash for a carriage in waiting. Several thousand people gathered around the carriage and cheered repeatedly. Mr. Bryan was introduced by Mayor Fagan and made a few remarks, after which a squad of police hustled Mr. Bryan to the ferry house. Here William P. St. John and ex-Congressman Clancy, of Brooklyn, met him, and with these and Joseph Daniels, of North Carolina, he crossed Barclay street. There was nobody waiting there, and the carriage was quickly driven to the Brooklyn bridge and on to Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 24.—William Jennings Bryan, the democratic candidate for president, delivered speeches, first, in the Academy of Music, next to an overflow meeting outside, and later addressed a large gathering of labor men in the upper part of the city. A solid mass of humanity packed the Academy of Music. It was an early crowd, and fully an hour before the beginning of the meeting the doors were closed and thousands turned away. The streets surrounding the Academy were blocked with a disappointed throng, who struggled and fought to gain admittance to see the democratic standard-bearer.

When Mr. Bryan entered a mighty cheer went up. The audience seemed to rise as one man. In an instant men and women were shouting with all the power of their lungs, and as nearly everybody was armed with a small American flag, these were waved in the air until the whole auditorium appeared to be a kaleidoscope of red, white and blue. Those who did not participate at first became infected with the enthusiasm and rose and cheered with their more emotional neighbors. It was a stirring scene. The demonstration lasted fully ten minutes. Mr. Bryan, when quiet had been restored, was introduced by Judge William Gaynor. He spoke at considerable length, his arguments on the silver question containing little that was new. He said among other things:

"Before addressing myself to the money question I desire to say something in regard to the planks of our platform which have been assailed by the enemy. I only speak of them because persons high in the republican party have called attention to them, and sought to twist them into a meaning never intended and to give them an interpretation which they will not bear."

Mr. Bryan then read the plank denouncing federal interference, and declared it as mild in tone when viewed by the side of the plank on the invincibility of state rights in the Lincoln platform of 1860. Continuing, Mr. Bryan said:

"Now, my friends, if our platform is wrong, I want these republicans to repudiate Abraham Lincoln. Because, if you take Abraham Lincoln from the republican party, you have taken from it its most sacred memory. Now let me call your attention to another thing they complain of. They say we criticise the supreme court." The speaker quoted the plank in the Chicago platform denouncing the supreme court for its decision against the income tax. Continuing, Mr. Bryan said:

"What criticism is there? I call attention to the fact that the court overruled the decisions of a hundred years. It is a fact. Haven't we a right to mention a fact? We declare that congress ought to use all the constitutional power that remains. Let them insist that having taken part we dare not use what they left. We demand that congress shall use such power as may come from a reversal by the court as it may hereafter be constituted. Has no court hereafter a right to reverse the decision of this court? If not, what right had this court to reverse the courts for 100 years before it? This court changes from time to time; judges die or resign, and new judges take their places. Is it not possible, my friends, that future judges may adhere to the precedents of a hundred years instead of adhering to a decision rendered by a majority of one and that one changed his mind in two months? Every time a lawyer goes into court and asks for a reversal of a decision of the court—and it is not an infrequent thing—every time a lawyer does it, he attacks the correctness of the decision which he desires to have reversed. Let me read to you what the republican platform said about decisions of the supreme court in 1860:

" 'We condemn the recent opening of the African slave trade under the cover of our national flag, aided by perversions of judicial power.'

"That is what that platform said; it declared that a decision of the court was a perversion of judicial power. There is no language in our platform that is as harsh on the supreme court as that republican platform.

"My friends, on these two questions where we are assailed by the republicans to-day we have not taken as emphatic a stand as the republican party took in the first platform upon which it elected a president of the United States. Let me read to you now what Abraham Lincoln said about the supreme court. This is from his inaugural address:

" 'I do not forget the position assumed by some that constitutional questions are to be decided by the supreme court; nor do I deny that such decisions must be binding in any case upon parties to the suit as to the object of that suit.'

The next paragraph was quoted and then Mr. Bryan said:

"Mr. Lincoln says that if it is meant to be asserted that the supreme court has a right to determine the policy of the people on great questions that they will have resigned our government into the hands of the supreme court. Our platform is not as harsh as the language of Abraham Lincoln.

"I quote these authorities, my friends, in order that you may all see how far-fetched is the criticism that is leveled against us. I quote these in order that you may see that the very men who used the criticisms against us must, in order to do so, abandon the republican platform upon which Lincoln was elected.

"Now, our opponents say that we are opposed to the enforcement of the law. I deny it. I stand as the candidate of the parties. I do not speak of myself as an individual, because the individual is lost in a campaign in the representative character of the candidate. But, my friends, I want to say to you that the fear that is expressed is not a fear that if elected that I will not enforce the law. I have said it before, and I say it again, that if by the suffrages of my countrymen I am placed in that position which is the highest position in the gift of the people of the world, every law shall be enforced against the great as well as against the small.

"They say that we are trying to destroy our institutions. We who now address you have been the peculiar objects of those imputations. We pause, therefore, for a moment to repeal them. We entertain no sentiments diverse to social order; we seek not to destroy, but to preserve in their purity the institutions of our country.

"My friends, we cannot have a free government unless the people are free to act. I repeat, my friends, that this government by the few, this government by assorted wealth, this government by corporations, is the most tyranical government that any people ever suffered under. When you know that I am opposed to a government by the few; when you know that I am opposed to a government by the great corporations, you will understand why they call me an anarchist."

DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN BOOK.

Contents of the Work Compleied by Benton McMillin.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Senator Jones, chairman of the national committee, and Senator Faulkner, chairman of the democratic congressional committee, called on Representative Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, about a month ago, to compile the material for the democratic campaign book of 1896. He accepted the task and has just finished the work A synopsis of its contents follows:

The book begins with the admonition of Jefferson in his first inaugural address, to bow to the will of the majority. It gives the platform recommended by the committee on resolutions of the Chicago convention, the speech of Mr. Bryan and the notification speeches and letters of acceptance. In the first chapter it lays down the fundamental principles of the democratic party as expounded by Thomas Jefferson, William Allen, of Ohio; Gov. Seymour, of New York, and William Jennings Bryan. It devotes 100 pages to the silver question and "the crime of 1873." Another chapter takes up Gov. McKinley's public record on the subject of silver, Chinese immigration, the force bill and his tariff law. Jefferson, Monroe and Cleveland are quoted on the Monroe doctrine. A chapter on the income tax gives Bryan's speech in the house on that subject; the report of the committee; Mr. Wike's speech; the dissenting opinions of the supreme court, and Senator Vest's review on the whole subject. Under the head of labor the book reproduces in full Mr. Bryan's speech Labor day in Chicago. It goes into the republican record on the subject of contract labor, and closes with a memorial by all the great labor organizations in favor of free silver.

There is another chapter entitled "The Business Men's Campaign." It quotes Mr. Bryan's definition of the business man and gives full statistics of the number of each occupation. The chapter on trusts treats of the trust laws passed by the democratic party. The chapter on the recent issue of United States bonds gives facts and figures. There is a chapter on pensions, one on public lands, one on "untaxing the rich," another on the record of the Fifty-fourth congress, and finally a chapter on the tariff. The book in print will make about 350 pages. The first edition consists of 10,000 copies.

DEMOCRATIC CLUBS.

Preparations for a Big Convention in St. Louis, October 3.

St. Louis, Sept. 24.—Extensive preparations are being made for the convention of the Association of Democratic Clubs, which meets here on October 3. The convention is expected to last two, and possibly three days, and among those who are expected to be present are Candidates Bryan and Sewall and ex-Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith. On the night of October 2, preceding the convention, St. Louis will witness the biggest outdoor demonstration of the campaign. All the visiting clubs, the city clubs and the silver clubs will be in line, and if Mr. Bryan and his associate on the national ticket reach here in time they will review the parade, in which between 30,000 and 50,000 men are expected to take part. The convention will be held in the Auditorium building.

Declines to Run.

Chicago, Sept. 24. — Joseph H. Schwerzgen, nominated by the middle-of-the-road populists as their candidate for state treasurer, has declined the nomination. In his letter of declination he says that he does not wish to be placed in the position of antagonizing Gov. Altgeld, whom he regards as the best friend the working people ever had in the governor's chair in this state. This is the second declination from the ticket, Henry D. Lloyd having recently withdrawn his name as candidate for lieutenant governor.

There was a clash at the primary on Saturday afternoon. After Hon. Reuben Conner had been unanimously chosen chairman and Col. J. C. Beyland, secretary, Dr. Gaines offered resolutions seconded by Mr. Casey, that the meeting would endorse the nomination of no one who had not been a pronounced free silver advocate prior to the Chicago Democratic Convention and that the delegates be instructed to cast their votes in accordance with this sentiment. Of course this was aimed at the candidate whom Theodore Hallam represented as floundering about in a heavy sea and a boat coming along that could rescue him yelled out at the top of his voice that he would come abroad if they would make him Captain. The meeting selected a full Berry delegation. It is but just to say, however, that a great many who will vote for Bryan did not go to the meeting on account of what the Enquirer said a few days ago about Berry having a clear field. There are more than 50 Democrats, who did not attend the primary on the strength of that announcement, who will not vote for Mr. Berry under any consideration. The republican fuglemen claim that Bryan will get only three Republican votes, but others who have also looked into the matter count over 20.

After the primary was over the Democrats went over to hear Dick Ernst speak. There were at least 3 silver men to 1 Republican in the hall but they listened very patiently till Richard was through with his little piece, and then sought their favorite resting places on the sidewalk, satisfied that no one had been seriously disturbed by what he had said.

According to previous notice, Mr. B. R. Smith and Miss Laura Larimer were married at the Methodist church, in Lawrenceburg, at 6 o'clock on the 23 inst. They had their house keeping preparations already made and are now to be found at the large brick dwelling of Freiberg & Workum, in whose employ Mr. Smith has been for a number of years. They have the best wishes of a wide circle of relatives and friends.

At a meeting for the selection of delegates to the district convention, J. W. Berkshire was chosen as chairman and Dr. J. M. Grant, secretary. Eight delegates were appointed and instructed for Col. Berry. There is but little excitement in regard to the race for Congress, as everybody has an eye to the election of a chief magistrate, which is, without [illegible] a turning point in the history of the country. There has certainly never been a campaign in which the people were so deeply interested, nor so much anxity felt as to the result.

will be renominated for Congress at Williamstown, to-day. Campbell, Kenton and Boone instructed for him in the county conventions Monday, which insures his nomination.

At the county convention held here last Monday to select delegates to the congressional convention to be held at Williamstown, to-day every voting precinct in the county was represented.

The convention was called to order by D E. Castleman, chairman of the county Democratic committee, who stated the object of the meeting. J. G. Furnish was elected chairman, and F. D. Laws, secretary.

J. M. Lassing offered, for adoption, an order of business, which carried a rider endorsing Col. Berry's course in Congress. B. L. Rice, Owen Watts and Dr. Crouch, while they said they were for Col. Berry, they opposed the sweeping endorsement and offered substitutes for the resolution, and during the progress of an animated discussion it dawned upon the body that it was not yet a regularly organized convention, and a committee on credentials was appointed, and soon reported.

It being ascertained who were entitled to seats in the convention, J. M. Lassing renewed his motion to adopt the proposed order of business and the fight was renewed with vigor by those who opposed endorsing Col. Berry while he was an advocate of the financial policy adhered to by President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle. The fight waxed warm, but the amendments were with drawn and the order of business was unanimously adopted A committee to select 20 delegates (each to have one half a vote) was appointed, and reported to the convention the names of 20 delegates to attend the convention at Williamstown to-day. What had been decidedly a breezy little convention then adjourned.

The resolutions adopted are as follows:

Resolved, that this meeting do business as follows:

1. That 20 delegates be selected to attend the convention to nominate a Democratic congressional candidate, to be held at Williamstown, Ky., on Sept. 30, 1896.

2. That the delegates selected be instructed to cast the entire vote of Boone county for the Hon. A. S. Berry for Congress, and Hon. Dave Haley for Sargent-at-Arms of the convention.

3. That the delegates be also instructed to vote as a unit on all matters pretaining to the matter of business throughout the entire convention.

4. That the delegates selected at this meeting, or as many of them as may attend the convention at Williamstown, shall have authority to cast the entire vote of this county.

5. That it is the sense of this meeting that the Democracy of Boone county heartily indorse the course of the Hon. A. S. Berry in the service rendered by him as Congressman of the Sixth District of Kentucky. That we recognize the brilliant and patriotic campaign of the Hon. W. J. Bryan and Sewall for president and vice-president and pledge our earnest and undivided efforts in their behalf.

L. E. Clore, who lives about one-half of a mile out on the Florence pike, was very badly hurt by a kick from a horse last Thursday morning. He went out to the pasture after his horses, and getting too close to the heels of one of the animals it kicked at him, striking him on the side of the head rather behind the ear. His father-in-law, Mr. O. P. Tanner, who happened to be but a short distance away, saw the accident and ran to where he lay apparently dead. As soon as assistance could be obtained the unfortunate man was carried home, and a messenger sent for Dr. Furnish, who was soon at the bed-side, rendering all the assistance possible. Mr. Clore layed unconcious until about noon, when he began to show some symptoms of improvement, but he is yet in a very critical condition.

Ennis Nixon, charged with killing his son James, had an examining trial before Judge Stephens, last Monday, and was discharged, the court holding that the killing was purely accidental.

Cure for Diphtheria.

Some seven years ago the Times printed a remedy for diphtheria patients, as used successfully by Dr. Fields, of England. By the use of this remedy, it was claimed that this physician "performed wonderful cures, while the patients of others were dropping on all sides." In this connection the files of the Times of same date show that a child of Mr. Pat McCullough, of Georgetown, had the disease, and its life was despared of, that this treatment was resorted to and the child was at once relieved and recovered.

As several deaths among children have resulted during the past week from the dread disease, the remedy is republished. It is simple and worth a trial. As to the treatment adopted by Dr. Fields, a correspondent said:

"All he took with him was powdered sulphur and a quill, and with these he cured every patient without exception He put a tablespoonful of flour of brimstone into a wineglass of water and stired it with his finger instead of a spoon, as the sulphur does not readily amalgamate with water. When the sulphur was well mixed he gave it as a gargle, and in ten minutes the patient was out of danger. Brimstone kills every species of fungus in man, beast and plant in a few minutes. Instead of spitting out the gargle, he recommended the swallowing of it.

"In extreme cases, in which he had been called in just in the nick of time, when the fungus was too nearly closed to allow the gargling, he blew the sulphur through a quill into the throat, and after the fungus had sunk to allow of it, then the gargling. He has never lost a patient from diphtheria, If a patient can not gargle, take a live coal, put it on a shovel, and sprinkle a spoonful or two of flour of brimstone at a time upon it; let the sufferer inhale it, holding the head over it, and the fungus will die. If plentifully used, the whole room may be filled almost to suffocation; the patient can walk about in it, inhaling the fumes, with the doors and windows shut. The mode of fumigating a room with sulphur has often cured most violent attacks of cold in the head, chest, &c., at any time, and it is recommended in cases of consumption and asthma."—Georgetown Times.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Noted Preacher Eulogizes a Precious But Humble Stone.

Hark to the Choirs in White When the Gates of Carbuncle Are Passed and the Weary Soul Sinks to Its Eternal Rest.

The subject of Talmage's sermon Sunday was, "Gates of Carbuncle," the text being, Isa., liv. 12, "And I will make thy windows of agates and thy gates of carbuncles."

Perhaps because a human disease of most painful and ofttimes fatal character is named after it, the church and the world have never done justice to that intense and all-suggestive precious stone, the carbuncle. The pearl that Christ picked up to illustrate his sermon, and the jasper and the sapphire and the amethyst which the apocalyptic vision masoned, into the wall of Heaven have had proper recognition, but this, in all the ages, is the first sermon on the carbuncle.

This precious stone is found in the East Indies, in color an immense scarlet, and held up between your eye and the sun it is a burning coal. The poet puts it into rhythm as he writes:

"Like to the burning coals whence comes its name, Among the Greeks as Anthrax known to fame."
